Senate Votes 19-44 Draft, Passes Bill By 79 to 2

Measure Now Goes To Conference Over House Provision For 21-Year Limit

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night voted to make all men between the ages of 19 and 44, inclusive, subject to military training and service and then passed the sweeping draft authorization by the overwhelming vote of 79 to 2.

Three separate attempts to exempt youths in the lower-age brackets failed to modify the Administration provision for creation of a potential draft army of eight million men.

Approved along with induction provisions were requirements for registration of all American manpower between the ages of 18 to 64, inclusive, but excluding 18-year-old registrants and men from 45 to 64, inclusive, from military service.

Still Faces Fight

The bill goes at once to a conference controversy with the House, which refused Wednesday to include in the vast draft pool any youths under 21, despite direct appeals by the President.

Senate conferees were expected to press for the Administration's full program, starting inductions at 19, but some House spokesmen were privately predicting a starting age of 20.

The Senate yesterday in debate and on all test votes divided sharply in defeating all compromise proposals. But once the Administration extensions were approved, only the two California Senators voted "No" on final passage.

They were Senator Sheridan Downey (Democrat), who charged in an attack that the bill meant training more soldiers "with broomsticks," and his veteran Republican colleague, Hiram Johnson.

Marshall Appeals

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, sent a last minute appeal to the Senate as the chamber neared a vote. Chairman Reynolds of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, read the letter which informed the Senate that "all our available manpower will be required in the defense of this country, either in uniform or industry."

Two unsuccessful efforts were made by Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, to exclude youths under 21 from draft training and service.

U. S. May Move Civilian Agencies

Federal agencies not directly connected with the war effort may be decentralized to make room for the expansion of war agencies, according to reports here. Decision on such moves is up to President Roosevelt under his wartime powers.

Agencies mentioned chiefly as likely to be moved from Washington were the Patent Office, the Railroad Retirement Board and the Federal Power Commission. In any event, it was seen as likely numerous private buildings would be requisitioned to meet the need for more Government office space.

Addresses Request For Colin P. Kelly 3d To Future President

Colin P. Kelly 3d, infant son of the Army aviator who gave his life to sink the Japanese battleship Haruna, has the indorsement of President Roosevelt for a West Point appointment in the year 1956.

In a letter addressed to "The President of the United States in 1956," Mr. Roosevelt yesterday made his unique request of a future Chief Executive "as a token of the Nation's appeciation of the heroic services" of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, jr.

The President said his recommendation of a West Point appointment for Capt. Kelly's son was made "as an act of faith in the destiny of our country," reaffirming his "full confidence that we shall achieve a glorious victory in the war we are waging to preserve our democratic way of life."

Colin P. Kelly 3d, who is 18 months old, and his widowed mother are now in Florida.

The original of Mr. Roosevelt's letter is expected to be placed in the National Archives Building, while copies may be filed with the War Department and the Military Academy at West Point.

Meanwhile, officers and enlisted men of the Army Air Forces were urged in a personal message from their chief, Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, to emulate the "fearless conduct and outstanding devotion to duty" of Capt. Kelly and other air heroes of the Far Eastern conflict.

"We must continue to fight with the odds against us," Gen. Arnold

British Radio Reports Nazis Fleeing Hastily From Finland

With the Red Army Northwest of Moscow, Dec. 18.—Adolf Hitler's badly beaten German army is now retreating westward in a desperate series of forced marches. The Russians are using everything they have and are routing Nazi unit after unit, retaking vast areas of territory.

White - helmeted infantry, armed with automatic rifles and dragging metal ammunition cases behind them on the snow, shuffling ski troops, cavalrymen on heavily furred horses, with rides strapped to their backs and brass-handled sabers rattling by their sides, tractor-drawn supply sleighs and powerful howitzers, long columns of tanks and caterpillar troop carriers, slogging past the wrecked debris of recent battles, are hurrying hard on the heels of the "invincible" Wehrmacht, finest fighting machine in Europe.

During the last 48 hours the armies of Generals Mashlenikoff and

British Shatter Axis Libyan Forces

By the United Press

Cairo, Dec. 18.—The Axis forces in Libya, including two German and one Italian tank divisions, have been smashed in a five-day battle and shattered remnants have fled 30 miles from the field of action, hotly pursued by British imperials following up their greatest victory of the war, it was announced today.

The imperials are now about 175 miles inside Libya and driving ahead at full speed through the last strip of Italy's African empire. They expected little more armored resistance and appear to be gaining momentum for a sweep to Tripoli.

[A New York Times dispatch said although the Germans undoubtedly will make a new stand and attempt to form a line, it is significant that

Seasonal Rains Make Quagmire Of Battleground; Penang Cut Off

By the United Press

Singapore, Dec. 18.—Reorganized and reinforced imperial jungle fighters manning a new defense line south of the Krian River were reported tonight to have stemmed a Japanese sweep down the northwest coast of Malaya which apparently bypassed the Penang Island base.

Military quarters here evinced relatively little concern over the enemy advance of some 100 miles on a 40-mile front, claiming that the Japanese lacked a knockout punch, which the British had, and were getting ready to deliver.

Aggressors and defenders were said to be floundering through swampland flooded by seasonal rains and the blowing up of dams, making the establishment of trenches or any fixed positions virtually impossible.

Penang Gravely Threatened

Penang, second only to Singapore in the peninsula's defense system, admittedly was under a grave threat after the Japanese had pushed through the Province of Wellesley, the mainland opposite the island, and reached the Krian River along the Kedah-Perak provincial border.

[An earlier dispatch to the Associated Press said the island Straits Settlement of Penang was cut off, with the mainland province Wellesley, from the rest of the peninsula and tacitly given up for lost as British armies fell back from one river to another, endeavoring to block the Japanese land drive on this fortress.

[Penang, an island base 15 miles long and 5 miles broad off the northwest coast of Malaya, is strategically important to the defense of north Malaya and is the terminus for eight cables. British for 156 years, it still was believed British tonight, but how long it could hold out was problematical. Singapore had heard nothing from the island for 24 hours and it was known the enemy was investing the adjacent mainland.

Withdraw from Muda River

[The British withdrawal was from the Muda River. It left all of the big Thailand border province of Kedah and the smaller coastal province Wellesley opposite Penang to the Japanese, and put the British line in the west of Malaya about 300 miles above Singapore.

[So far this line had not been attacked in strength, tonight's communique reporting "no enemy activity" in either the west or the east of Malaya, and little air action.]

Vichy's Consent Reported

U. S. Promised by Martinique To Maintain Its Neutrality

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

One thorn long in the side of this country was drawn yesterday when American and French authorities met on the French island of Martinique and reached an accord settling the neutral status of French possessions in this hemisphere.

The agreement, it was revealed officially here last night, will permit continued trade with these possessions. In return, it was promised that French nationals and French vessels there will take no action detrimental to the interests of the United States.

Thus, in peaceful conversations between representatives of two powers, a road to war was closed. Standing as they do across the eastern flank of the Caribbean, the islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe have been a constant threat to peace between the United States and France. And down to the southward, shouldering the hump of Brazil, lies French Guiana, flanking the line to Dakar, in Africa.

Of themselves, these three bits of land meant little. At the disposal of a nation under the heel of Nazi Germany, dedicated in theory to the new order in Europe, they were a constant threat to American security. They were the more a threat because something had to be done about them sooner or later; some action had to be taken to prevent their falling under domination of this nation's enemies.

That action has been taken by the agreement whose existence was made known yesterday. It was reached between Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne, American sailor-diplomat, and bearded Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner for French possessions in the Caribbean. Admiral Horne, dispatches from Fort de France, Martinique, indicated, took with him on a flying trip to the island personal assurances from President Roosevelt that the French possessions would not be attacked by this nation.

News of the agreement called up immediate speculation here on the part the Vichy government may have had in framing the agreement. It appeared, however, that it carried the approval, at least, of Marshal

American submarines, striking hard in Far Eastern waters, have sunk a Japanese transport and probably sent an enemy destroyer to the bottom.

Word of the Nation's initial submarine victory came in last night's Navy Department communique. It gave the first definite news of the undersea activity of Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic Fleet since the war's start.

No indication was given by the Navy as to whether the attacks were those mentioned two days ago by Admiral Hart. The Asiatic fleet commander then announced that American submarines had engaged in successful missions against Japanese ships.

The Navy's Statement

Last night's communique contained only the following announcement:

"Submarine actions against enemy forces in the Far East have resulted in the sinking of an enemy transport and the probable loss of one enemy destroyer."

Last week Hart disclosed that his submarines were at sea seeking the enemy and predicted that he might have "something to announce" when they reported.

For several days there was no further word of them, and then the Tokyo radio was heard warning Japanese ships to watch out for enemy subsurface craft. Some 20 United States submarines had "encircled" the island empire, the Japanese people were told.

Other Sectors Quiet

Last night's Navy communique, the first in some 60 hours, declared there were "no new developments" in the Atlantic, eastern Pacific or central Pacific.

North Dakotan Vows To Fight; Friends Hint At Special Election

The Senate Elections Committee yesterday decided 13 to 3 that William Langer is unfit to be a United States Senator, but last night there were signs that neither the committee nor the Senate, but the North Dakota electorate, may render the final verdict.

Langer promised a bitter fight on the Senate floor to upset the committee's decision, but declined to comment on reports that his friends in North Dakota already were taking steps to run him in a special election should the Senate vote to uphold the recommendation for ouster.

Hunt Pressed For Plane Lost With General

Dargue Believed on Way To Be Hawaii Air Chief; 2 D. C. Colonels Aboard

Army planes searched last night for a military transport plane feared lost somewhere north of San Francisco with ranking Army officers aboard who may have been on the way to reinforce Hawaiian defenses.

Maj. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue, commander of the First Air Force with headquarters at Mitchel Field, N. Y., was aboard the plane, which has been missing since late last Friday, Secretary Stimson disclosed.

Two ranking members of the War Department General Staff here—Col. Charles W. Bundy and Lieut. Col. George W. Ricker—and five others also were on the plane.

There were reports that Gen. Dargue had been en route to take command of the Hawaiian Air Force, in the shake-up announced Wednesday night.

No Official Confirmation

Although there was no official confirmation of this at the War Department, it was noted that Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons was on his way across the continent to take command of the Army forces in Hawaii at the same time as Gen. Dargue, and that the destination of the missing plane is a hopping-off place for Honolulu.

Thus spurred, Mr. K. labored long hours. But didn't reckon with a fractured arm. That injury has thrown him out of a job, endangered his chance to follow his wife's request and has made his family one of the neediest in Washington this Christmas season.

Contributions to The Post's Neediest Families Fund provide the only avenue by which the K. family and others of the neediest families can escape a bleak Christmas and start once more on the road to self-support.

As Christmas Day draws near, the situations of these families become more desperate, more critical.

Firm With $42,500 Capital Shared $34,000,000 War Jobs

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

From a starting capital of $42,500, Frank Cohen, of New York, organizer of the Empire Ordnance Co., acquired a 30 per cent interest in 34 million dollars worth of war contracts, the Senate Committee investigating defense expenditures learned yesterday.

Empire Ordnance is the sprawling munitions holding company that Charles O. West, who formerly was a high ranking member of the House and Undersecretary of the Interior, is suing for $687,000 in alleged back commissions.

Cohen admitted paying sums of money to West and carrying him for a few months on the payroll of an Empire Ordnance subsidiary, but flatly denied that the payments were to compensate West for the exercise of political influence in the concern's negotiation for contracts.

"We were just good-natured damn fools, that's all," Cohen shouted in a high tenor voice when asked by Chairman Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, why West was paid. "If he ever did anything for the company, I'd like to know what it was."

Testimony at the committee's public hearing showed that Cohen made payments to West totaling $11,000, but the New Yorker denied that he paid more than $4000 to the former legislator on his own account. Truman produced photostatic copies of checks signed by Cohen for the balance, but the witness asserted that this was charged to the retainer he

Japanese Bomb Panay Island In Philippines

30 Planes in Attack On Port of Iloilo; Damage Is Admitted

By Clark Lee

Manila (Friday), Dec. 19.—More than 30 Japanese planes have bombed the southern port of Iloilo on the central Philippine island of Panay in their first attack in that region, United States Army headquarters here announced today.

"Civilian casualties and property damage have been reported," said a communique.

The communique, issued by the headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, United States commander in the Philippines, shortly after 8 a. m. (8 p. m. Eastern Standard Time, Thursday):

"Iloilo City (on Panay Island) was bombed about 1:10 p. m. Thursday. More than 30 Japanese planes participated. Civilian casualties and property damage have been reported."

Press reports said the attack lasted for about 30 minutes.

Laura Ingalls Jailed in D. C., As Nazi Agent

FBI Accuses Flier Of Propagandizing In Pay of Reich

Laura Ingalls, diminutive aviatrix who thrilled America with her air exploits during the thirties, was lodged in the District Jail last night accused of being an unregistered German agent.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, who arrested the 38-year-old flier here on Wednesday, asserted that she had engaged in propaganda activities in this country under the direction and in the pay of the Nazi government.

She was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday afternoon, and her hearing postponed until December 26, after she requested an opportunity to consult an attorney. Unable to meet $7500 bond, she was taken to jail.

The formal complaint was violation of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

A doll-faced, blue-eyed brunette, with streaks of grey beginning to mark her once jet tresses, Miss Ingalls first piloted her way into political notoriety in 1939 when she flew her silver monoplane over the Capital and bombarded the city with peace pamphlets.

U. S. Flier Dives Plane Into Jap Troopship, Blowing It Up

Manila, Dec. 18.—Today's relative inaction from a military standpoint, brought opportunity for some notations upon a lengthening list of American heroes of the air—men whose cool courage is more than outmatching the suicide complex of the Japanese and is adding to the roll of 70 Japanese planes already officially announced destroyed.

Lieut. Samuel Merett, 26, of Atlanta, Ga., followed in death Capt. Colin Kelly, jr., who sank the Japanese battleship Haruna. Leading his squadron against Japanese naval transports trying to land troops on Luzon, Merett and his companions set two Japanese vessels aflame and then, in a last dive, Merett flew his plane squarely into the side of a third Japanese transport, blowing it up.

Lieut. J. D. Dale, 25, of Willoughby, Ohio, repeatedly attacking another group of Japanese transports, first silenced then smashed their antiaircraft guns and swept down upon the enemy landing barges to cause heavy casualties among the Japanese invaders. He came away unhurt.

Nimitz, War Chiefs Map New Strategy

Commander of Pacific Fleet Pledges Discharge Of 'Great Responsibility' to 'Utmost of Ability'

The 56-year-old Texan who has been given command of the Pacific Fleet left a long White House conference yesterday with a pledge that he would discharge "to the utmost" of his abilities his "very great responsibility."

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Bureau of Navigation chief who was named yesterday to succeed Admiral Husband E. Kimmel as commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, was one of seven leaders of the armed forces who attended the 90-minute discussion of war strategy with Mr. Roosevelt.

Leaving the executive office with Secretary of the Navy Knox, Nimitz told reporters:

"There is only one thing I can say. I am very sensible of the fact that I am being entrusted with a very great responsibility which I intend to discharge to the utmost of my ability."

Nimitz and Knox were the last of the "war cabinet" conferees to leave the White House. Other defense chiefs at the meeting were Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet; Secretary of War Stimson, Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces.

24 Hours After Shake-up

The White House conference came only 24 hours after the shake-up in the Pacific high command which put Nimitz in charge of the Pacific Fleet; Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, Commander of the Army Air Force Combat Command, at the head of all Army forces in Hawaii, and Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker in command of the Hawaiian air forces, under Gen. Emmons.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, now on duty with the Atlantic fleet, to succeed Nimitz as head of the Bureau of Navigation. Jacobs, who commanded a destroyer during the first World War, was quickly confirmed by the Senate. He is 56.

To take Gen. Tinker's place as commander of the Third Interceptor Command, Third Air Force, at Drew Field, Fla., the Army yesterday designated Col. Willis H. Hale, chief of staff of the Third Air Force.

Gen. Emmons' successor has not yet been named.

Secretary Knox said after yesterday's White House meeting that Nimitz is not now acting as commander in chief of the entire fleet and that that command has not yet been filled. Kimmel was commander in chief of the United States Fleet as well as commander of the Pacific Fleet.

The administration's action in revamping the Pacific command was commended yesterday by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who has been demanding a Congressional investigation of alleged Army and Navy negligence in advance of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7.

To Drop Probe Demand

Tobey said he would drop his demand for an investigation pending completion of the report on Pearl Harbor to be made by the President's official board of inquiry, which is headed by Associate Justice Roberts of the Supreme Court.

The five-man board held its second organization meeting yesterday and is expected to leave soon for Hawaii.

Portuguese Timor Occupied by Allies

Dutch, Australians Take Possession; Netherlands Fliers Blast Jap Cruiser

By John Raleigh
United Press Staff Writer

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 18—Aroused by a Japanese air attack on an undefended island village, Dutch air, land and sea forces struck back fiercely today, blasting Japanese warships and transports off Northwest Borneo, beating off an air attack on Dutch New Guinea, and joining Australian troops in the occupation of Portuguese Timor.

A communique reported 40 persons were killed when Japanese airplanes made ruthless bombing and machine-gun attacks on the village of Tarempa in the Anambas Islands, northeast of Singapore. The village was bombed Sunday, then the planes returned Monday and machine-gunned the villagers from a height of 300 feet. The Aneta News Agency said in addition to the 40 killed, 100 were seriously wounded, some being mowed down while they worked in the rice fields.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Batavia said Netherlands and Australian troops were in full occupation of Timor, moving into the Portuguese half of the mountainous island and forestalling Japanese seizure of a potential assault base 450 miles from Darwin and at the tip of the Dutch East Indies.

[The occupation, practically bloodless, was made over the "objection" of the Portuguese, who had only a tiny defense force on the island.

[A communique from the Netherlands government said:

["In view of the Japanese submarine activity off Portuguese Timor, it has become an unavoidable necessity to take steps. Portuguese sovereignty remains intact and it has been made clear to the Portuguese government that the troops are to be withdrawn as soon as the threat from the enemy is removed.]

[A British Embassy spokesman in Lisbon yesterday afternoon said Dutch forces already have evacuated Timor, restoring Portuguese sovereignty there.]

Meanwhile, it was revealed a Dutch plane bombed and set fire to a Japanese cruiser off Miri, Sarawak, in the northwest part of Borneo. It had been reported earlier that the warship bombed was a destroyer. The new communique said:

"From a height of 15,000 feet the flying boat dropped bombs, each of approximately 400 pounds, on the Japanese cruiser which was moving at high speed. Two bombs hit their mark and exploided on the cruiser approximately one-quarter distance from the stern . . . The enemy ship lost speed and simultaneously burst into flames.

"Bombers of the royal Netherlands army also attacked the enemy landing fleet (at Miri) and near misses were observed. All our aircraft returned safely."

Commenting on Japanese seizure of beachheads at Miri, observers said that British destruction of oil wells and refineries in the area removed the sole military advantage that Japan might have gained—and that the invasion may turn out to be a boomerang.

"A land effort with Miri as the base is out of the question," one responsible informant asserted. "Almost impenetrable jungle surrounds Miri for hundreds of miles."

slightly east of Manila, a stop on an airplane running south to Davao, southern Philippine port.

It is an important port having a large trade with Manila and other island ports as well as with foreign ports. Many industries also are centered there. Chief exports are sugar, tobacco, rice, coffee, hides and hemp.

Iloilo is the capital of the province of the same name, and has a population of 20,000.

The announcement followed induction of the entire army of the Philippines into the United States Army of the Far East and other moves consolidating and strengthening the American forces.

The Japanese again apparently avoided any effort to extend their small and precarious footholds on the main Philippine island of Luzon.

At one of these doubtful beachheads—about Vigan in the northwest of the island some 200 miles above Manila—it was disclosed, in fact, that the Japanese had been thrown back many miles in fighting on Monday afternoon. Nothing was said as to the subsequent developments in that area, where the Japanese also had lost at least 26 planes.

The fighting was south of Vigan itself. (This suggested that a Japanese attempt to push toward Manila had been smashed before it got started.)

During Thursday the assailant attempted no blow save from the air, it was announced in the afternoon communique from the headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, and this was a somewhat timorous raid on Nichols and Zablan fields in which there was only light damage. No casualties were reported.

The raiders, 12 in all as counted from the ground, flew so high in marked deference to American anti-aircraft fire that it was difficult to see them.

The consolidation of American and Philippine fighting forces was thus announced by Gen. MacArthur.

"In order to amalgamate all defense forces and effectuate maximum cohesion and coordination, the entire Philippine army is being inducted into the United States Army forces in the Far East, Chief of Staff Gen. Basilio J. Valdes of the Philippine army will continue to administer his echelon."

Civilian as well as military solidarity was stressed by President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines in a radio address to the country.

Asking the people to be calm and confident, to carry on their duties without interruption and to ignore rumors and enemy propaganda, the President proclaimed his utter confidence in the Government and people of the United States— a Government and people that "have carried out all promises they made and were carrying out the independence pledge when Japan attacked."

"We are resisting effectively on all fronts and the situation is under control," he went on. "Filipinos and Americans are fighting together with signal valor under the command of Lieut. Gen. McArthur.

The President's Day

By International News Service

READY: White House veterans got a distinct shock, a taste of things to come, perhaps, in some distant nights when Mr. Roosevelt's Spokesman Steve Early held a "blackout" conference. Summoned to Early's office, veteran correspondents were let into a pitch-black room, lit but feebly by the thin blue beam of a blackout flashlight on Early's desk. Invisible in the blackout-curtained room, Aide Early held his daily morning pow-wow of Presidential news of the day. All White House windows have been equipped with black satin drapes.

SLIP: Catching up with the dispatches that drifted in overnight, cleaning up some urgent memos and correspondence at breakfast, the President then went over to his office for a very long day behind his desk. Attorney General Biddle slipped in around 11 a. m., talked over new developments re alien agents.

TO THE FRONT: OPM's Bill Knudsen marched briskly in to "just report" to the President, escaped quickly and quietly without answering any questions. Waiting his turn while Knudsen "reported" was recently returned United States Ambassador to Switzerland Leland Harrison. As Switzerland is the neutral country acting as diplomatic clearing house for American and Allies, as well as the Axis, Mr. Harrison had much to ask and answer.

RECORD BACK-BREAKER: Last throes of the gigantic multi-billion dollar victory program budget thrashed on the President's desk at lunchtime, under the watchful eye of Mr. Roosevelt and furrow-foreheaded Budgeter Harold D. Smith.

HIGH COMMAND: At 3:.15 Secretaries Stimson and Knox led in the parade of top officers—Gen. George C. Marshall, Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, of the Army Air Corps; Admiral Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Atlantic Fleet Commander in Chief Admiral Ernest J. King, sole conferee in civilian clothes, and new Pacific Fleet Commander Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. An hour later the Army high command departed with tightly sealed secrets and 15 minutes later the Navy exited.

WAR-POWERS: Shortly after the give-'em-the-works boys cleared the front gates, Hatton Sumners, House Judiciary Committee chairman, walked quickly in. Later Senator Frederick Van Nuys made it a trio. At 5:40, the President signed the war powers bill, talked briefly with the Congressmen and went back to hacking away at the mound of memos and reports in the big wire basket on his desk.

Hongkong Isle Half Occupied, Japs Say

Landings Made by Army and Navy Forces, Domei News Agency Reports

Tokyo (Friday) Dec. 19.—(Official Radio Recorded by (AP).—The Domei news agency reported that virtually half of the British island of Hongkong was under Japanese control by 11 a. m. today.

An imperial headquarters announcement said the Japanese Army and Navy had landed on the besieged island after more than a week of cannonading. Domei said the landings were made at three points at 10 p. m. Thursday (8 a. m., E. S. T.).

Within two and a half hours, the agency said, Jardines Hill, a lookout post 1420 feet high, near the center of the island, had been occupied. It said numerous defense positions had been captured and their guns silenced.

Local resistance is continuing, with Japanese guns and planes "furiously battering the enemy," Domei added.

By International News Service

Hongkong, Dec. 18.—Rejecting a third invitation to surrender, defenders of Hongkong continued to hammer away with heavy artillery at Japanese gun emplacements on the mainland at Kowloon tonight, and reported they had put some of the besieging batteries out of commission.

"Despite continued artillery and mortar fire," a communique stated, "we rejected a third peace offer to evident Japanese surprise."

The Chinese News Agency, heard via the Chunking radio, estimated the number of Japanese troops in the Canton-Kowloon area at 45,000. A Chinese military spokesman was quoted as saying this concentration prevented any immediate Chinese attack on the rear of the Hongkong attackers.

By the Associated Press

Chungking, China, Dec. 18.—Chinese troops were reported tonight to have captured Japanese outposts on the Canton-Kowloon railway in their effort to relieve Japanese pressure on Hongkong.

Tokyo, Dec. 19. (Friday). (By official Japanese wireless). (INS)—Three enemy submarines were sunk in a battle Wednesday, the Japanese high command claimed today, admitting the loss of a Jap destroyer in the action.

Red Sometimes Better, Says Hitler's Paper

Bern, Switzerland, (Friday) Dec. 19 (AP).—Frank acknowledgement that Russian soldiers "equal us and are sometimes even better," came today from the military expert of Adolf Hitler's own Voelkischer Beobachter.

The expert, a Lieut. Col. Soldan, was quoted by the Swiss paper Neue Zuricher Zeitung as writing that, "new troops brought in from Siberia and other regions where they are accustomed to the cold are put into fighting where (Russian) troops have been ten times beaten and threaten to nullify those defeats."

The Zurich paper said Soldan admitted everyone had underestimated the Russian armament.

defeat of a Japanese bomber by an American-made Catalina flying boat 250 miles off Saigon, Indo-China. The Jap twin-engined ship turned tail with smoke pouring from its engine after 15 minutes. The R. A. F. pilot of the Catalina said he had no difficulty in outmaneuvering the enemy ship.

A communique tended to bear out the assumption that the Japanese advance down the northwest coast had by-passed Penang. Reports of fighting Wednesday in the Grik area 50 miles east of Penang suggested that the invaders were trying to broaden the front, though they faced most difficult communications between Grik and Baling, 30 miles to the north.

The imperial communications, on the other hand, improved as the fighting area shifted from the rice fields to the south, where the British should be able to dig in. British support from the rear is increasing.

Still heavier rains were due at any time, and should add to the problems of the Japanese.

The expected torrents are likely to cause landslides, which are not unusual under such circumstances. The rainy season normally extends well into February, flooding vast areas of Malaya and even impeding operations at Singapore.

Numerically the Japanese retain a superiority in north Malaya, with evidence that reinforcements continue to arrive, but the initial advantage arising from the surprise nature of the attack fast is evaporating.

A communique was non-commital regarding the struggle in and below Kedah province, but suggested that the Japanese were throwing everything into an effort to crush fierce resistance and strike at Penang by way of Butterworth, the mainland city opposite the island.

Gov. Sir Shenton Thomas, commander in chief at Singapore, admitted the direct threat to Penang as upcountry reports said the Japanese advance was confined to a 40-mile strip from Alor Star southward.

In some sections of Kedah Japanese troops were reported to have drowned in the flooded padifields when the destruction of dams and canal walls, together with themonsoon downpours, turned the region into a quagmire.

Aviatrix Held As Nazi Agent

LAURA INGALLS

tional Committee to Keep United States Out of War. Last summer she came here with a stay-out-of-war plea in behalf of a West Coast group, the "Mothers of Los Angeles."

Three years before her leaflet-dropping flight over the White House and downtown Washington, she had released pigeons carrying a peace plea addressed to President Roosevelt. A short time ago, during Congressional revision of the Neutrality Act, she was barred from a Senate Foreign Relations Committee room during consideration of the proposal.

She has been a frequent speaker before America First meetings here and in the Middle West.

When brought before Turnage, Miss Ingalls told the Commissioner that she had been arrested and held in a small room without sleep by G-men. She claimed that they had refused to answer her questions, had held her incommunicado and had taken away her money.

When asked how she wished to plead, she questioned Turnage closely and then made an unsuccessful phone call to New York in an attempt to get a lawyer.

"I was a free agent," she told the commissioner. "I followed no orders other than my own. I was doing something which I knew might be questioned if it were found out. I undertook something that I thought I could handle alone and I guess I overreached myself."

She asked if being an agent meant "taking an oath and swearing allegiance, which I never did."

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, said that the arrest climaxed several months of investigation of Miss Ingalls' activities during which she "received a specified salary from an agent of the German Reich for her efforts in spreading the propaganda which they furnished her," and that she frequently visited Washington to contact Nazi representatives.

During yesterday's hearing she made a reference to a "private investigation," which she said she had been making. An official said that she was referring to "counter-espionage," and that she had indicated in a statement that she was seeking information for the United States Government in her contact with German representatives.

In the middle thirties, the little "thrill flier" became the first woman pilot to make a nonstop East-West hop across the continent, as well as the first woman to fly over the Andes solo. In 1935 she was awarded the Harman trophy for feminine fliers.

At the District Jail, she told authorities that she was born in New York City, and listed her residence as Burbank, Calif. Dressed in a chic green-and-buff sports ensemble, she hid her face from news photographers behind the brim of a floppy brown hat and th fur collar of her coat.

Wendell Berge, head of the Department of Justice criminal division, said that he was unable to release details of the charges against her since the Government's case had not yet been presented and investigation was still going on. He said that Miss Ingalls had been under FBI scrutiny "for some time," and the date of her activities was listed as "on or about" August 1, 1941.

Full charges against her will probably be given the first of next week, he said.

Princess Stephanie Faces Internment

Philadelphia, Dec. 18 (AP).—Princess Stephanie Honenlohe, reputed friend of high Nazis, went before the Eastern Pennsylvania Alien Enemy Board today for a secret hearing to determine whether she will be interned for the duration of the war.

The red-haired noblewoman, arrested by the FBI Monday in Wilmington, Del., was brought here from the United States Immigration Detention Station at Gloucester, N. J. Nine other Axis nationals seized in the FBI roundup also appeared.

The board, after hearing Government and defense evidence, will make recommendations to Attorney General Francis Biddle, who is empowered to release, parole or intern aliens.

Germans Battle For Middle Sea

Planes From Russian Front Hurled Into Fight for African Supply Route

Copyright by New York Tribune, 1941.

London, Dec. 18.—The Nazis appear to be taking the initiative in bomber attacks on the British Mediterranean fleet, rushing into application on a new front the experience gained by the Japanese in their successful attacks on the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, according to observers here.

A drive to break British naval control of the Mediterranean seaway as a necessary prelude to the dispatch of Axis troops and equipment to North Africa may be under way. Some 500 German planes have been removed from the Russian front in recent weeks, it is reported here, and those may have been moved down to the Mediterranean.

The Germans apparently have not been so successful as the Soviets in finding a lubricant for airplane engine motors operating in sub zero temperatures, and also for that reason have called a large number of planes from active service in Russia. There have been no indications yet that the Germans are strengthening their air force in occupied France or Holland. Today the German high command communique, significantly perhaps, reported bomber attacks in the waters of Cyrenaica on a "major British naval formation" which registered, it was claimed, two hits with aerial torpedoes on a heavy cruiser.

According to information available here German planes are being rushed to new airdromes in southern Italy. Among the Luftwaffe squadrons sent there are squadrons of the Heinkel Hae bomber, Germany's latest type torpedo plane. From the toe of Italy, from Sicily, Crete and Greece, the planes can cover nearly the whole Mediterranean. With bases in French North Africa, all the waters of the Mediterranean would come within the planes' range.

Nazi Warships Blasted at Brest

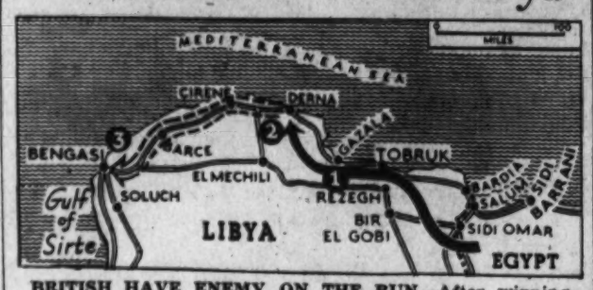
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Dec. 18.—Hundreds of the R. A. F.'s biggest bombers and long-range fighters today staged one of the heaviest daylight raids of the war on Brest, scoring direct hits on the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen.

Rumors that repairs on the two battleships were almost complete, and that they were preparing to slip out to sea, were intensified by the violence of the attack which followed raids last night on the same objective.

Gigantic four-engined Stirling and Halifax bombers and twin-engined Manchesters carried out the daring attack.

Axis Armies Retreat in Libya



BRITISH HAVE ENEMY ON THE RUN—After winning five-day battle near Gazala (1), British-manned American tank columns (black arrow) were driving toward Derna (2) in pursuit of shattered Axis armies (broken arrow), fleeing toward Bengasi (3)

U. S.-Made Tanks Harry Foe

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 18.—The shattered German and Italian armies in eastern Cirenaica were officially reported tonight in full retreat, pursued by British-manned American tanks and blasted by R. A. F. bombers.

"The enemy's front has everywhere been broken," the bulletin said.

The R. A. F. reported smashing blows against Axis tanks and troop transports fleeing westward from Derna itself on the long road to Bengasi in an apparent effort to escape British encirclement.

A fierce five-day fight west and southwest of Gazala preceded the Nazi rout, the British said.

Thus far in the month-old offensive against the armies of Von Rommel and his Italian helpers the British were reported to have taken almost 10,000 prisoners.

British Shatter Axis' Libya Army

for the first time in the war, the German army is on full retreat on all fronts. The German withdrawal from Russia may bring added difficulties to this front since considerable numbers of German warplanes may be sent south as their usefulness in Russia diminishes.

[As the Germans retreated yesterday British armored units fell on their flank and rear, destroying several columns of trucks and four other German tanks. This new decimation of Axis tank forces means that nearly 150 enemy tanks have been either destroyed, knocked out or captured since the last big tank battle.]

A communique had reported a victory in a decisive battle on a line between Tmimi and Mekili, in the foothills of the Jebel El-Achdar Range, some 60 miles west of Tobruk. This evening details of the battle trickled in.

Panzer Units Destroyed

The German Twenty-first and Fifteenth Panzer Divisions under Gen. Rommel, and the Italian Ariete (Battering Ram) Armored Division, forming the mainstay of the Axis Libyan defenses, had accepted a main battle after weeks of skirmishes and maneuvers, and had been smashed with an Imperial Indian division now pursuing the beaten Axis troops as they fled headlong, abandoning much of their equipment.

The battle began on the afternoon of December 13. Rommel's tanks went into action first, supported by some of the heaviest artillery fire of the desert campaign. Then came the truck-borne German infantry shielded from above by formations of dive bombers. The infantry followed closely behind the tanks.

Tanks Stopped Dead

Under the withering fire of bearded Sikhs and stalwart Punjabs, the Germans fell by the hundreds. The imperial field gunners held their fire until the advancing German armored units were visible in their sights, then their guns roared and the tanks were stopped in their tracks.

German infantry was left with insufficient support. The Stukas were helpless, once the ground battle was joined at close quarters. On the first day, all German attacks were driven back.

Meanwhile British tanks and armored cars swept around to the Axis rear and engaged scattered tank units at close quarters. Other imperial tanks, their numbers also diminished by the weeks of heavy fighting, drove through the enemy communications lines, shooting up motorized columns and breaking gaps in the battle line for British truck-borne infantry to follow.

On the second and third days, the Germans increased the tempo of their attacks to a frenzy. They were mostly infantry assaults. The Imperials did not give an inch of ground. Toward the close of the third day, the Indians who had withstood the heaviest attacks without a breathing spell, suddenly heard the cry, "Forward."

That was the beginning of the end. The Germans were first taken aback, then demoralized, according to prisoners.

Retreating Nazis Pressed Hard by Reds

Vlasoff, coordinating on a broad front between Volokolamsk and Kalinin, have smashed seven enemy divisions, completing the occupation of Klin, Kalinin and five lesser towns.

This morning a swift mobile force, supported by veteran ski detachments which had been dispatched by Gen. Vlasoff to the environs of Volokolamsk, cut off the last Nazi road for retreat from that city, and its fall is expected shortly. The bulk of the German army already is hastily withdrawing far to the west.

In the dim winter skies the famous German air force is no longer to be seen.

Russian fighter patrols drone distantly across the still hillocks, and army cooperation biplanes hedgehop between the silver forests unmolested. And for long intervening periods the only sound one hears along this battlefront is the constant shuffle of infantry and horses, the snow-muffled whir of tractors, tanks and trucks, and the distant thud of artillery.

Hitler's Road Back

For two days now this correspondent has been following the Soviet army on its victorious march. Already 70 kilometers of reconquered ground has been traversed: ground strewn with abandoned guns, tanks and trucks, where rearguard stands were made, littered with munition cases, cartridge shells, machine guns, staff cars. There are the usual scars of war—burned houses and ruined churches, occasional corpses of men and horses, dragged from the road and dumped in the fields, stretching stiff limbs toward heaven. Here and there a mantle of new snow mask grim shapes whose nature can only be suspected.

The Russians are using everything from cavalry and horse-drawn sleighs to powerful new tractors from the Stalin factory to haul their attacking strength in this tremendous operation, in which 51 crack German divisions are being rapidly driven back from their main objective in the eastern war.

This correspondent here sets forth excerpts from his diary noted down in the last three days, giving some indication of the extent of the Nazi advance in this salient—which came within 40 kilometers of the capital—and the scope of the enemy retreat since Gen. Gregory Zhukoff's counteroffensive began to take full effect exactly two weeks ago:

"Driving down the Leningrad Chaussee through the city: Children are skiing in the parks while trucks of motorized infantry, tractorized troop carriers, tractors with trailers loaded with supplies, trucks loaded with field kitchens and trains of horse-drawn supply wagons bearing fodder and small arms ammunition advance under a brilliant sun at zero temperature . . .

"Armed military police halt and inspect all cars leaving the capital. On the outskirts tractors are hauling crippled trucks back to factories for repairs through snow-feathered woods of birch and evergreen . . . Heavy antiaircraft guns on trucks move toward the front . . . Bridges are guarded by sentries in long greatcoats, with fur hats . . . Infantrymen trudge along the highway bearing skis on their shoulders.

Where Bombers Struck

"Thirty kilometers from the starting point a battalion of infantrymen in high leather boots marches through villages wrecked by bombs and apparently by fire. This is the first extensive bomb damage seen. On both sides of the road are evergreen shoots inserted in the snow and closely spaced, with signs reading 'Opasno miny'—danger, mines . . . Three wrecked Soviet light tanks lie in a ditch by the road, remnants of the defensive battle . . . The sapper corps is busily restringing telephone wires.

"Forty-three kilometers from the start the car turns north by west past a wrecked heavy tank by the road . . . An autobus converted into an ambulance rumbles by a bomb hole half filled with snow . . .

"Hastily built bough lean-tos in the woods show how the Germans sought to keep warm . . . A heavy howitzer hauled by a tractor crunches through a badly bombed village, entirely wrecked save for one small peasant's house which suffered only cracked windowpanes.

Another 150-millimeter howitzer passes behind a tractor through a wood scarred by artillery fire . . . Peasants with belongings loaded on sleighs trudge back to their wrecked houses past an abandoned German 75 in a tree clump . . . Two army cooperation planes rattle past flying low over a wrecked railroad bridge.

"Here is the town of Solnechnogorsk—virtually undamaged; civilian squads are burying Russian soldiers in the central square; a cavalry squadron is riding past on thickly coated horses; there is a faint noise of artillery thudding beyond; it must be a heavy echo, since the Germans are now so far distant.

"An infantryman carrying a German Mauser machine pistol displays his trophy: 'It's very good. I've killed several already,' he says. . . .

"Lieut. Col. Mikhail Constantinovitch Boiko, of Kiev, from Gen. Vlasoff's general staff, a short-bearded Ukrainian, explains the situation . . . He says the German rearguard is often fighting stubbornly, but the bulk of enemy forces is in full retreat . . . On this salient Germans, Austrians and a few Finns were being used . . . German morale is definitely weakening, he says; their uniforms are not warm enough . . .

"In the beginning the Germans buried their dead; now they are retreating too fast; Russian civilian squadrons have been mobilized for the task . . ."

Pilot Makes Heroic Attack on Japs

to their grounded ships. Roaring aloft they got four Japanese planes. One of Moore's companions was hit and had to parachute out. Moore, his guns blazing, drove into the center of five Japanese planes which were attacking his falling comrade, shot down two and distracted the others. Both the parachutist and Moore landed safely.

Lieut. Carl Gies, 26, Salem, Oreg., aloft to protect his home field against anticipated attack, got radio notice that another American base 20 miles away was under assault. He dived into a group of 20 Japanese planes, forcing down one, and returned safely in his scarred ship.

Lieut. Randolph D. Peator, of Campti, La., the first American pilot to down a Japanese plane over the Philippines, got on the tail of a whole group of enemy ships, shot down one and joined in a general dogfight in which two more Japanese crashed. On the way home, his gasoline and ammunition running very low, he pursued another Japanese plane and observed the enemy fall in flames.

Lieut. Boyd Wagner, 25, Johnstown, Pa., one of the first American aces, jumped five Japanese planes in the air, downed two and then swooped down upon a Japanese field through heavy antiaircraft fire and set fire to five Japanese planes. His plane was damaged, but he returned safely to his base.

after his arrival there, the War Department also said that Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker would leave immediately from Drew Field, Fla., to succeed Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Martin. Martin commanded the Hawaiian air force and likewise figured in the shake-up resulting from the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Dargue Is Air Pioneer

Dargue's plane left Mitchel Field last Friday and was last heard from at 7:55 p. m. that day about 2 miles south of Palmdale, Calif. Bad weather has handicapped the search since then.

The missing general is one of the Army's air pioneers. He became a pilot in 1912, when serving in the Philippines in his first year out of West Point. He was a pilot in the Army's First Aero Squadron during the Mexican punitive campaign in 1916 and served overseas during part of the World War.

McCAFFERY RICKER

Gen. Dargue narrowly escaped death while leading a Pan American goodwill flight around South America in 1926. His plane collided with another in mid-air when he jumped and his parachute became entangled in the burning wreckage. It broke free in time to save him.

Col. Bundy, whose home is at 6669 Thirty-second Place Northwest, has served in the Coast Artillery since his appointment to the Army in 1912. A native of Somerville, Mass., the 51-year-old general staff officer was graduated from Middlebury College, Vt.; the Coast Artillery, Command and General Staff School (with distinction), the Army War College and the Naval War College.

Col. Ricker, 49, has been a general staff officer since 1937. A native of Newburyport, Mass., he was graduated from Bowdoin College, Me.; University of Wisconsin, Coast Artillery School, Command and General Staff School, Army War College and Air Corps Tactical School. His home is at 1401 Forty-fourth Street Northwest.

The commander of the missing plane is Maj. Hugh F. McCaffery, of Mitchel Field. Members of the crew are Capt. J. G. Leavitt, First Lieut. Homer C. Burns, Staff Sergt. Stephen Hoffman and Private (first class) Samuel J. Van Hamm, jr., all of March Field, Calif.

Washington Defense

D. C. to Have First Air-Raid Test Sunday

Washingtonians will be "tested" Sunday on their reactions to a practice air-raid alarm.

The city's first official test—described by defense authorities as a "blackout preparation"—will be staged sometime between 9 and 10 a. m.

Nearby Maryland counties of Montgomery and Prince Georges also will join in the practice alarm.

Exact time of the trial air raid will not be announced in advance, said Commissioner John Russell Young, U. S. defense coordinator. First warning will come from the temporary air-raid siren system and by radio.

Special instructions to citizens—no matter what they may be doing when the signal is soonded—were issued by Col. Lemuel Bolles, District defense director. He warned those who might be:

Walking—Take cover; don't clog the streets; don't just stand around—seek the nearest shelter and remain there until the "all clear".

At Home—Stay inside unless on official volunteer duty and assigned to emergency posts. Stay away from windows, keep doors closed and, above all, don't stand around on front porches and lawns to "see what is going on."

Riding in Private Cars—Pull to the curb. Get out and leave car parked. Seek shelter. Don't park double or obstruct cross street or alleys. "No parking" signs may be ignored for duration of the test.

Working—Keep on with normal routine. Don't rush outside. Keep windows closed.

The alarm will last no longer than 15 minutes, it was announced. All citizens were urged to conduct themselves as though an actual raid was in progress.

In addition to radio announcements that the "raid" is in progress, the usual siren warning will be given—with fire and police apparatus participating. The "alert" will be:

Five siren blasts of half-second intervals, repeated three consecutive times, a total of 15 blasts.

The "all clear"—Three long blasts of 1½ seconds each.

Official Order

As part of Sunday's practice air-raid alarm, members of the auxiliary police force who have been sworn in were instructed last night by Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly to report to their posts at 9 a. m. on the day of the test. Some 1200 men and women have taken the oath as emergency defense police officers.

During the rehearsal, all traffic will be stopped—private cars, street cars, buses and taxis. Special police details will enforce this regulation.

Citizens also were asked not to use their telephones unnecessarily during the "alert" period.

Col. Bolles instructed that both private citizens and those holding volunteer defense jobs not attempt to travel long distances to reach their homes or posts when the alarm comes.

"Unless you can reach your home, air raid post or other place of expected service, stay put. If you are an air raid warden from a different section of the city and happen to be at church, report to the air raid warden at the church."

Church Services to Continue

If church services happen to be going on when the "alert" is sounded, clergymen are instructed to continue as usual.

In line with efforts to provide the city with adequate air raid defenses, the Commissioners yesterday instructed Purchasing Officer Roland Brennan to determine ways and means of purchasing large quantities of burlap for use as sand bags.

The bags, it was reported, would be made and filled by inmates of the Lorton Reformatory as a prison industry when and if materials are available.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer also was asked to submit recommendations on methods of meeting the threatened shortage of sheet steel for automobile license plates. The city now has a sufficient supply for 1942 tags, but motorists may be issued but one plate for each car in 1943.

No Action Yet on Tire Sales

Defense authorities said last night they would take no action on requests from the Office of Price Administration to set up machinery for the distribution and allocation of automobile tires. They said nothing along this line would be done here until orders are received from the Office of Civilian Defense.

Commissioner Young yesterday setup a new unit in the local defense program to coordinate transportation facilities in an emergency. J. Alwyn Brown, national executive of the American Automobile Association, was named "chief of transportation" under the District Defense Council.

3 Newsmen Made Defense Police Captains

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, yesterday added three newspapermen to his "headquarters staff" of auxiliary policemen.

At ceremonies in his office the police chief administered the oath of office as captains to Theodore Crown, Evening Star; Manning Clagett, Times-Herald, and John Singerhoff, Washington Post.

Maj. Kelly told the men that in the event of an emergency in Washington they would be called upon to aid in the administration of civilian patrolmen. In the meantime they will assist Capt. John H. Fowler and Lieut. John Scott, police civilian police coordinators.

Economic Defense Board Changes Name

The Economic Defense Board yesterday changed its name to the Board of Economic Warfare, the first substitution of "war" for "defense" in the official names of Government agencies.

The board, headed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, has charge of export controls, and other economic activities connected with the war.

Steps to Organize R Street Area Taken

Steps to organize the north side of 1600 block R Street Northwest within Zone 6 of the Dupont Circle area were taken last night at a meeting held in the zone air raid warden post, 1713 Sixteenth Street Northwest.

Speakers included Zone Warden E. M. O'Sullivan, Assistant Zone Warden Francis Brooke, Area Warden F. Moran McConihe and Assistant Area Warden E. H. Threadgill. B. D. Snyder and L. V. Johnston were chosen as sector wardens and G. G. Fairall was named building warden for 1819 R Street.

Three sector meetings are scheduled for tonight to give residents there an opportunity to join the warden system. Meetings will be held at 1725 New Hampshire Avenue, for residents in 1600 and 1700 block New Hampshire Avenue; at 1616 Sixteenth Street, for residents of the west side of that block; at the Universalist Memorial Church, Sixteenth and S Streets, for residents of the west side Sixteenth Street, from S to U Street.

Businessmen Learn About War Gases

More than 200 bankers, bakers, butchers, filling station attendants and other business men attended a Police Department class in means of protecting chemical gases used in warfare last night. Ways to identify different kinds of gas and how to protect clothing and stock from contamination were discussed. Capt. John Fowler and Inspector Harvey G. Gallahan were the instructors.

Takoma Area Needs Volunteer Defense Aides

Volunteers for wardens, motor drivers, messengers, office workers, housing officers, and first aid workers in the Takoma Park Civilian Defense area are requested to report at Takoma Branch Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest, between 9 a. m. and 10 p. m. Calls in person are preferred, although the headquarters may be contacted temporarily by telephone on GEorgia 9608.

Cut in Unnecessary Display Lighting Urged

Washington business firms were urged yesterday to eliminate all unnecessary display lights at night as an air raid precaution by officials of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

The request was made to avoid the necessity of a "crack down" by Civilian Defense Director Lemuel Bolles which might ban all-night lighting. Twenty-two department and furniture stores already have agreed to do away entirely with outdoor Christmas lighting and electric signs entirely and to turn off show window lights at 9:30 p. m. on weekdays and 6 p. m. on Sundays.

Compliance with the "dim-out" request by 1900 District liquor stores was asked in a letter from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Last night, it was reported that western M Street, "White Way" of Georgetown, was considerably darker as a result.

Piney Branch Warden Calls Staff Meeting

J. H. Goldthorpe, deputy air raid warden for the Piney Branch area, last night called a meeting of his assistant wardens and the executive committee of the Piney Branch Citizens Association for Monday night at 8, in Roosevelt High School, to plan for a civilian defense mass meeting of the neighborhood.

Gen. Kutz Will Conduct Survey Of Air-Raid Shelter Problem

A survey of Washington's air raid shelter problem by Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner, was announced by the District government yesterday.

The official announcement stressed that the survey is "entirely of a planning nature for the purpose of having data ready for the prompt initiation of construction when such construction becomes advisable." There is not yet any plan for actually building shelters.

General Kutz's study will be to determine the locations and types of shelters which may be built later and the examination of existing structures which might be used as bomb refuges.

Personnel from the office of the municipal architect will be the nucleus of the staff of the shelter survey section. Technical advice will come from an executive committee including representatives of the American Institute of Architects, American Society of Civil Engineers, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Washington Building Congress and the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

The District will be divided into engineer districts, coinciding with the air raid warden areas. The survey in each of these districts will be carried on by an engineer, who will map existing shelter-buildings and places where new ones can be built "when the need becomes more apparent."

Dealing with the same problem, British authorities have perfected plans for shelters accommodating from 50 to 1200 people, as well as designs for small family units and safety "cages" inside houses.

The British research engineers have computed the strength of concrete, brick and other materials against various types of bombs. Their work will be made available to the American authorities when construction is begun.

G. U. Honors Memory of Ensign Wolf

The School of Foreign Service of Georgetown University yesterday morning honored the memory of Ensign Anderson Wolf, U. S. N., whose death at Pearl Harbor was the first recorded among alumni of the university in this war.

Students of the school, many of whom still recall Ensign Wolf, who graduated in 1939, attended the requiem mass in Dahlgren Chapel at which the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent, delivered a brief eulogy. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, and the Rev. Richard Law, S. J., prefect of discipline, were in the sanctuary during the mass.

Dr. Walsh asserted that he did not intend to deliver a eulogy "because the events and the circumstances speak for themselves," but he added:

"Today another name and another memory is added to the long list of Georgetown students who across 150 years have made the supreme sacrifice.

"Ensign George Wolf heads the list of new sons of Georgetown, who have followed their predecessors in the Wars of 1812, 1846, 1861, 1898 and 1917."

The service was held before a flag-draped catafalque symbolizing the bier of Ensign Wolf. Six candles burned around the catafalque, which was covered by an American flag and a crucifix. At the head of the bier was an ensign's uniform cap of the type used by naval officers in the tropics.

Dr. Walsh was celebrant of the mass and was assisted by Ensign John F. Parr, U. S. N. R., a member of the faculty, and Lieut. William Yarmis, of the university's ROTC unit.

Ensign Wolf, a native of Hollidaysburg, Pa., graduated from the Naval Academy last May after taking a special course. He attended Notre Dame University for one year before entering Georgetown.

Air Hero's Son Is Indorsed For West Point

declared, "until the inherent productive capacity of our country in airplanes, pilots, navigators, bombers and munitions becomes completely effective and we can build up an aerial fighting force capable of driving hostile airmen from the skies, hostile ships from the seas, to decisively defeat our enemies."

Gen. Arnold said Capt. Kelly and his bomber crew "traded their lives" for destruction of the Haruna "with utter disregard for murderous anti-aircraft fire and swarms of enemy fighters."

Capt. Kelly's name, he said, has been "emblazoned in the air forces hall of fame, alongside such heroes as Frank Luke, Eddie Rickenbacker and Kiffin Rockwell." He added that air combat units in Hawaii and the Philippines, after being attacked by a powerful combination of "cunning, efficient and unscrupulous allies," are now "seeking out and destroying enemy aircraft and naval vessels wherever they may be."

The text of President Roosevelt's letter follows:

To the President of the United States in 1956:

I am writing this letter as an act of faith in the destiny of our country. I desire to make a request which I make in full confidence that we shall achieve a glorious victory in the war we now are waging to preserve our democratic way of life.

My request is that you consider the merits of a young American youth of goodly heritage—Colin P. Kelly, III—for appointment as a Cadet in the United States Military Academy at West Point. I make this appeal in behalf of this youth as a token of the Nation's appreciation of the heroic services of his father who met death in line of duty at the very outset of the struggle which was thrust upon us by the perfidy of a professed friend.

In the conviction that the service and example of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, jr., will be long remembered, I asked for this consideration in behalf of Colin P. Kelly, III.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Luke and Rockwell Died in Battle

Now hardly more than names to the young men of this generation, Frank Luke, Eddie Rickenbacker and Kiffin Rockwell were flesh-and-blood heroes to the youth of 1918. Luke and Rockwell died in battle; Rickenbacker lives today, head of a commercial airline.

A pilot in the United States Air Service overseas, Lieut. Frank Luke earned for himself the title of "Balloon Buster" by his audacious attacks on enemy observation balloons, always protected by heavy concentrations of antiaircraft. In one spectacular day he shot down three German airplanes and two balloons, the biggest bag ever netted by an Allied air fighter. He was killed after a brief whirlwind career when he attempted to defend himself with a pistol after being shot down behind the German lines.

Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, a racing driver in the days before the World War, went to France as Gen. John J. Pershing's chauffeur. After gaining his wings in France, he went on to command the famous "Hat-in-the-Ring" pursuit squadron, bringing down 27 German aircraft. He is now vice president and general manager of Eastern Airlines.

Kiffin Y. Rockwell was a member of the Lafayette Escadrille, a squadron of Americans flying for France before the United States entered the World War, where he flew with Raoul Lufberry, James Norman Hall and Norman Prince. He was shot down in flames shortly after transferring to the United States Air Service late in 1918.

Grant Wrote Similar Letter For Namesake Grandson

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt reached back into the pages of history yesterday and adapted an idea from the life of Ulysses S. Grant in order to do homage to Colin P. Kelly, jr., American aviator who sank the Japanese battleship Haruna at the cost of his own life.

The incident recalled that Grant once wrote a similar letter in behalf of his grandson, and namesake, Ulysses S. Grant, then four years old.

Princess Julia Cantacuzene, Gen. Grant's granddaughter, tells about it in her memoirs. Col. Fred Grant, the general's son and like his father a veteran of the Civil War, was very anxious to have his boy go to West Point.

He went to his father a year before the latter's death and said:

"Father, I've never asked you to do me a favor, but I think if you will write it, I would like a letter from you to the then President of the United States, asking him to appoint my boy, a cadet."

The Civil War campaigner fell in with the idea. He wrote:

"To the President of the United States:

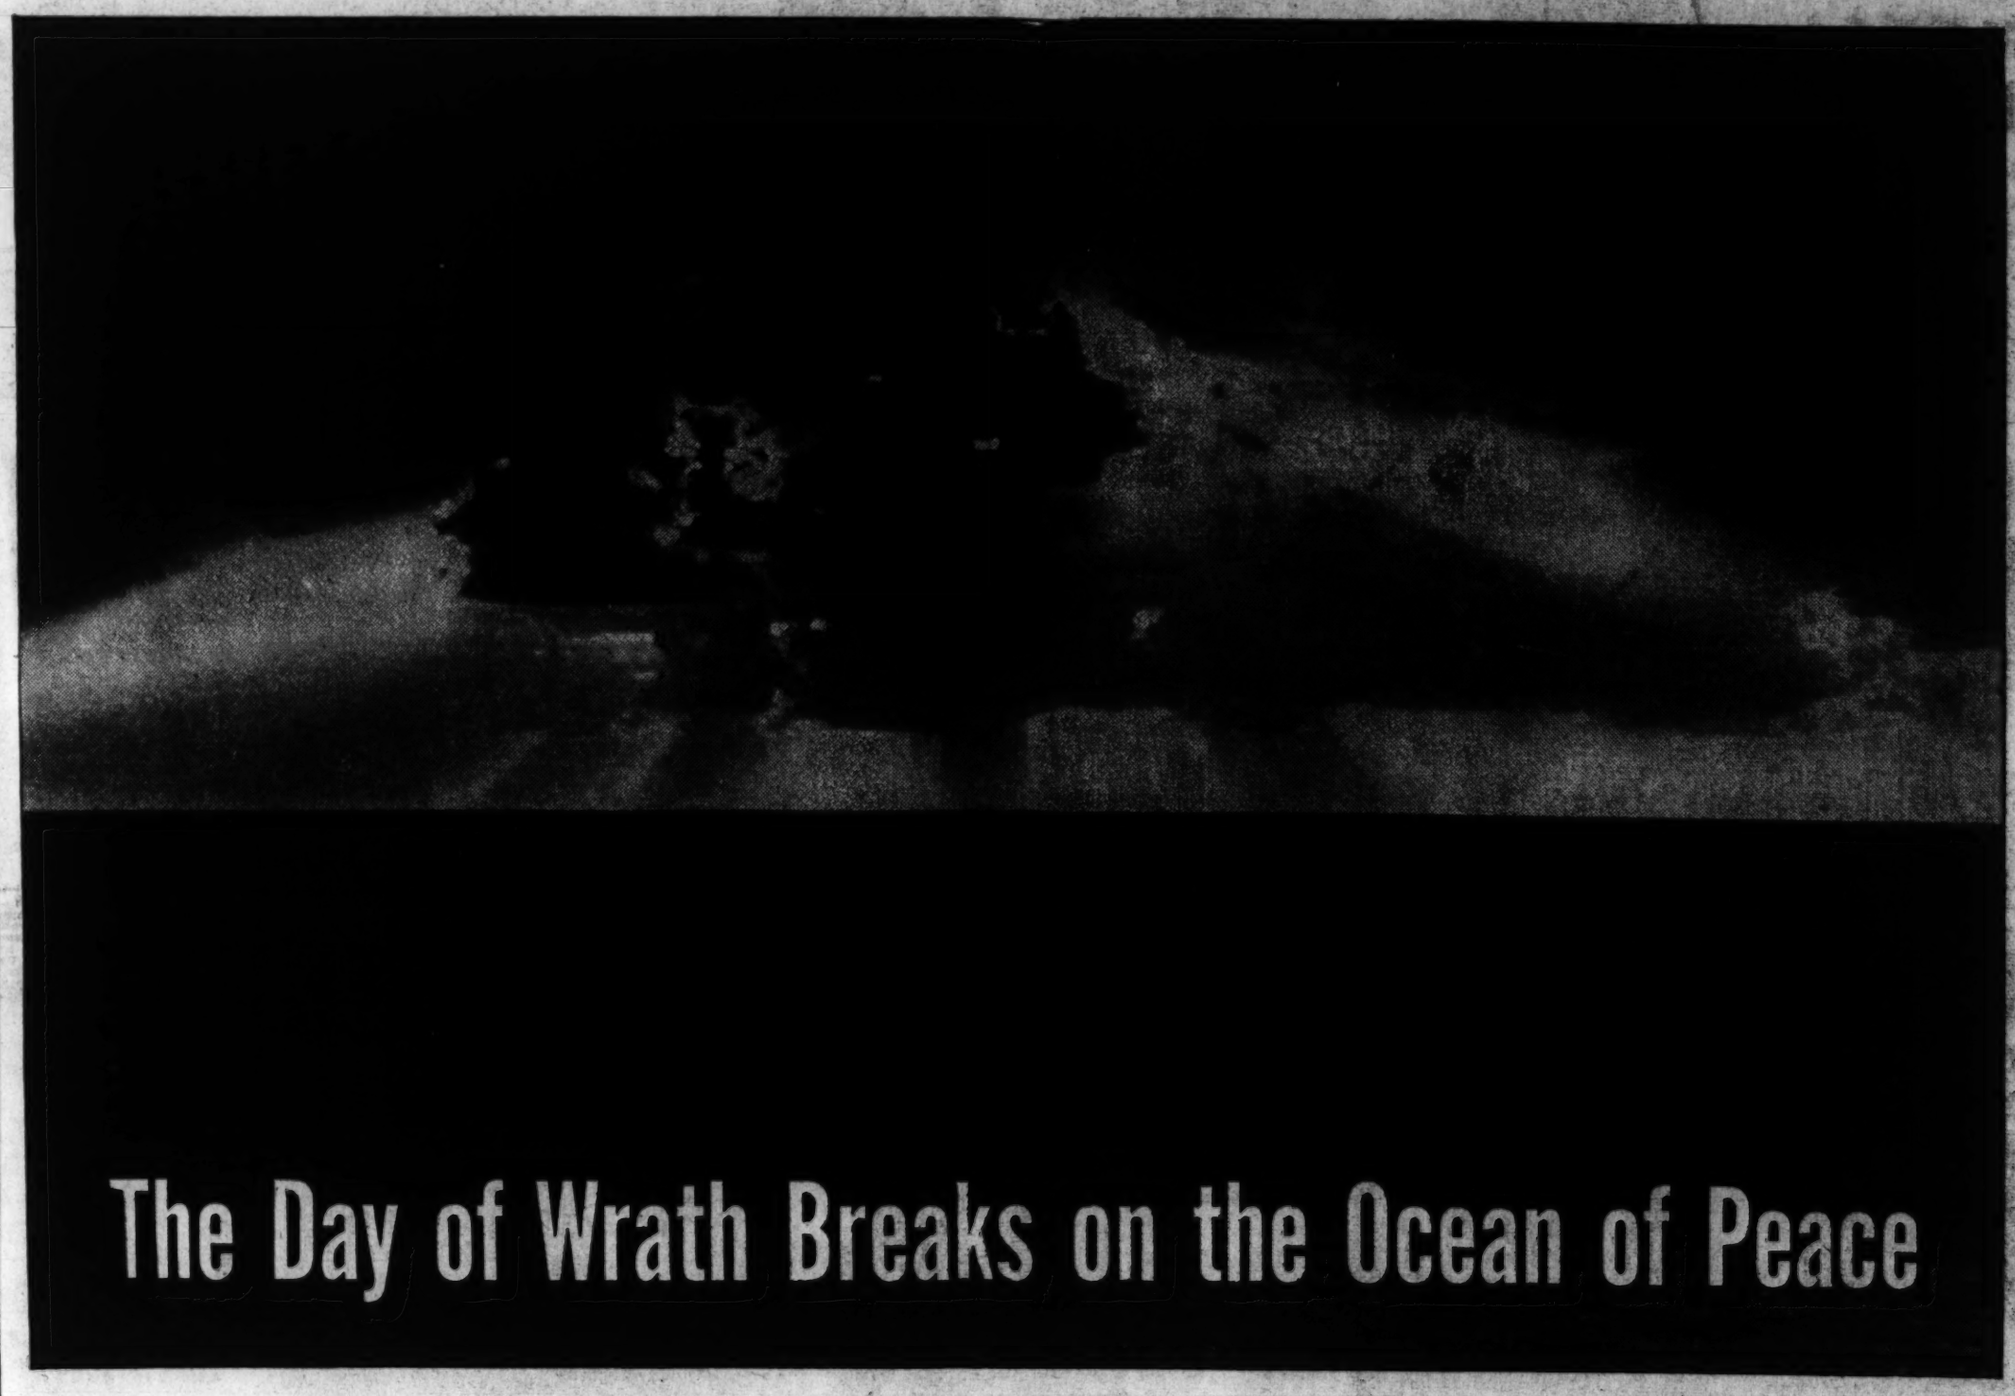
"May I ask you to favor the appointment of Ulysses Grant—the son of my son, Frederick Grant—as a cadet at West Point, upon his application? In doing so, you will gratify the wishes of U. S. Grant."

Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman came calling about that time and Col. Grant showed him the letter, suggesting he indorse it and saying: "My youngster will be very proud of such a paper some day." Sherman immediately did so.

Young Ulysses grew up to want to be a soldier and the double letter was sent to President McKinley, who made the appointment, and with a short note returned his grandfather's letter to the young cadet.

His sister, Princess Cantacuzene, proudly recorded that young Grant fulfilled the indorsement—he graduated from West Point among the first in his class.

Now a brigadier general, U. S. Grant 3d commands the Engineer Replacement Training Center, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.



The Day of Wrath Breaks on the Ocean of Peace

"This is the day of wrath. It is also the day of hope. Now at last the issue is inexorably joined: either our ideals as free men shall dominate in this century, or the pitiless bayonets of our enemies will."

—from feature editorial by Editor Henry R. Luce in this week's LIFE

MAGELLAN FOUND THE WATER calm and peaceful after his voyage down the rough Atlantic . . . and so he called this vastness "The Pacific."

On December 7th 1941 that name became the bitterest sort of irony.

Death struck from the sky—and we became a nation at war. The Pacific, Ocean of Peace, became an ocean of war.

To win the war, it is important, it is necessary, for the American people to know the truth . . . to know why, what, and how we are fighting . . . and to know, feel, comprehend, be a part of what is happening.

This week's new issue of LIFE presents America's War in a unique and comprehensive record—a document for history.

Because LIFE believes that this issue will challenge and strengthen and enlighten every American who reads it, more copies are being printed than of any previous issue in LIFE's history. But still you may not be able to buy a copy, you may have to borrow it—LIFE, the issue dated December 22, 1941.

And as it does this week, LIFE will continue to bring America the truth about the war and about the world. It will weave the history of the past, the happenings of the present, and the probabilities of the future into one comprehensive fabric which Americans can see and know and understand.

LIFE'S PICTURES

More war has passed before the camera of Carl Mydans than that of any other LIFE photographer. He photographed the war in Finland, the war in France, the war in China. And when the Japanese bombers began blasting the Philippines, Mydans was there. On one of the last Clippers out, he had sent LIFE his preliminary report on Philippine defenses which appears this week on pages 26-35. There is to be seen America's first heroic garrison of this war.

Senate Votes 19-44 Draft

store House provisions for starting inductions at 21, was defeated, 49 to 33.

The Connecticut Republican later proposed that the limit be drawn at 20, and this failed by the roll call vote of 47 to 34.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, moved to compromise by making 19 and 20-year-olds subject to service, but requiring that all available men in the older age brackets be called before the two lowest age groups were called into service. By the closer vote of 38 to 42, his amendment was rejected.

"I imperfectly willing to call boys to win this war if we need them," Connally told the Senate. "But people over 35 or 40 seem to know more about winning it than anybody else. I'm in favor of giving them the opportunity."

Marshall in his letter to Reynolds said that 18 was the traditional age for liability to military service in this country, and the War Department recommended 19 as a concession to Congressional reluctance. He said men of all ages were needed for "proper balance," drawing highly skilled technicians from the upper-age brackets and relying on young men for the "vitality, enthusiasm and physical stamina" needed for certain types of duty.

"The selection of men for military service from the very beginning of this war must be accomplished in a manner that will insure a continuous maximum effort in both military and industrial fields," Marshall wrote. "There is sufficient man power available to do this, but in order that it may be accomplished fairly and without waste, all men between the ages of 19 and 44 years should be notified now that they are liable for military service if and when needed."

Earlier at a press conference, Secretary of War Stimson had urged the importance of the 19 minimum age limit. He disclosed that the Army shortly will suspend further voluntary enlistments, and rely entirely on Selective Service for further manpower.

Before the final vote, the Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, liberalizing original draft act insurance provisions and extending for 120 days the period in which inducted men may apply for national service life insurance without medical examination. After that selectees could still apply for insurance, subject to payment of premiums and evidence of good health. The amendment grants automatic insurance benefits to families of men killed in line of duty since October 8 but who had not applied for up to $5000 insurance.

Jobless Widower Fights to Keep Family Intact

year that she was dying of cancer. So she began training her "three men," as she called her husband and two boys, Jerry and Bob, to cook, clean house and in general take care of themselves.

Before she died, she asked Mr. K. to keep the boys with him and send them to school. "They can finish their education in a few years," she pointed out.

Faithful to her request, Mr. K. enrolled his two sons in school in September. By working hard he has been able to keep them there.

Then the crushing blow came. Mr. K. suffered a fractured arm. Having no financial reserve, the family's situation quickly has become critical. Rent is due. There is no money to buy food.

As Christmas nears, Mr. K. is doubtful if he will longer be able to carry out his wife's request.

He could continue if some generous person would provide $75 to carry the family over until Mr. K. can resume work. His family is certified by Catholic Charities.

Family No. 69

She has no family to which she can turn. Pride keeps her from her friends. She has no savings. She is unemployed. To hold a job that will support her, she will need vocational training.

This is the story of Miss B., who is driven frantic by her unemployment.

Miss B. had a few months' training in nursing several years ago but this training was inadequate to keep her employed. She was willing and worked hard but a practical nurse must have a certain amount of specialized training and knowledge.

She is studying typing and shorthand now and will be able to continue if she is given help in her living expenses. When she completes the course, she will be able to support herself, the agency believes.

For $75 this woman can be given a new start in life—along the path of self-support. She is certified by the Family Service Association.

Each of the neediest families is recommended by one of five agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion Welfare Department, Bureau of Rehabilitation and Salvation Army.

These agencies, members of the Community Chest, will expend The Post's Fund without charge.

2. That during this same term Langer received $25,000 for Mexican land stock, asserted to be worthless, from an attorney who represented the Great Northern Railway in a successful effort to reduce the railroad's taxes.

3. That during retrial of Langer and associates on charges of conspiracy to collect percentages of the salaries of Federal relief workers, attempts were made to tamper with justice.

One of the firm's partners introduced him to West in a Washington hotel and said West "was helping him," Cohen declared.

"Was West called down to fix the ordnance department?" asked Truman.

"There was nothing to fix at the ordnance department," chilled Cohen who, later was to hear Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire, resurrect his financial relationships with insurance companies and a mails pruned New Jersey indictment.

"Then West did nothing for all the money you paid him?"

"Nothing except cause us all this trouble."

Corcoran Connection Studied

Cohen told the committee that he got in touch with Thomas G. Corcoran, shortly after he heard Corcoran was leaving the Government service. He said he had a municipal bond problem "that would involve for us a lot of money and I heard he was a very smart lawyer."

"Did you want him because he was close to the President of the United States?" Truman inquired.

"I don't know the President of the United States."

"Isn't it true that you organized your company on a shoestring and that you were desperately in need of orders and willing to hire anyone who could help, Corcoran, West or anybody with influence?" Truman asked. "I think that you used methods that were anything but ethical."

"It is perfectly natural that you should want to hire somebody," declared Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico. "Why don't you be frank? Why don't you tell the truth? I don't think, Mr. Cohen, that you employed Mr. West except for your advantage."

Under a contract with the Maritime Commission, Cohen revealed, Savannah Shipyards, a subsidiary of Empire Ordnance, stands to gross at least $1,320,000 for construction of a dozen 10,000-ton cargo ships. The vessels, he disclosed, will cost the Government approximately 18 million dollars.

Senator Wallgren (Democrat), of Washington, declared the cost "outrageous" and "ridiculously too high."

Aside from the Maritime Commission, Cohen declared, Empire Ordnance has no contracts with the Government but holds about 18 million dollars worth of orders from the British Purchasing Commission.

If Canal Is Bombed—Pacific War Focuses New Attention on Historic Straits of Magellan

Tortuous Channel Would Become Vital Sea-Artery

By Jack B. Beardwood
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States at war in both the Atlantic and Pacific, attention is focused sharply on the twisting, desolate, rock-hemmed Straits of Magellan on the southern tip of South America.

Down where the Western Hemisphere tapers off like a cornucopia, then slithers away in a rugged archipelago to Cape Horn, the 362-mile long straits serpentine their way through a channel that varies from 2 to 20 miles in width.

If anything happened to the Panama Canal, the straits would become one of the world's vital sea arteries.

It took Magellan a month to negotiate the hazardous straits on his voyage around the world in 1520. He was guided at night by the fires of Indians who thought his ships were birds or animals that could be lured ashore by flames. From these bonfires, Tierra Del Fuego (land of fire) largest island in the archipelago, got its name.

Graveyard of Ships

Today it takes modern ships 36 to 48 hours to pass through the tortuous straits. Along the passage, that sometimes takes ships within a stone's throw of land, lie the oxidyzing hulls of vessels that erred briefly while running the channel.

The straits are not protected by coast artillery, although Argentina is reported ready to reconsider a previous objection to Chile's offer for cooperative effort.

Only one man has tried to fortify the straits. Sixty years after they were discovered, Pedro Sarmiento de Camboa sought to protect them so Spain's enemies would be barred from entering the Pacific. Sarmiento didn't know about Cape Horn; its discovery ended the plan.

Few ships fight the swells and dangers of Capt Horn. Mariners prefer the straits because they are protected from storms that almost constantly buffet the continent's tip.

Near Magallanes, southernmost city of the world, located about midway in the straits, Chile has a small naval station. But Chile, in whose territory the straits lie, has a tiny navy.

However, 300 miles from Cape Virgenes and Cape Holy Ghost, the Atlantic entrance to the straits, lie the Falkland Islands, Great Britain's South Atlantic naval base. Argentina's major naval bases are 800 to 1000 miles to the north, as are Chile's.

The treachery of the straits is indicated by the names of landmarks along the 362-mile route—Fatal Bay, Fury Island, Last Wreck Point, Isolation Harbor.

The western half of the straits runs through deep narrow gorges where the granite walls, pock-marked with light blue glaciers that send thousands of cascades down the cliffs, sometimes rise almost vertically from what has been referred to as the salt water river. The eastern half is shallower and wider, skirted by the brown barren hills of Patagonia and the northern fringe of Tierra Del Fuego.

A few hours west of Magallanes, ships pass Cape Froward, southernmost part of the American continent, the spot were the foot of the Andes ranges pokes its toe into the frigid waters. Cape Horn is 200 miles to the south.

Vessels from the Pacific enter the straits through Smyth's Channel, a dangerous stretch of water, then head southwest almost until they reach Magallanes. From there on, the straits, roughly, run northwest.

Although the voyage through the Straits of Magellan is one of the most scenic in the world, vessels often go either direction from Magallanes without passing a single ship. Often there is not a sign of life—just the stern, silent peaks and the rumble of cascades tumbling into the gorge.

MAP shows distances ships have to travel from New York to San Francisco via the Panama Canal and the Straits of Magellan. Locations of major Chilean, Argentine and British naval bases are also shown

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer
By International News Service

One thing we found out in the last war is that you must give the American public the news without a strawberry on top.

There was a fellow in Washington in 1917 who dished up some artificial optimism. Well, they got rid of that fellow quicker than the price tag on a Christmas gift.

Right before war was declared this time I wrote, "The optimists cry themselves to sleep. The rest of us have insomnia."

But when war was declared I slept as peacefully as a sardine in oil. I said, "That's that and a couple of thats make a these."

Europe is going to find out one thing. We come to a slow boil but we stay hot a long, long time.

Both Dangerous

Bomb Blasts Send Out Air Waves

By the Associated Press

New York.—Remember, if bombs fall in your neighborhood, two successive air waves strike out from each explosion.

The first is a mass of air almost as thin as a plank, which hits harder, but has a very short range.

The second is more like a radio wave. It is made of long air waves, and travels, like radio around and behind buildings and for considerable distances.

You can't do much about the first wave, except be in a shelter or behind walls. But you can save yourself from the effects of the second one.

The existence of these waves, and what to do about the long one, have been determined by British scientists, who made their observations in the world's greatest bomb laboratory, London during the blitz. They are described by Prof. J. D. Bernal in the official science journal, Nature.

The British scientists' advice is to keep out of open doorways or other narrow openings where this wave can deliver its hurricane blast. Keep away from objects that can topple readily.

And try not to be frightened. The scientists investigated carefully cases of persons who fell dead at distances so great that the explosion could have been the cause only if there were some mysterious effect at work.

The first wave can and does strike human beings with crushing force. But only those quite close. This initial wave travels at speeds up to 4 miles a second for the first few feet, and reflect back or at an angle from walls and other solid objects. The back-slap frequently is traveling fast enough to add to the damage the outbound wave did.

The second, long-range wave starts as suction. Thus suction wave accounts for the frequency with which windows fall out into the street instead of inward.

There is a third kind of wave, a small earthquake, if a bomb explodes in the ground. After traveling 100 feet, the British found, these earth vibrations become true quake waves. They sometimes shake down insecure buildings.

Early Axis Drive to Cut Off Gibraltar Expected in Spanish-Controlled Tangier

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere in Europe.—Any American who visits Tangier will come away convinced that Nazi, Fascist and Falangist are all the same animal.

The German, Italian and Spanish regimes are working together with the Germans as the bosses, though the Spaniards may not be cooperating for the moment quite so openly as the Italians.

The Spanish occupation of Tangier, just west of the Strait of Gibraltar on the north African coast, is therefore significant to Americans at war. It was effected on the morning of June 14, 1940, when two regiments of Spanish Moroccan troops marched into the city, which had been administered as an international zone by the representatives of seven nations, of which Spain was one.

No notice was given to the other nations until the Spanish troops were on the spot. The commander of the Spanish troops then assured the representatives of the other nations and the minister of the United States, who never had been a party to the international agreement by which the city was administered, that the troops had come merely to protect the neutrality of the place.

Promise Is Soon Broken

In a letter to Maxwell Blake, then American Minister, who now is retired, he declared that all existing services would remain guaranteed and would continue to function normally. Within a month the international convention, of which Spain was a signatory, was torn to pieces Spain took over the actual administration of the territory in the usual Fascist manner.

A Spanish administrator was substituted for the Frenchman who had held the job. The supreme governing body of the city, or committee of control, consisting of the ministers of Great Britain, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Belgium and Holland, was abolished. The international gendarmerie also was abolished and its place was taken by a Spanish police force. The local legislative assembly, representing the different national colonies and the Moors, also was abolished. There is no room for representative assemblies under the Fascist set-up.

Everybody but Spaniards was thrown out of the government, including the retired British general who had kept the city's budget balanced. Since then no figures have been made public as to the city's finances.

The Spanish took over the customs and lifted general import duties from 12½ per cent ad valorem to 17½ per cent. The representative of the Sultan of Morocco, or Mendoub, who had charge of the native population of the city, was ousted from his palace and the place was turned over to the German government for a legation. No German representative had been permitted in Tangier for 20 years.

In place of the Sultan's representative, the Spanish installed a representative of the Caliph of Tetuan, in Spanish Morocco, to handle native affairs, this caliph being their particular pretender to the Sultan's powers.

International Blackmail Hinted

Almost immediately thereafter they started to install light artillery of German make along the Mediterranean coast in violation of their treaty agreement that Tangier should never be fortified. England, with her dominions, then stood alone against the Nazi world, fighting what is now called the Battle of Britain. She protested and then made a loan of two million pounds to the Franco government. Old American residents who were in Tangier at the time said they detected a light odor of international blackmail.

So far the United States has not recognized the Spanish occupation but still stands on its treaty rights as signed with the Sultan of Morocco.

This treaty, made in 1880, contains a unique clause which may be pertinent some day. It provides that as many Americans may come to Tangier as desire and stay as long as they please without any objection by the sultan. The few Americans and British with whom I talked seemed eager that many Americans take advantage of this treaty right before their arrival is made more difficult.

As for the Spanish withdrawal of light artillery from Tangier after receiving England's loan, it means very little. The Spaniards have been building gun emplacements at strategic positions all along their Moroccan coast in preparation for the reception of long-range guns when they are made available by the supreme command of the new European order. They have been reinforcing their army all along the borders of French Morocco.

The Spaniards have some good light artillery, very few machine guns, antiquated motor transport and very little petrol. The officers are monarchists or Fascists, but a good part of the soldiers are Communists. They hate the Franco regime. Some of the monarchists are secretly pro-British.

To Americans on the spot, the presence of this great force seems significant principally as a temporary tool in the German drive toward Latin-America. They are convinced that as Britain moves successfully westward along the North African coast, Germany will move into all this region to drive a wedge between the United States and British North Africa to close the Straits of Gibraltar and make the great naval base at the Rock untenable. Nazi preparation for just this move seems virtually complete.

Americans in Tangier are speculating principally on when it will happen. Most of them think it will be soon.

year that she was dying of cancer. So she began training her "three men," as she called her husband and two boys, Jerry and Bob, to cook, clean house and in general take care of themselves.

Before she died, she asked Mr. K. to keep the boys with him and send them to school. "They can finish their education in a few years," she pointed out.

Faithful to her request, Mr. K. enrolled his two sons in school in September. By working hard he has been able to keep them there.

Then the crushing blow came. Mr. K. suffered a fractured arm. Having no financial reserve, the family's situation quickly has become critical. Rent is due. There is no money to buy food.

As Christmas nears, Mr. K. is doubtful if he will longer be able to carry out his wife's request.

He could continue if some generous person would provide $75 to carry the family over until Mr. K. can resume work. His family is certified by Catholic Charities.

Family No. 69

She has no family to which she can turn. Pride keeps her from her friends. She has no savings. She is unemployed. To hold a job that will support her, she will need vocational training.

This is the story of Miss B., who is driven frantic by her unemployment.

Miss B. had a few months' training in nursing several years ago but this training was inadequate to keep her employed. She was willing and worked hard but a practical nurse must have a certain amount of specialized training and knowledge.

She is studying typing and shorthand now and will be able to continue if she is given help in her living expenses. When she completes the course, she will be able to support herself, the agency believes.

For $75 this woman can be given a new start in life—along the path of self-support. She is certified by the Family Service Association.

Each of the neediest families is recommended by one of five agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion Welfare Department, Bureau of Rehabilitation and Salvation Army.

These agencies, members of the Community Chest, will expend The Post's Fund without charge.

Tortuous Channel Would Become Vital Sea Artery

By Jack B. Beardwood
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the United States at war in both the Atlantic and Pacific, attention is focused sharply on the twisting, desolate, rock-hemmed Straits of Magellan on the southern tip of South America.

Down where the Western Hemisphere tapers off like a cornucopia, then slithers away in a rugged archipelago to Cape Horn, the 362-mile long straits serpentine their way through a channel that varies from 2 to 20 miles in width.

If anything happened to the Panama Canal, the straits would become one of the world's vital sea arteries.

It took Magellan a month to negotiate the hazardous straits on his voyage around the world in 1520. He was guided at night by the fires of Indians who thought his ships were birds or animals that could be lured ashore by flames. From these bonfires, Tierra Del Fuego (land of fire) largest island in the archipelago, got its name.

Graveyard of Ships

Today it takes modern ships 36 to 48 hours to pass through the tortuous straits. Along the passage, that sometimes takes ships within a stone's throw of land, lie the oxidyzing hulls of vessels that erred briefly while running the channel.

The straits are not protected by coast artillery, although Argentina is reported ready to reconsider a previous objection to Chile's offer for cooperative effort.

Only one man has tried to fortify the straits. Sixty years after they were discovered, Pedro Sarmiento de Camboa sought to protect them so Spain's enemies would be barred from entering the Pacific. Sarmiento didn't know about Cape Horn; its discovery ended the plan.

Few ships fight the swells and dangers of Capt Horn. Mariners prefer the straits because they are protected from storms that almost constantly buffet the continent's tip.

Near Magallanes, southernmost city of the world, located about midway in the straits, Chile has a small naval station. But Chile, in whose territory the straits lie, has a tiny navy.

However, 300 miles from Cape Virgenes and Cape Holy Ghost, the Atlantic entrance to the straits, lie the Falkland Islands, Great Britain's South Atlantic naval base. Argentina's major naval bases are 800 to 1000 miles to the north, as are Chile's.

The treachery of the straits is indicated by the names of landmarks along the 362-mile route—Fatal Bay, Fury Island, Last Wreck Point, Isolation Harbor.

The western half of the straits runs through deep narrow gorges where the granite walls, pock-marked with light blue glaciers that send thousands of cascades down the cliffs, sometimes rise almost vertically from what has been referred to as the salt water river. The eastern half is shallower and wider, skirted by the brown barren hills of Patagonia and the northern fringe of Tierra Del Fuego.

A few hours west of Magallanes, ships pass Cape Froward, southernmost part of the American continent, the spot were the foot of the Andes ranges pokes its toe into the frigid waters. Cape Horn is 200 miles to the south.

Vessels from the Pacific enter the straits through Smyth's Channel, a dangerous stretch of water, then head southwest almost until they reach Magallanes. From there on, the straits, roughly, run northwest.

Although the voyage through the Straits of Magellan is one of the most scenic in the world, vessels often go either direction from Magallanes without passing a single ship. Often there is not a sign of life—just the stern, silent peaks and the rumble of cascades tumbling into the gorge.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer
By International News Service

One thing we found out in the last war is that you must give the American public the news without a strawberry on top.

There was a fellow in Washington in 1917 who dished up some artificial optimism. Well, they got rid of that fellow quicker than the price tag on a Christmas gift.

Right before war was declared this time I wrote, "The optimists cry themselves to sleep. The rest of us have insomnia."

But when war was declared I slept as peacefully as a sardine in oil. I said, "That's that and a couple of thats make a those."

Europe is going to find out one thing. We come to a slow boil but we stay hot a long, long time.

Both Dangerous

Bomb Blasts Send Out Air Waves

By the Associated Press

New York.—Remember, if bombs fall in your neighborhood, two successive air waves strike out from each explosion.

The first is a mass of air almost as thin as a plank, which hits harder, but has a very short range.

The second is more like a radio wave. It is made of long air waves and travels like radio around and behind buildings and for considerable distances.

You can't do much about the first wave, except be in a shelter or behind walls. But you can save yourself from the effects of the second one.

The existence of these waves, and what to do about the long one, have been determined by British scientists, who made their observations in the world's greatest bomb laboratory, London, during the blitz. They are described by Prof. J. D. Bernal in the official science journal, Nature.

The British scientists' advice is to keep out of open doorways or other narrow openings where this wave can deliver its hurricane blast. Keep away from objects that can topple readily.

And try not to be frightened. The scientists investigated carefully cases of persons who fell dead at distances so great that the explosion could have been the cause only if there were some mysterious effect at work.

The first wave can and does strike human beings with crushing force. But only those quite close. This initial wave travels at speeds up to 4 miles a second, for the first few feet, and reflects back or at an angle from walls and other solid objects. The back-slap frequently is traveling fast enough to add to the damage the outbound wave did.

The second, long-range wave starts as suction. Thus suction wave accounts for the frequency with which windows fall out into the street instead of inward.

There is a third kind of wave, a small earthquake, if a bomb explodes in the ground. After traveling 100 feet, the British found, these earth vibrations become true quake waves. They sometimes shake down insecure buildings.

Early Axis Drive to Cut Off Gibraltar Expected in Spanish-Controlled Tangier

By Allen Raymond
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Somewhere in Europe.—Any American who visits Tangier will come away convinced that Nazi, Fascist and Falangist are all the same animal.

The German, Italian and Spanish regimes are working together with the Germans as the bosses, though the Spaniards may not be cooperating for the moment quite so openly as the Italians.

The Spanish occupation of Tangier, just west of the Strait of Gibraltar on the north African coast, is therefore significant to Americans at war. It was effected on the morning of June 14, 1940, when two regiments of Spanish Moroccan troops marched into the city, which had been administered as an international zone by the representatives of seven nations, of which Spain was one.

No notice was given to the other nations until the Spanish troops were on the spot. The commander of the Spanish troops then assured the representatives of the other nations and the minister of the United States, who never had been a party to the international agreement by which the city was administered, that the troops had come merely to protect the neutrality of the place.

Promise Is Soon Broken

In a letter to Maxwell Blake, then American Minister, who now is retired, he declared that all existing services would remain guaranteed and would continue to function normally. Within a month the international convention, of which Spain was a signatory, was torn to pieces Spain took over the actual administration of the territory in the usual Fascist manner.

A Spanish administrator was substituted for the Frenchman who had held the job. The supreme governing body of the city, or committee of control, consisting of the ministers of Great Britain, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Belgium and Holland, was abolished. The international gendarmerie also was abolished and its place was taken by a Spanish police force. The local legislative assembly, representing the different national colonies and the Moors, also was abolished. There is no room for representative assemblies under the Fascist set-up.

Everybody but Spaniards was thrown out of the government, including the retired British general who had kept the city's budget balanced. Since then no figures have been made public as to the city's finances.

The Spanish took over the customs and lifted general import duties from 12½ per cent ad valorem to 17½ per cent. The representative of the Sultan of Morocco, or Mendoub, who had charge of the native population of the city, was ousted from his palace and the place was turned over to the German government for a legation. No German representative had been permitted in Tangier for 20 years.

In place of the Sultan's representative, the Spanish installed a representative of the Caliph of Tetuan, in Spanish Morocco, to handle native affairs, this caliph being their particular pretender to the Sultan's powers.

International Blackmail Hinted

Almost immediately thereafter they started to install light artillery of German make along the Mediterranean coast in violation of their treaty agreement that Tangier should never be fortified. England, with her dominions, then stood alone against the Nazi world, fighting what is now called the Battle of Britain. She protested and then made a loan of two million pounds to the Franco government. Old American residents who were in Tangier at the time said they detected a light odor of international blackmail.

So far the United States has not recognized the Spanish occupation but still stands on its treaty rights as signed with the Sultan of Morocco.

This treaty, made in 1880, contains a unique clause which may be pertinent some day. It provides that as many Americans may come to Tangier as desire and stay as long as they please without any objection by the sultan. The few Americans and British with whom I talked seemed eager that many Americans take advantage of this treaty right before their arrival is made more difficult.

As for the Spanish withdrawal of light artillery from Tangier after receiving England's loan, it means very little. The Spaniards have been building gun emplacements at strategic positions all along their Moroccan coast in preparation for the reception of long-range guns when they are made available by the supreme command of the new European order. They have been reinforcing their army all along the borders of French Morocco.

The Spaniards have some good light artillery, very few machine guns, antiquated motor transport and very little petrol. The officers are monarchists or Fascists, but a good part of the soldiers are Communists. They hate the Franco regime. Some of the monarchists are secretly pro-British.

To Americans on the spot, the presence of this great force seems significant principally as a temporary tool in the German drive toward Latin-America. They are convinced that as Britain moves successfully westward along the North African coast, Germany will move into all this region to drive a wedge between the United States and British North Africa to close the Straits of Gibraltar and make the great naval base at the Rock untenable. Nazi preparation for just this move seems virtually complete.

Americans in Tangier are speculating principally on when it will happen. Most of them think it will be soon.

Dogfish Harassed Dunedin Survivors

Engineer of U. S. Freighter That Rescued 72 of British Cruiser Recounts Their Story

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—The rescue at sea of 72 survivors of the torpedoed British light cruiser Dunedin and a graphic story of hardship and heroism were disclosed here today by the chief engineer of an American freighter.

The engineer, Girard L. Bresson, whose ship docked today, said the survivors had been on seven rafts for four days and three nights when they were fished from mid-Atlantic near the equator November 27.

The survivors, many of whom suffered from wounds inflicted by vicious dogfish, were put ashore at a British port, Bresson said.

(The British admiralty yesterday announced the sinking of the 4850-ton ship, carrying a normal complement of 450 men, by a German submarine. It was not announced whether any of the crew had been rescued.)

"All of the men," Dresson related, "were in extremely bad shape when we pulled them aboard.

"About half of them had suffered horrible bites from dogfish which flew out of the water and tore pieces of their flesh from their bodies.

Died of Fish Bite

"One of the sailors had a large chunk taken from his chest and died five minutes later, his mates told us. All of them had a bad case of sun poisoning and were blistered. Their bodies were swollen.

"Only a few of them had had so much as a drop of water during the four days. On one of the rafts there were 34 men, 1 gallon of water and a can of sea biscuits. This was the only raft that had any provisions whatever.

"The men told me how some of them had stayed on the raft for a couple of days, then suddenly got up, said 'goodby' and dove overboard."

Bresson said "one seaman, known only as Butler, was the hero of the whole thing in his mate's eyes.

"He sort of organized their plight so that the rafts could be kept together."

One group of men insisted on going alone, Bresson said he was told, "but this fellow Butler swam about in the oil-coated water around his ship and dragged others aboard the rafts. Afterwards, when one of the men with him died, he would swim to an overcrowded raft and assist one of the other survivors to his raft."

Only 1 Boat Lowered

Bresson said the British seamen told him "there was time to lower only one boat" before the cruiser sank after the first torpedo struck.

"Although it was built to hold 50, in the rush 120 men got into it with the result that it went right down," they told Bresson.

"A second torpedo," Bresson said he learned, "blew the stern off the ship and set off its magazine and depth charges.

"The last one seen to leave the ship was the captain. He slid down the side of the ship and was almost walking on the bottom when it turned over and sank."

(The British admiralty gave the capitain's name as R. S. Lovatt, O. B. E., R. N.)

"After the ship went down the submarine surfaced, cruised around about 10 minutes, then submerged, leaving everyone to his fate," Bresson said he was told.

The chief engineer recalled the ship came upon the survivors just after he had finished his Thanksgiving dinner. He said the American freighter's captain, O. H. Olsen, ordered the ship back to the search even after darkness and managed to find 40 more men who had signaled with a flashlight from their raft.

Martinique Pledges U. S. Neutrality

Henri Philippe Petain. At any rate, indications from Fort de France were that the people of Martinique were "jubilant" over the new and peaceful understnading with the United States.

Presence of the three French-owned slices of land in this hemisphere has led to constant friction since the fall of France in June, 1940. People of Martinique have been irritated by the patrol of American warships around that island. Last spring, when Marshal Petain announced "full collaboration" with the Axis, American forces were prepared to take Martinique by force if necessary, a move held in abeyance for diplomatic reasons.

American concern and, for that matter, British concern, over Martinique was due not only to the island's strategic value and that of other French Western Hemisphere possessions. It sprang from the fact also that in the fine and spacious harbor of Fort de France lay the French aircraft carrier Bearn and the swift French cruiser Emile Bertin. Both vessels, on the high seas when France collapsed, put into Fort de France for safety.

The Bearn carried 90 new American fighter planes, now corroded in the salt air of Martinique. The Bertin carried a far richer prize, 380 tons of gold spirited to Martinique from France and landed safely after a game of hare and hounds with the British on the Atlantic. This gold, valued at about $250,000,000, now lies under guard in Fort de Saix.

Both the Bearn and the Emile Bertin are presumed to be serviceable and would make valuable additions to the German fleet, should Vichy ever surrender the French navy to Hitler. And at Guadeloupe lies another French vessel, the training cruiser Jeanne d'Arc.

American entry into the war made some decision on the French Caribbean possessions imperative. That it was reached by agreement and not in blood on the beaches of Martinique is a triumph of diplomacy under most trying conditions.

Under the agreement, it is understood, the United States will continue to supply Martinique with food and other necessities, taking payment from French assets frozen in this country.

Nazi Economy Shows Signs Of Collapse

By Nicholas P. Gregory

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Despite stringent economic and monetary curbs, affecting the everyday life of every German, Germany's economy is showing signs of collapse. That is the consensus of every economic piece of news that has been coming out of the Reich before the declaration of war against the United States, according to an article appearing in the current "Foreign Commerce Weekly," issued by the Department of Commerce yesterday.

The breakdown of Germany's economy, it was pointed out, may lead to its internal collapse. It is recalled that in the last war, the ravages of inflation and extraordinarily severe shortages of foodstuffs and particularly strategic materials led to Germany's collapse at home and on the fighting front.

The Commerce Department article points out that despite the drafting of foreign labor, Germany's labor shortage is becoming increasingly acute. Despite the compulsory employment of women and the shifting of workers from nondefense to defense industries, the labor shortage shows no signs of slackening.

Apparently this is due in large measure to the losses of men on the Eastern Front. Hitler is believed to have lost about four million men since its attack against Russia last June.

Germany has drafted the labor of the conquered countries in order to make up for the shortage at home, but because of slow-downs and the opposition to working for the Reich production has lagged. Germany has not replaced the men who were sent to the Russian front since the outbreak of Russo-German hostilities.

The atricle lists the following adverse economic factors which have appeared in recent months:

Mounting production costs: Higher costs in steel and the coal industries are a source of concern to the economic ministry. These are not the only industries that are feeling the impact of higher prices. Others are the textile and leather industries.

The growing shortage of raw materials: It has even affected the German army. For example, the article points out that textile rations have even been cut for the "Werhmacht," despite the fact that on the Eastern Front the army faces subarctic weather.

Germany has told the people at home that the overcoats they need for the winter may be obtained next summer. Apparently the scheme to strip the conquered countries of every usable article has not filled the demands of the German Reich.

Despite the rigid economic, price and monetary controls the Berlin security market is booming. German speculators are eagerly buying common stock shares on the boerse, although the economic authorities attempted to stop the so-called "war boom" last September by forcing corporations to invest their liquid funds in German government bonds.

The article closes with the following significant statement:

"Economic factors are likely to prove decisive in the future."

D. C. Attorney, Client Cleared In Draft Case

Charges of violating the Selective Service Act brought against Dorsey K. Offutt, local attorney, and his client, Robert J. Sopourn, were dropped by the Government yesterday when the case was called before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough in District Court.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran appeared when court convened and requested that the trial, scheduled for 1:30 p. m., be postponed. He stated that John L. Laskey, assistant assigned to the case, was occupied with a trial in another court.

Justice Goldsborough, however, pointed out that the trial had been set specially at the appointed time, and ruled that the case would have to be prosecuted then or dismissed.

Laskey came into court at 1:30 and told the court that the Government would nolle prosse the cases against both men. No official explanation was given.

The indictment charged Sopourn with failing to report for induction into the Army on April 19 after he had been classified as 1-A. It further alleged that Offutt illegally counseled him not to appear.

After charges had been dropped, defense attorneys told reporters that Sopourn had requested deferment from training because he was about to become a father. They asserted that Offutt, a World War veteran himself, had prepared papers for Sopourn to file with his draft board and was aided in this by a member of a Selective Service legal advisory board.

They also said that Sopourn's child was born on June 29 and that the mother was a married woman who is now divorced from her husband. The husband sued for divorce, they added, naming Sopourn as co-respondent. The decree was granted last Tuesday by Justice James M. Proctor.

The pair were also indicted on charges of conspiracy to violate the act, but Justice Goldsborough upheld a demurrer against the indictment and the case is now pending in the Court of Appeals.

White Ranee Now Regrets Ban on Head-Hunting in Borneo

By the United Press

New York, Dec. 18.—The Ranee of Sarawak, gray-haired English wife of the white Rajah of Sarawak and queen of half a million wild men of Borneo, sighed today for a return of the days of head-hunting.

"I'd like to sick some of our best head-hunters on those Japanese," she said. "Japanese heads would look mighty decorative in the native huts.

"I wish we hadn't prohibited head-hunting on our island."

The Ranee, a plump, middle-aged woman whose voice and smile belied her bloodthirsty sentiments, explained that during the 33 years of her husband's reign, they had striven to convince the natives head-hunting was an unbecoming pastime.

"But we made a mistake. I think the ban ought to be lifted for the duration—against the Japanese," she said.

Having left Borneo more than five weeks ago on her way to England to visit her three married daughters, the Ranee said she had no word from her husband about himself or the 35 servants who run their 20-room palace—a low rambling brick structure like an elongated bungalow.

"I stopped at Wake Island on the trip," she said, "and all I can say is I hope our people defend our island as valiantly as I know the American Marines are defending Wake. The island is nothing but a strip of lovely sand. The men are fighting with little resources and they know no reinforcements can reach them.

"Occupation of Borneo will do the Japanese no good. Our people will destroy our oil wells at Mira. There is nothing else."

The Ranee's husband, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, the only white Rajah in the world, inherited his curious kingdom from his father, who in turn received it from his uncle, James Brooke, who was made the Rajah in 1840 by the native Sultan of Borneo in gratitude for his assistance in quelling a rebellion.

Why They Must Agree

If there was ever any doubt as to the necessity of a broad agreement between industry and labor for the duration of the war, that doubt was removed by President Roosevelt's talk to the assembled representatives of the two groups on Wednesday. The President used plain, blunt words. He spoke in terms of what "must" be done. Yet he was not giving orders or making a threat. On the contrary, he simply pointed out the clear and inescapable obligation of every American to subordinate personal and group interests to the national cause.

There are several ways of preventing strikes and speeding up the production of weapons, ammunition and machines of war. As a last resort men could be drafted to serve in factories as they are to serve in the front lines of battle. But that is not the problem which arises today. Industrial and labor leaders have been called together to mobilize the greater power of self-discipline. In other words, it is not simply a question of keeping men on the job in time of war, but of infusing the spirit of patriotic cooperation into our entire industrial system. An agreement between management and labor is imperative because any other course in this national crisis would be a betrayal of our way of life.

Following this trend of thought, the President rightly pointed out that the differences between management and labor in this country are after all comparatively small. Indeed, they become inconsequential when the Nation is under attack. Strikes have already become an anachronism. The great task of this conference is not the negative one of stopping walkouts for the duration of the war. Rather it is the task of mobilizing every ounce of our industrial strength by the cooperative, democratic method. For democracy is on trial on the assembly line no less than on the battle line. And every leader of industry and labor must know that, in this crisis, a united front is as imperative for the spiritual strength that it engenders as for the military prowess it creates.

Attack On Borneo

When the Pacific war began a little less than a fortnight ago one curious circumstance was the way the Japanese deliberately refrained from attacking any Dutch area. While Japanese bombs rained on Pearl Harbor, Manila, Hongkong, Penang, Singapore and many other points under American and British jurisdiction, no Japanese raids were carried out on Sumatra, Java, Borneo, the Celebes or any other part of the rich and far-flung Dutch Empire in southeastern Asia. This could hardly have been the result of any belief that the Dutch East Indies would, if let alone, remain neutral in the Pacific struggle. The very day the assault on Pearl Harbor took place the Dutch authorities in the Indies as well as the Dutch government at London declared war on Japan. A more likely reason behind Japan's failure to attack the Dutch was, first, the relative remoteness of Dutch areas from Japanese bases, coupled with the fact that the aggressors were busily engaged elsewhere and, second, the circumstance that since the Japanese hope ultimately to come into possession of the enormously rich Dutch colonies, they did not want to do anything that might involve a destruction of the resources of those islands.

This policy of avoidance has largely been continued to date. On Wednesday, however, the British admitted that a Japanese landing had taken place on the northern or British part of Borneo, which is 600 miles from Manila and 800 miles from Singapore. This brings the Japanese close to Dutch territory, for three-quarters of Borneo is Dutch. Thus the Japanese might be able, when the proper time arrived, to attack Dutch concentrations to the south. In the meantime they hope to force the Dutch to withdraw the aid they have sent to Singapore, whose position, despite that aid, remains unfavorable.

This stratagem is hardly likely to succeed. The Dutch are realists. They know full well that the fate of the Dutch East Indies depends on Singapore. If Singapore is held, the Japanese will not be able to maintain their present foothold on the Borneo coast, let alone extend it. If Singapore falls, the defense of the Dutch Indies will become very difficult, indeed. In the meantime it does not seem likely that the Japanese will be able to capitalize their landing at Borneo to acquire the resources of that area, particularly its oil wells. These wells produce about a million tons of oil a year, but it is announced that the British have seen to it that those within reach of the invaders will become only the blackened ruins of derricks and refineries.

House Cleaning

Second only to the need to blend our war effort with the war effort of our Allies is the need to reorganize the administration at home. The old saw that you can't swap horses crossing a stream has never applied to community undertakings. The more critical the undertaking, the more a community will see to it that the pilotage is the best. Particularly in wartime—which is the greatest crisis that can happen in a democracy—changes are made constantly in the light of experience. That was the case in World War I. Every government in World War I except ours was changed at least once, and in many cases several times. The same flexibility has been the rule in this war. Hardly any one of the battling free nations now has the same government with which it embarked on warmaking. In some respects our system is rigid as compared with the parliamentary system, but in actual administration there is far more resiliency. The President, for one thing, is our Commander in Chief. And within his competence thus falls the opportunity to alter the administration in the services or on the home front with complete freedom.

The time to make the necessary changes in our administration is now. This Nation has never felt that it was getting an administration which was either economical or efficient. As long as the war was kept from our shores, however, that feeling was more tolerant than critical. But now that war is upon us, there is bound to be a demand for a general house cleaning. The disclosures of our unpreparedness at Hawaii will accent that demand. There has been a belated clean-up in the Pacific command. The need for that sprang to the eyes, as the French say, but the public will think of responsibilities nearer home and will wonder why the changes don't begin at the center of the war effort. Our people have a profound faith in their Commander in Chief to see the war through to victory, but they know that he has the vices of his virtues. One of these vices is his loyalty to personal and political friendships. An illustration of his loyalty was his appointment of the now deposed Admiral Kimmel as chief of the Pacific Fleet over the heads of men who would have been far more competent at America's key strategic outpost. Admiral Kimmel was Mr. Roosevelt's personal aid when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. It is being recalled today, moreover, that he kept Secretary Swanson in office as Secretary of the Navy long after Mr. Swanson had been incapacitated by illness from filling his post. In wartime the head of a free government gets his strength from the confidence of the people. Let our President now buttress our confidence in him, and allay the general uneasiness about the administration of the war effort by a general house cleaning. The longer it is delayed, the more difficult it will be to get the total effort which this war demands.

Invest For War

This war is going to cost money, a lot of it. Yet prior to its outbreak we were lagging even in lending our spare funds to the Treasury. In the seven months ended December 1, the Treasury sold about two billion dollars of defense bonds; but if the reduced November rate of sales should be maintained, only $2,800,000,000 of defense bonds would be sold during the next full year. In view of these disappointing results Secretary Morgenthau has been trying for some time to inject more vigor into the bond-selling campaign. To be sure, the declaration of war brought with it a sudden spurt in sales. But that kind of inspired buying is not likely to continue. What we require is steady, sustained investment support of a Government which is now faced by an undertaking of gigantic proportions. By appealing to patriotism it should be possible greatly to stimulate the sale of bonds without resort to any of the pressure tactics that had such disastrous effects during World War I.

The temptation to increase sales regardless of the means employed, however, must be resisted. It should constantly be kept in mind that the only kind of bond purchases that cut down consumer purchasing power and thus provide safeguards against inflation are the purchases made with the proceeds of current savings. As Secretary Morgenthau said Wednesday, in addressing a national meeting of the Defense Savings Organization, "our major effort now must be directed particularly at those in all walks of life who receive regular pay from wages and salaries. Inflation feeds on current income, rather than on the money that now rests in the vaults of savings banks." Bonds bought on credit with funds borrowed from the banks add to the volume of purchasing power and help to inflate the currency. The success of a popular bond campaign has to be judged, therefore, not only with reference to the amount of bonds sold but by the way in which those bonds are paid for. The task confronting the Treasury and its aides is to induce a greater number of people to utilize a larger than customary proportion of their savings to buy Government bonds. The war should make this undertaking a good deal easier, but it does not in the least justify any radical change in the methods of soliciting investment support.

We Stoop To Conquer

Yesterday morning Mr. Walter Lippmann, taking as his text the tragic lesson of Pearl Harbor, pleaded eloquently for the circumcision of the American heart at this crisis of American destiny. He called for contrite confession of our sins of materialism, hedonism, complacency and self-righteousness and for the abandonment of all those "deadly illusions and moral failings which have prevailed among us since the other war." As if by way of commentary on this exhortation the War Department has released the first of the official war posters. If the purpose of the poster in question is to purge us of hypocritical pretense it could not have served its purpose better had it been designed by Dr. Goebbels or Dr. Julius Streicher. It presents five ape-like figures in the uniform of German soldiers with grotesque and bestial faces whose wide-open mouths, as they sing the Horst Wessel song, show hideous fangs in place of human teeth. The figures call instantly to mind Hitler's words of October 3 about his own Russian enemies, "Not human beings, but animal beasts."

Is this the plane on which the division of psychological warfare proposes to wage the struggle for the defense of Christian civilization and the principle of human dignity? The poster suggests that our spiritual disorders may be even deeper than the vices of which Mr. Lippmann so properly complains. If this wretchedly drawn and worse conceived poster can serve any purpose, it is the purpose of arousing in us, as substitute for courage, those blind and malignant fears and hatreds which have already wrought so much disaster and desolation in the world. Once we become reconciled to the principle that our end justifies any and every means, then indeed we shall have lost the war, not perhaps to Hitler, but to Hitlerism. In our own moral interest, therefore, let us not in these matters imitate the most disgusting devices of our adversaries. If we must be imitative we should do far better to imitate the example of the British who, even in their darkest and most desperate hours, have never reduced their official propaganda to the level of Berlin's.

Our greatest need of the moment has been well expressed by one of our correspondents in a farewell message sent us just before his departure on a Government mission to the Far East. "There are," he writes, "bigger things to remember than Pearl Harbor. We have to remember now our history and traditions. We have to remember our devotion and dedication to essential liberty. We have to remember that the assault of the Axis is not against the comparatively isolated outposts of our military establishments, but upon the central headquarters of our brains and hearts."

Why Flanagan?

Why the President named James H. Flanagan to the District Public Utilities Commission is a mystery that no one seems able to explain. Mr. Flanagan has served private firms as an auditor and an accountant. Since 1935 he has been with the Securities and Exchange Commission, holding the title of supervising analyst at the time of his nomination to the PUC. But there is nothing to indicate that he has any familiarity with the utilities of Washington which, if his nomination is confirmed by the Senate, he will help to regulate.

Presumably Mr. Flanagan has many qualities as a public official which commended him to President Roosevelt. But it is grossly unfair to this voteless city to appoint to local positions men who have little or no knowledge of its problems. Actually, of course, the President doesn't have time in these critical days to give much thought to the selection of District officials. That fact, however, does not excuse careless nominations. It only points up the desirability of leaving local appointments to the Board of Commissioners who are more familiar with the community problems to be met as well as the personnel available to meet them.

POOL AMONG THE BIRCHES

White bark, green boughs, brown earth,
Slow movement of light and shade,
A tinkle of leaves on the wind,
And deep in the feathery glade
A clear pool quivers with light,
That holds a spidery trace
Of light-foot things in its depths,
Of leafy ferns on its face.

The sunlight sifts through the boughs
And trembles upon the ground
To break as an object moves
Across it without a sound:
So camouflaged with light,
So dappled with shade, so near
The color of clayey bank
And stippled earth, a deer
Head to the wind moves down
Knee deep in the ferns to drink,
And prints the beautiful head
Of a deer on the water's brink.

Italians In U. S.

As a rule violent action of any kind, as well as aggression, will inevitably bring its reaction. The action is promulgated by the strong—with the weak presenting the reaction. As a result, nations and their individuals have been forced into selfish activities, even overstepping decency and justice, by using the standards of the aggressors. The reason for the condition can be attributed to the absence of national or international agencies for controlling the aggression and protecting the victims of the action. The sufferer is civilization itself.

We can understand this by considering that results of the peace of World War I left seeds of discontent. It was possible for the unscrupulous and demagogic dictators to sow their promises of national glory through military might, imperialism, national supremacy, etc.—promises to give the discontented everything they wished. The seed thus sown has now come to flower—and the world conflagration now raging is the result.

Our national entrance into active participation has been gradual, and against the activities of those who have insisted that the things we now see could not happen—that we should attend to our own business and leave other nations to settle their own difficulties. The admirers and supporters of Mussolini and Hitler have been active in this respect despite the efforts of Italo-Americans who opposed these (and who have been called renegades and traitors to the old country) to warn of the danger.

Now that the truth has come to light, it is hoped that those Italian-Americans who are now explaining their past activities and their conversion to the full support of this country and its policies are truly sincere.

All of them should desire a victory of the United States in war and in its plans for peace, now understood in part, since these will lead to greater security of life, liberty and justice for all peoples, international unity and the establishment in the world of a new order on the pattern of the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Victory for the United States and its allies is desired by faithful patriots of all countries dominated by the Fascist and Nazi regimes. Such a victory would be a victory for them. To Italians, it would give an opportunity for a new government based on the ideals of Il Risorgimento, Mazzini and of Garibaldi, ideals which were the same as those of the U. S. A.

Forgotten Woman

In its hectic efforts to bring stenographers and typists from distant States to Washington, the Government seems to have completely overlooked large numbers of highly qualified stenographers who are already here and out of employment. Many of these have had experience in Government offices which did not come under Civil Service. They have never had a Civil Service status and are now debarred from taking the entrance test because of the age limit.

The Washington District Employment Center reports that the large majority of their calls for stenographers are for women between the ages of 18 and 30. Stenographers who are 35 or 40 years of age may register there, but nothing ever comes of it—they cannot place them.

Can the Government not find a way of getting around this age limit in these times when so much Government work is needed? I know stenographers today who have been out of work for six months. They are good typists and take anywhere from 100 to 120 words a minute in stenography. Can the Government not make use of their services if they are a little over a certain age? Surely years of office experience have fitted them for this type of work!

The Rattlesnake

In these times of stress and strain, Mr. President, I hesitate to say one word of criticism or censure.

But upon reflection I think you will agree you owe the rattlesnake an apology.

In a recent press conference, by implication at least, you compared the piratical Hitler to the rattlesnake. In this you erred, that snake merits no such insult.

I have known the rattlesnake for 40 years and more.

I have always respected the rattlesnake and still do.

The rattlesnake minds his own business and even when disturbed usually retreats slowly toward his habitat.

If pressed too closely he turns, coils, rattles his warning and, save in his one month of blindness, never strikes without warning.

In fact the noble creature in his desire to give his opponent every advantage by not attacking till attacked often meets his doom, and on the whole thus resembles in this respect the now almost extinct isolationist rather than the sly, treacherous, cunning Hitler.

Rations

A lot of energy is wasted just now persuading people to buy bonds. We have given up that method of raising troops because it did not produce enough. Eventually we shall have to raise our money by forced loans. Why not now? Should we be more tender of our incomes than of our lives?

Inflation is on the way because spending exceeds the supply of goods. Financing by bank-made money and credit, to take up the slack in voluntary personal lending, makes the inflation worse, and may starve the working people on whom we depend for our security.

Why not make a clean job of it? Limit the spending of every family to bare necessities, permit the production of enough goods to meet this limited demand at current prices and devote the surplus income to public use by taxes and loans.

It is well known what it takes to keep a family in health. Most of the working people are lucky to get the $2000 to $3000 that the health experts specify. Why should anyone spend more? Helen Maria, there's a war on!

The extra expenses of the better classes come largely from hired service. At a pinch they can do without it. This is the pinch. The servants that war economy would displace are all smart folks that Uncle Sam can use.

Allowance should be made, of course, for various commitments and obligations, but as all such money becomes income for someone else to account for, that would not affect the rate of spending. Let us all go on rations for the duration.

Victory Island

Your very excellent front page story anent the marines on Wake Island, by Mr. Folliard, showing the appearance of the islands, suggests to me what you might consider offering a new name for this group when victory is attained, as it surely will be, and call this group Victory Island. The formation of the "V" very naturally created the suggestion.

You are doing a good and improving service to the Capital City through The Post.

Thai Resistance

While I agree, in the main, with Mr. Barnet Nover's excellent analysis of Japanese treachery and malign strength and ultimate defeat in the present war, as published in The Post, I trust that you will allow me to express my hope that Mr. Nover and the American people will withhold their final judgment on my native Thailand in her present tragic misfortune, and will not accept the verdict written by Mr. Nover, that "Thailand's resistance was, at most, perfunctory and soon after the Bangkok government raised the white flag the Thai government allied itself with the conqueror."

The Thai will to resist was strong, I can assure you, as evidenced by our struggle of centuries to maintain our independence. But Thailand is small and, it must be acknowledged, she was weak in comparison with Japan, which had piled its enormous armies into Indo-China to our very frontiers. The Japanese had, moreover, we now know, taken advantage of our liberal immigration laws in Thailand, and had surreptitiously been buying up real estate in close proximity to strategic points in Bangkok and throughout the country.

When the attack came, therefore, against Thailand, simultaneously with that upon Pearl Harbor, I am convinced that the Thai forces suddenly found themselves already penetrated and attacked from the rear, and Bangkok, the nerve center of the country, was thus almost immediately overwhelmed. Capitulation followed, when it was seen that further resistance would mean only the ruthless destruction of Thai lives. Thailand was forced into the unfortunate category of those other small countries which had already fallen before the dastardly surprise attacks of the Axis powers. Although there is thus far no authentic news to this whole effect, as the wireless and cable communications from Bangkok are all in the hands of the enemy, I firmly believe that this is what happened, knowing the Thai people as I do.

As to the reported alliance between conquered Thailand and the conquering Japanese, I am convinced equally that history will reveal the melancholy farce which the Japanese are enacting before the world in this regard. Remembering again that all messages from Bangkok now come through the hands of the Japanese, I myself cannot trust any news from Thailand of so fantastically unbelievable a nature.

For this reason, I am continuing in this country to bend my every energy, as the appointed official representative of the Thai people, toward the eventual defeat of Japan and the triumph of the democracies, among which I am proud to count my native land.

Reserving Judgment

I am writing to quote for you two lines from the late Mr. Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The Pro-Consuls."

"The clamour of the arrogant accuser Wastes that one hour we needed to make good."

I think that we should all bear the fact in mind that losses are inevitable in the conduct of a war, and remember that our President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, as the commander in chief of our Army and our Navy, has full authority to order any officer of either one of these forces to be court-martialed. For any others, with insufficient knowledge of the facts, to suggest such procedure, might interfere with the efficiency of the officers whom they accuse, and might thus hamper our defense and give aid and comfort to the enemy.

Send No Money

Short of a Charlie Chan movie, a pocketful of chewy candy in an old attic full of magazines is one of the best escapes from our times.

The magazines should be at least 40 years old, though lately I have found amusement in some of the vintages of the 1920's. Now that the effort to decrease the consumption of consumer goods is well under way, even the magazines of the late 1920's can give you a jolt, with their lavish Body by Fisher automobile ads ("Buy several!"), ads for aluminum were ("Buy a dozen at a time!"), where everything was beginning to be wrapped in cellophane (and now everything is being unwrapped). The consumer in you will see it all as a Roman holiday.

But these later magazines only serve to bring your own time into relief. For best escape, the magazines should be read in the attic, with the dim clatter and hum downstairs to give you a sense of distant time. With the right setting you will find yourself tearing coupons out of ads which offered something for nothing in 1904. You stuff them into your pocket until you can get to a pencil; later, downstairs, you pull them out and have to think a moment before you realize why they are there.

Pick up the Christmas number of Harper's Magazine for 1904. If you wish, read one or two of the stories and smile over their illustrations. But you will find the ads more interesting.

Announcements of forthcoming books fill quite a few pages—oh, if you could only have been there to pick up first editions at published prices! Christmas stockings that year bulged oddly with "Goop Tales," by Gelett Burgess; "Foxy Grandpa Up to Date," "Buster Brown Abroad" and something which must have been wholly unpalatable called "As They Were and As They Should Have Been," drawing an unnecessary contrast between two children up to some mischief, and "as they should have been." Squeezed in among nine other announcements on the same page is one of a book on George Washington by a professor of politics and jurisprudence at Princeton. His name was Woodrow Wilson.

Drug ads in uninhibited prose pepper the black pages. There are no lyrical outbursts on vitamins, thiamin or nicotinic acid, but only offers of useful potions such as nerve and brain food (presumably for those, like Winnie the Pooh, of very little brain); a fearsome vacuum cap that was said to promote growth of hair; and two secret methods for removing it, "used by people of refinement," which should have made it darned good. Or, if you are chewing your nails over lack of stature rather than hair, there is The Cartilage Co. to relieve your distress. After you have read their free booklet, opines the ad, your only wonder will be, "Why did not some one think of it before?" Ivory soap was still unaware of its near purity, but only offered to get your face clean.

For something heartier than a smile there are the clothing ads. In one, a model with her bosom slipping stomachward and her rear sadly out of joint, shows off a begusseted, begored and beflounced "tailored suit." And for the asking, you can get a free catalogue illustrating 120 more styles. Just ask for catatlogue No. 85.

Several ads offer "automatic valets," a protean type of furniture bristling with several conveniences. One model, besides serving as a wardrobe and closet, also includes a shaving stand and a cellarette compartment complete with serving trays and glass racks. However, you have to provide your own liquor. A golden oak number has a "trouser and skirt stretcher concealed in the back."

There are only three ads of carriage makers, though the more numerous automobile ads still cling to the horse and buggy vocabulary, and the Studebaker ad devotes itself almost entirely to extolling its line of sleighs, "harness and every accessory for equipage and stable!" They just barely remember to mention (but in passing!) their Gasolene Touring Car and Electric Victoria-Phaeton.

Unfamiliar names stare out from the pages: Rambler, Columbia, Pathfinder, Locomobile, Winton, Northern, Autocar. But Packard, Studebaker and Cadillac are there.

And for those who are smug about the newness and smartness of their station wagons, here is an ad offering "depot wagons" resplendent with lots of brass, glass and lush plush.

Lest you be thinking that prefabricated houses are an invention of practically the day before yesterday, there is an ad for portable houses to disabuse you. Anyone can erect them, it says. And you have further promises of "No nails, no strikes, no carpenters, no worry."

And don't feel too pleased at having given your grandmother something new when you present her with one of those adjustable breakfast-in-bed-and-reading tables that sprout up from a tripod. Because she might have had one like that pictured in the 1904 ad. Only hers was nickel, copper or brass plated ($7.75). Oh, halcyon days!

But here is what I'm going to send for: A filing cabinet of "more than 30 different sections" containing drawers of numerous different shapes and sizes, to hold postage stamps as well as maps. And it says there is yet time to place your order and receive the cabinet before January 1. So excuse me while I send my order.

MARIE HALUN BLOCH.

Alert For Offense

Col. Knox's prompt flight to learn cause for Pearl Harbor will go down in history as Navy's best move to wake America to be alert—night and day—for offense as well as defense. Here's a slogan that will wake up our 130 million people to support the President's war offense and kill that overused word, "defense."

"Be alert—offense-defense—to win this war." Civilians should be taught to use offense as best means of defense—and defense bonds should be rechristened United States Government offense bonds—then watch their sales grow.

Defeating The Axis

By Mark Sullivan

Allies Have Resources To Do It

SECRETARY OF WAR Stimson has announced that we will continue to send "lend-lease" war material to Britain, Russia, and other Nations as in the past; and he has given out reasons for this policy. If there are any among our people who in the faintest degree question this policy, their questioning can be cleared up by a plain look at the situation.

SULLIVAN

When Hitler incited Japan to attack us, he had a purpose—he wished to create an effect upon us, to influence our course. If we knew what Hitler's purpose was, we might be able to frustrate it. To find out what your opponent wishes you to do, and then not do it, may not be a universal rule in war or games, but it sometimes serves.

A quite general surmise is that Hitler wishes to make us stop sending lend-lease material to Britain and Russia—he assumed we would at once keep all our material at home for our own fight against Japan. There are other surmises about Hitler's purpose, and he may have had several.

In fact, Hitler's strategy worked, for a little while. Immediately after Japan's attack, we suspended shipments of lend-lease material, "momentarily" as Secretary Stimson says. That was one of the several results of the Pearl Harbor attack that were to the advantage of the Axis.

JUST WHAT allocation we should make of our output of war material, as between ourselves and the nations on our side; just what is the best destination for a given implement of war, whether on the Pacific front against Japan, or on the Atlantic and European front against Hitler—all that is a matter of high strategy, about which the layman cannot know. But any layman can see how the broad situation lies.

If we were to concentrate on fighting Japan, using all our war material for this Pacific fight, and withholding it from England and Russia—we should conquer Japan assuredly. But at the end, we might find ourselves facing an unbeaten Hitler. We might even find ourselves facing a Hitler who had conquered or fatally weakened England and Russia; we might find ourselves obliged to meet Hitler without allies. A victory over Japan which would leave us in that situation would be of little worth.

On the other hand, if Hitler is beaten first, then a victorious combination of ourselves, Britain, Russia and the others on our side, would make the conquering of Japan a mere mopping-up operation.

CONCEIVABLY, had we not suffered initial setback from Japan, had we got the initiative and early momentum, it might have been wise policy to concentrate on Japan and get her out of the situation, thus relieving all our resources for helping England and Russia against Hitler. But it seems probable that the initial momentum Japan acquired by her deceit now makes quick defeat of her unlikely. As things stand now, it might be wise policy merely to conduct a war of resistance against Japan, while throwing much weight into the fight against Hitler.

Another purpose attributed to Hitler, when he incited Japan to attack us, was to divide our naval strength, obliging us to use much of it in the Pacific against Japan, and thereby reducing what we could keep in the Atlantic for help to Britain. What proportions of our fleet we should now keep in each ocean is of course a matter for expert tacticians to decide. The same is true of the whole situation. It might even be wise to make a quick concentration of British and American naval power against Japan. All that is here attempted is to suggest the factors in the picture which should convince our people that it is wise to continue to send lend-lease material to our allies, in such quantities as our Army and Navy experts deem best.

CERTAIN FACTORS are basic and incontestable. This is a total war, total in the sense of universal. Substantially the whole world is divided into two groups at war—one group, the Axis, headed by Germany, Japan and Italy; the other group headed by the United States, Britain and Russia. The Axis group is consolidated by formal agreement, it operates as a unit, it directs its strategy and its forces as seems best to its unified leadership, which is in effect Hitler. If our group is to be effective, it also must act as a unit, allocating and focusing its forces and resources according to a common plan. For us to concentrate on Japan, as if this were a war apart, would be fatally unwise. Incidentally, it is likely Russia will see it would be unwise for her to concentrate on Germany alone, ignoring Japan as if that nation were not a part of the Axis.

There is another condition that is basic and all-embracing. Our group—the United States, the British Empire, China, the Netherlands East Indies, and the other nations that have joined us—our group is far superior in man power, in sea power, in all the resources that compose force on the battle front. All that is necessary is that these resources be used intelligently, cooperatively, and without limit.

Many Found Lacking Proper Knowledge Of Precautions Against Air-Raid Bombs

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 18.—Instruction of the civilian population in proper air-raid precautions is making headway, but surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate that many gaps in public knowledge of safety measures still exist.

While approximately one-fourth of all persons polled along the Atlantic and Pacific sea coasts either would not know what to do in case of an air raid or would do the wrong thing, a much larger number are ignorant of proper precautions to take in snuffing out an incendiary bomb.

To find out how well informed the public is about incendiary bombs at this early stage, the Institute undertook a special survey among the States along the coastline of the Pacific, the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico, interviewing a cross-section of the population there during the week of December 10-17. Those States it is generally conceded, would be the most likely victims if the Axis powers succeeded in carrying out an air raid.

The results show that fewer than two-fifths of all persons interviewed in those areas have a correct idea of how to put out an incendiary bomb.

Authorities recommend using sand or earth to smother the bomb, or spraying with water Dousing the incendiary with a large stream of water is not recommended, as it may cause the bomb to explode. Squirting a fire extinguisher directly on the bomb is likely to have the same effect, although the extinguishers may be used, according to authorities, to check spread of flames around the bomb.

The results of the survey follow:

"How would you put out an incendiary bomb?"

CROSS-SECTION OF COASTAL STATES

Would use sand, earth or spray with water (recommended by the authorities)	38%
Would put bomb in pail of water, use fire extinguisher directly on bomb, try to smother with blanket, beat with broom, etc. (not recommended)	18
Don't know what to do	44

As reported by the Institute last week, 49 per cent of persons interviewed along the Pacific Coast think there is a chance their city will be bombed, while 40 per cent think there is no chance, and 11 per cent are undecided. Along the East Coast, the survey found 45 per cent apprehensive of bombing, with 44 per cent discounting the possibility and the rest undecided.

On the East and West Coasts combined 76 per cent gave indication that they know the correct type of shelter to seek in case of air raids, while 24 per cent either did not know what they should do, or gave an incorrect answer.

News Censorship

By Ernest Lindley

Uniformity Needed

BYRON PRICE, the director of censorship, was the selection of Stephen Early, Secretary to the President. The outline of his duties, as sketched by the President, reflects the views which Early steadfastly has adhered to. On both counts, this is good news for the press, and so for the public, which have an identical interest in obtaining the maximum of reliable information consistent with the Nation's safety.

Early, as this column has reported on previous occasions, has consistently defended and promoted freedom of the press. Both at the White House and in his supervision of other Government agencies, he has stood for a free flow of information. He has stood also for equal treatment of all Washington correspondents, regardless of the political views of their papers or of their individual attitudes toward the President and his works.

Recognizing that in time of war censorship along certain lines is necessary, he has advocated the maximum practicable publication of facts, and the preservation, so far as possible, of the normal relationships between Washington correspondents and Government agencies. Repeatedly he has torpedoed plans originating elsewhere, both in the armed services and in New Deal circles, which would have gone far beyond the essential minimum of censorship. Early's fundamental views have been subscribed to publicly by Lowell Mellett, director of the office of Government reports, whom many thought would be the top censor in time of war.

The most significant fact about the arrangement outlined by the President is that it separates censorship from propaganda. Prince will have two chief duties. The first is to prevent information of military value from reaching the enemy through the mails, radio, or cable transmission, or by any other means. The second, which underwrites the first, is to see that information of military value to the enemy is not published in the United States. Such information will be withheld at the source, but if it falls into the hands of the press through other channels they will be expected to refrain from publishing it.

THE SECOND PHASE concerns the American press and public. It is no more than what an overwhelming majority of the press has practiced for a year or more, and, in some instances, prior to that. Even before the German invasion of Poland, one publication with which this column is familiar voluntarily refrained from publishing, without the approval of the War or Navy Department, information which it received concerning "secret" weapons. Later it saw news which it had withheld published elsewhere, but it at least had the knowledge that it had not been responsible for weakening the country's defenses.

Since the fall of 1939 and especially during the last year and a half, the Army and Navy progressively have restricted information of certain types. The press as a whole has had no quarrel with this, even though ridiculous interpretations of the general rules were made at times by both the War and Navy Departments, and conflicting judgments were frequent between the War and Navy Departments and responsible officers elsewhere. What most of the press asked was only a clearer and more intelligent line of demarcation between what should or should not be published. Inevitably, a minority of publications went their own way. Shortly before the attack on Hawaii, there were two outstanding transgressions. One was by a newspaper hostile to the Administration's foreign policy, which published a document which few, if any, other publications would have quoted—even though they might have used the substance of it, as indeed some had done. The other was the publication by a newspaper of high repute, which has favored the Administration's foreign policy, of the gist of certain information affecting the security of the United States in the Pacific. This information had been imparted to the press associations and a few outstanding publications under the injunction of utter secrecy by the Chief of Staff, Gen. Marshall. This newspaper obtained a release from another official in the War Department, but in publishing the story it violated both the injunction of the Nation's highest professional soldier and a solemn compact entered into by its representative with the press associations and other publications to whom the information was given. Despite this violation of confidence, the others, at the request of the War Department, kept their pledge.

AT PRESENT, the entire press, with the rest of the Nation, seems to be unanimous in support of the war effort. But such incidents as those cited establish the need for a uniform censorship with a view both to the security of the Nation and the protection of the ethical majority of the press which believes in publishing all the facts which do not materially aid the enemy.

As one of the higher executives of the largest press association, and as a civilian with military experience, Price ought to be well qualified to exercise an intelligent censorship. As he works into his job, disputes very likely will arise between him and the press and radio. But the outline of his duties, as presented by the President, are sensible and if faithfully followed should provide the American public with much more accurate information than it got during World War II.

Our Overconfidence

By E. O. Reischauer and J. C. Goodbody

The Military Might Of Japan

OUR DETERMINATION is strong and our confidence in a final victory over Japan is unquestioned. Yet the American people already have displayed shocking signs of overconfidence. There is talk of a decision within two or three months. Radio analysts pass on to us glib scorn of Japanese seamanship and firepower. There has been much talk about Japan's immediate economic collapse and the incompetence or even stupidity of its leaders and its fighting men. Let us set the record straight. Our Government has need of an informed public as never before.

A tremendous struggle lies ahead of us in the Pacific. The Japanese are a virile, intelligent people of some 70 millions. Their land is relatively poor, the standard of living low, and the natural resources of the Japanese are limited in comparison with those we possess. But the Japanese on their side have strategic advantages in shorter lines of communications; they have a strong military tradition; and above all, the Japanese people possess a high degree of self-discipline and group discipline which gives them great powers of endurance.

THE MILITARY MAN in Japan has been exalted since the start of feudalism in the late twelfth century. Until the mid-nineteenth century Japanese society was organized on the basis of military feudalism. The virtues inculcated were those of loyalty, courage and self-discipline. Japanese schools hammer home the "virtues" of militarism; Japanese textbooks from the second grade on glorify warfare. The concept of the military hero is woven into the fabric of Japanese life.

The system of strictly disciplined society was bolstered by the unification of Japan by a military regime at the beginning of the seventeenth century, when Tokugawa Ieyasu founded the Tokugawa Shogunate. The idea of discipline is closely tied up with the family system, with its strong patriarchal flavor. The economic situation fosters discipline; individualism is virtually impossible in the closely-cramped economy. Japanese ethics teaches self-sacrifice to a degree difficult for many Americans to imagine.

It is to be deplored that age-old myths regarding the second-rate character of the Japanese military machine are being repeated at the present time. Japan's military woes in China have been attributed too often to Japanese inefficiency—rather than to geographic difficulties and the superb defensive stand by the Chinese. Smaller vessels of the Japanese navy have demonstrated excellent seamanship in maneuvers in inland China waters. The report has been widely circulated that Japanese make poor aviators; yet the efficiency of Japan's air arm has greatly improved since the early days of the war in China. The widespread and large-scale activities of the Japanese in their first attacks seem to bear this out.

THE JAPANESE, in taking the offensive, have won a tactical advantage at the start. That their efficient navy should win some early successes must be expected. But let us not be stampeded into a public clamor for an immediate offensive against the Japanese in retaliation. Admiral Yarnell, until recently the chief of our Asiatic Fleet, has spoken of a war of attrition and economic blockade, with at least a two-year calendar. It may well prove necessary to reroute our supply line to Manila and Singapore by way of the Cape of Good Hope. Our Navy has long studied this eventuality, and is prepared to take the most effective action. This appears likely to be a long, hard war.

Finally, we must not overlook the fact that the attack of Japan was a move which was closely integrated in Axis policy. The Japanese war is not a sideshow, but very much part of the aggression of Hitlerism. The curious character of Japanese diplomacy, waving an olive branch of peace while enemy raiders seek battle-stations, is not so much Japanese as Hitlerian in essence.

MEANWHILE, American public opinion must take a sane attitude toward the Japanese people. We are at war with the Japanese government and its militaristic leadership. We must never forget that there is an extremely strong pro-American sentiment in some sectors of Japanese opinion—even if for many years there has been little pro-Japanese sentiment in the United States. There is no need for a cultural, emotional, or intellectual program. When the day comes to discuss peace, American public opinion during the war may be a very important factor.

A responsible attitude is particularly necessary toward the Nisei—second-generation Japanese in the United States. There are about one-quarter million Japanese under the American flag. We can all rest assured that our Government has taken the necessary precautions to prevent sabotage and other types of disloyal action from any part of our society. The United States Army has accepted without qualification the Nisei as patriotic Americans, and every community must treat them with respect—in fact, with more sympathy and understanding than ever before. America is now at war; but its people have the ability to meet the emergency without the bluster and intolerance so typical of the Axis powers.

Reporter Finds Russian Winter As Grim as Its Reputation

By Henry C. Cassidy

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 18.—Spend a couple of nights out on the Russian steppes suffering wind, snow and cold and you have an idea what the Germans are up against on the Eastern Front.

I have just been through two such nights.

The winds at their wildest, whining and moaning weirdly on the broad plains, broken here and there by stark forest, strike every living thing exposed to them and make death by freezing an ever-present danger. That is one of the important reasons why the Germans are now falling back from advanced positions near Moscow and seeking winter quarters.

You have no conception of the violence of this Russian winter as you drive out of the towns and villages where the Soviet troops keep warm in well-equipped quarters.

It is only when you get into the open where the Germans have been forced to seek shelter in the forests or in shattered settlements that you feel the full effect.

A Worthy Foe

Then you see that the greatest invader, whether he be a Napoleon or a Hitler, met in this weather a foe more than worthy of his mettle.

I noticed the weather as an interesting natural phenomenon while riding out of Moscow toward the front on a bright, crisp day. Gradually slate-gray clouds covered the sky.

Toward nightfall the snow began and suddenly darkness came.

Groping through blinding swirls of snow in the pitch-black night, the car ran slower and slower. The road disappeared under the drifts. Finally the car lunged into a ditch settling up to the hubcaps in snow.

There were no signs of life anywhere. There was nothing to do but sit in the car until daybreak.

Then the weather became a personal foe.

There were six of us in the car, the Russian driver, a guide, one Australian, two British correspondents and myself. We sat in cramped quarters straight upright as much as would German motorized infantry in stalled troop carriers.

The wind screamed at doors and windows and penetrated the car. The snow drifted higher. The cold settled closer and closer.

We recalled the tales of people freezing to death, of wolves roaming in packs on these steppes. We started telling jokes until memories ran out of stories so old everyone knew them. Presently close together to keep warm we dozed fitfully.

Then the Gray Morning

Finally gray morning light filtered through the windows. An army truck plowing through the drifts came down the road. Troops heaved us out of the ditch and broke a path to the highway.

The second night was clear and star-lit with the wind ripping snow from the road and leaving a treacherous coat of ice. Driving out to a front line town, we came to a valley where the car could neither skid up the hill ahead nor retrace its path on the slippery hill behind us. There was nothing to do but walk back 4 miles to town.

Sliding over the ice, falling in the snow we trudged along much as would German troops trying to advance.

The wind stung our faces, snow clutched at our feet and the starlight wrought ominous shadows and strange mirages from distant trees.

Walking Indian file and talking in hushed tones to keep together without attracting attention, we finally reached the blacked-out town.

A door opened, letting a cloud of steam and a shaft of light into the night and we entered a warm haven to find food and a fire.

I hate to think what it might have been like if the Red army as well as the weather had been against us.

It Could Be Worse

THE TURNING POINT in this country's preparations for war was President Roosevelt's speech of alarm to Congress after Hitler's assault in the West demolished all resistance on land in that direction and left only Britain and the British fleet as a barrier between the enemy and a flabby and somewhat petulant United States. There had been a fuss in Washington some time before as to whether the President had declared, off the record, that this country's military frontier was on the Rhine. It was denied, perhaps only for diplomatic reasons, that he said so, but there can be no doubt now that he thought so or that he was right. When Hitler crashed beyond that frontier Mr. Roosevelt went straight to Congress and, in his dramatic way, to the very people, with a sharp warning of danger, and thus turned the first spadeful of earth in the construction of the great national war industry, which is now in such shape as may be.

It could be much better, but it could be terribly worse, for at that time we had, in round numbers, nothing at all, and were, as a people, reluctant to snap out of our apathy and preferred to laugh it all off.

The President gave some figures, obviously whipped up for him by the Army, on the ranges and the flying time between certain points outside our country and certain of our cities and, to make his message sting, brought Kansas City and other snug towns in the deep interior under the bomb sights of his hypothetical raiders.

HE WAS widely sneered at for this alarmist note, and Charles Lindbergh remarked in one of his expert discussions, drawing on the same knowledge which had caused him to write off Soviet Russia as a military incompetent, that we had reached a sorry day if it were true that we were dependent on another nation's fleet and soldiers for our own safety. For once, anyway, Lindbergh was right. It was a sorry day, for we were dependent on the British resistance, but most of us hated to admit as much, even to ourselves.

It must be remembered that much of our possible progress of last year was lost because we were going through one of our quadrennial mad phases, and an uncommonly bitter one, at that, in which most else was forgot but politics. The President was busy campaigning, and so were most of his helpers in the Government. Business was fighting him for reasons which need not be stated again, and the people had little thought of the war as a personal matter, although Wendell Willkie, the only other choice, was in practical agreement with his opponent on the danger.

Hitler, of course, knew that this national peculiarity of ours would interfere with our preparations, and he undoubtedly weighed that advantage in timing his war. Nevertheless, the program did stumble away to a clumsy start, and the first soldiers of the civilian mobilization were reporting in before the Army was really ready to handle or house them or really wanted them.

MANY HIGH OFFICERS would have preferred to wait until the housing and equipment were in hand, but they got their orders to make do and a few months thus were gained in the training of the new Army.

The war industry undoubtedly is pitifully small by comparison with a total effort which now seems to be shaping up, but it took time to stir the people and business and the Government was unable to handle more than a fraction of the war business that did develop. Businessmen were a pathetic sight in Washington during those months, wandering like bewildered bums in a strange railroad yard, reading meaningless numbers on the glass doors of thousands of offices in miles of corridors and wondering just what department had charge of the procurement of woolen drawers and getting plastered in lonely despair at night in the somber cocktails den of the National Capital.

Things may be none too good, even now, but suppose we had come to the day of Pearl Harbor as unskilled and unorganized in all the works and ways of war as we were when President Roosevelt cranked that siren.

Neighborly Response

By Barnet Nover

Latin America And The War

THE PEOPLE and Government of the United States have reason to be gratified by the manner in which our sister republics have rallied to our side in the present crisis. Never before in New World history did the spirit of inter-American friendship manifest itself more clearly and more ardently than in the days following the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

NOVER

The Good Neighbor policy has abundantly justified itself. The bread of amity cast on the waters by the Administration is coming back a hundredfold. Yet it would be unrealistic to assume thick-and-thin hemisphere solidarity is now an accomplished fact.

It is not. Much remains to be done before that great goal is achieved. It is by no means certain that it will be achieved. Yet no stone must be left unturned to bring about wholehearted unity of mind, heart and action among the 21 republics of the New World. That is why the conference of American foreign ministers which is to convene at Rio de Janeiro on January 15 may have an importance transcending that of any other inter-American gathering ever held.

A FEW HOURS after the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor, Costa Rica declared war on Japan, anticipating our own action by almost a day. Before the end of the week, nine Latin-American nations—Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Honduras, Cuba, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Haiti, El Salvador and Panama—were at war with all three Axis powers.

In addition, expressions and manifestations of support from the United States reached Washington from the other Latin-American republics. Mexico broke off relations with Japan, Germany and Italy. The ABC powers (Argentina, Brazil, Chile) together with Uruguay announced that they would continue to regard the United States as a nonbelligerent thus refraining from applying their neutrality laws to our warships and planes. In many places restrictions on Axis propaganda and the movement and activities of Axis agents were considerably tightened. And at the instance of Chile the Act of Havana was invoked and a conference of American foreign ministers was ordered.

IT IS INSTRUCTIVE to compare the response of Latin America on this occasion with what took place when the United States became a belligerent in 1917.

Then only two of the 20 Latin-American republics followed us immediately into the war. Those were Panama and Cuba, both of whom declared war on Germany the day after we did. Brazil did likewise on October 26—more than six months later—while Guatemala, Nicaragua, Haiti and Honduras came in the following year.

In 1917 this country's relations with Mexico were decidedly troubled. Today they are friendlier than they have ever been, a circumstance which in view of Mexico's strategic position is of great constructive importance. In 1917 Argentina insisted on a policy of strict and unbending neutrality. This is not the case today.

Credit for this gratifying change in the attitude of certain Latin-American nations from one of suspicion of and hostility to the United States to one of good will and friendship belongs in the first instance to President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Undersecretary Welles.

No policy pursued by the United States in modern times has been carried out with greater skill, devotion and persistence than that of the "good neighbor." Their efforts and the efforts of such men in the field as Spruille Braden at Bogota, Josephus Daniels at Mexico City, Jefferson Caffrey at Rio, Norman Armour at Buenos Aires, George Messersmith at Havana, to mention only a few, are bearing fine fruit.

BEFORE WE INDULGE in too great an orgy of self-congratulation, however, it would be well to look at the other side of the picture. There is another side. It is disturbing, for instance, that not one of the republics of South America has gone anywhere near as far in implementing its professions of solidarity with the United States as have the nine republics of Central America and the Caribbean.

No South American republic has gone so far as to break off relations with any Axis power. Yet the presence in their midst of German, Italian and Japanese diplomatic missions means the continued presence in this hemisphere of Axis centers of intrigue and propaganda.

Now we have the rather ominous spectacle of Acting President Ramon S. Castillo of Argentina in canceling permission for a mass meeting by the antitotalitarian organization, Accion Argentina, the purpose of which was "to pay homage to President Roosevelt" and to reaffirm the adhesion of the Argentine people to the democratic cause. It is true that Senor Castillo has banned pro-Axis meetings as well. Apparently his recent statement that the state of siege which he has put into effect in Argentina was for the purpose of suppressing the propaganda of powers at war with the United States is to be taken with a grain of salt. More to the point was the statement he gave out soon after the Pearl Harbor incident when he declared that Argentina proposed to pursue a policy of strictest neutrality.

Fortunately there is abundant evidence to suggest that now as for some time Senor Castillo's attitude runs counter to the attitude of the Argentine people.

Despite certain countercurrents, as evidenced by President Castillo's recent actions, the trend toward hemisphere solidarity continues. Nor is this merely a matter of sentiment and idealism. The alliance of Axis powers against the United States is a menace not only to this country but to every other nation on this hemisphere. For any of them to assume that they can remain unscathed in the midst of a world conflagration is to repeat the most tragic mistake of our era.

Conferees Meet Today on D. C. Gas Tax Boost

Whether the District gasoline tax should be raised from its present rates of 2 cents per gallon to 3 cents, as voted by the Senate, or 4 cents, as voted by the House, will be discussed by conferees of both Houses at 10 a. m. today in the Senate District Committee room.

Senate conferees will be Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the District Committee; Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, and Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, committee members.

The House District Committee members named conferees yesterday are Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

An increase of 1 cent in the tax rate, as voted by the Senate, was the recommendation of the House District Committee when the measure was brought to the floor in October. An amendment by Representative Springer (Republican), of Indiana, brought the increase to 2 cents, and the amended bill passed the House by a vote of 76 to 32.

The 1-cent raise was recommended by Senator Burton following three weeks of hearings on the measure. He told the Senate Wednesday that the 1-cent increase would finance the District's highway improvement plan adequately within ten years. The Senate vote in favor of the 1-cent increase was 52 to 27.

The House yesterday concurred in a technical amendment to the District "blackout" bill, duplicating the Senate's action of Wednesday. The bill was returned from the White House to clarify the intent of the legislation which would empower the Federal Government to pay the initial one million dollar cost of the District civilian air-raid protection program.

Senator McCarran and Renah F. Camalier, District Committee counsel, will inspect facilities of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. at 11 a. m. today, acting on the resolution of Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas. The Texas Senator last week requested an investigation of the phone company with a view to urging more equipment and employes as a result of the increased wartime demands.

Capitol telephone representatives yesterday informed the District Committee chairman that new equipment shortly to be installed on Capitol Hill will include 20 more trunk lines, six stations, three direct lines to the Office of Production Management, and 10 additional direct lines to the Government exchange. The present staff of 45 switchboard operators will be increased by from 6 to 10 employes.

Marine Radio Course Offered

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt yesterday called for licensed amateur radio operators to apply at State employment offices for free training in Marine radiotelegraphy.

Enrollment of radio operators is a part of the Nation-wide drive to recruit 40,000 trainees to man new merchant ships of the United States Maritime Commission now being carried on by State employment service offices.

"Any young man, 18 to 23 years of age, in good health, of good character, and having completed two years of high school, including one year of algebra, may be admitted and should apply at his nearest State employment office," McNutt said.

Radio students receive from $36 to $80 per month during the ten-month training period course, in addition to free clothing, food, quarters, textbooks, and medical and dental care.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

Catholics Back 'War for Peace'

A special Catholic bishops' committee to promote study and widespread publication of Pope Pius XII's peace plan, yesterday pledged itself to assist the Government in being "the instrument of Almighty God for the setting up of a new era in which human rights" will offer to all peoples "prosperity and a chance for the pursuit of happiness."

The statement followed a meeting in Chicago Tuesday and Wednesday. Other sessions will be held there during the Christmas holidays. The committee members are Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, Chicago; Bishop James H. Ryan, Omaha, and Bishop A. J. Muench, Fargo, N. Dak.

The bishops said that without entering the realm of statesmanship, they "will try to make clear the indispensable postulates for a just peace" based on the Papal Peace Points, leaving to statesmen the "details of the peace treaty."

The committee said its purpose is "to try to help, as becomes churchmen, our Government in being the instrument of Almighty God for the setting up of a new era in which human rights, human dignity, human freedoms, and a sane human solidarity will offer to all peoples prosperity and a chance for the pursuit of happiness."

Need Stressed For Chaplains

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, yesterday told the General Commission on Army and Navy Chaplains that the soldier needs two things: a firm faith in his country's cause and spiritual strength.

"The comforts the chaplains give the soldiers are beyond any reckoning," he said.

The commission, representing 30 Protestant bodies, was said by its leaders at the meeting in the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, to be facing "a real problem in helping to provide properly qualified chaplains for an expanding Army and Navy. This difficulty, however, is being met by a general awakening by the various denominations to the needs, a conference spokesman said.

Brig. Gen. William R. Arnold, chief of Army chaplains, told the commission that what the chaplain service wants is organization and specialization and it is now getting those things.

Concerning specialization, he said "chaplains should be chaplains and not anything else."

Included among those attending the meeting were the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Dr. William B. Pugh, stated clerk of the Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Dr. Samuel McRea Cavert, general secretary, Federal Council of Churches.

Flanagan Named to D.C. Utilities Commission

The Senate yesterday received President Roosevelt's nomination of James H. Flanagan, supervising utilities analyst with the Securities Exchange Commission, for membership on the District Public Utilities Commission.

If confirmed, Flanagan will fill the vacancy created by the death of Riley Elgen last February. His appointment would bring the P. U. C. to its full three-man membership. The other members are Chairman Gregory Hankin, appointed last month, and Engineer Commissioner Charles W. Kutz. Members receive an annual salary of $7500.

Renah F. Camalier, Senate District Committee counsel, said last night the committee will consider Flanagan's nomination in the near future.

Flanagan, 45, has been a resident of Washington since December 1, 1935. He lives at 4419 Volta Place Northwest, is married, and has two children, Marion, 13, and Mary Louise, 3.

He was born in Newton, Mass., and was graduated from the Newton Technical High School. From 1920 to 1922 he studied at the Georgetown Foreign Service School. In 1922 he went to Persia with Dr. Arthur Misspaugh on a Government financial mission.

Ex-Domei Writer Views Japs as Hardy

By Clark H. Kawakami

Former Correspondent of Domei, Official Japanese News Agency. (Written Expressly for International News Service)

If Japan succeeds in knocking out Singapore, Hongkong and the Philippines, at the same time gaining control of the vital raw materials of Malaya and possibly the Indies in addition to cutting off aid to China, it will require not one but several years of hard, costly fighting to defeat her. But——

If Japan does not succeed and is forced to continue the present heavy drain on her war reserves without replenishment, while her people suffer increased hardships and the demoralizing effect of aerial bombings, there is reason to hope that Japan will crack within a year, perhaps a little longer.

But let us not make the grievous mistake of believing, as some newspaper columnists have told us in the past, that the American fleet could sail out, whip Japan into surrender and be back at Pearl Harbor in six weeks.

That is the kind of error which, fortunately for the democratic cause, Hitler has made in Russia.

Eleven days have now elapsed since the fateful Sunday on which Japan launched her well-nigh unbelievable attacks upon British and American strongholds throughout the Pacific. Reprehensible as those attacks were, and grievous as were the losses which the element of surprise enabled Japan to inflict, they have had two very wholesome moral and psychological effects in the United States which can only serve to strengthen this country's war effort and contribute toward ultimate victory.

These effects are, firstly, the forging of American opinion into one unified whole in support of prosecuting the war against world Nazism to victory, and, secondly, the elimination of the dangerous assumption that Japan can be easily disposed of within a few months.

Few Japanese ever succeed in comprehending American psychology, but not even Tokyo's warlords could have expected the most rabid of America's former isolationists to react to such wanton aggression in any other way than they did.

Why, then, did Japan not content herself with another piecemeal move into Thailand? Such a step would undoubtedly have started the ball rolling toward war, but reasonable doubt exists that it would have precipitated immediate shooting hostilities.

The answer, I believe, lies in a combination of German pressure and strategic economic considerations. Germany, stalled in Russia, was pressuring Tokyo as never before to plunge into the war to prevent the balance from tipping in favor of the Anglo-American coalition. With the Japanese-American peace talks deadlocked, the Germans found in Premier Tojo a ready listener, and it now seems clear that Japan's fatal decision was reached soon after Tojo took office in October.

For the Germans, a halfhearted Japanese move into Thailand would have meant little relief, and on Japan's side, too, there must have been the calculation that, if war with the United States was bound to come eventually, it was bettter for Japan to fight before ABCD economic pressure snapped the sinews of her fighting strength.

So Japan, undoubtedly with the aid of German strategists, worked out the daring battle plans which went into operation December.

Cuba Fears Strife if Spain Enters War

Copyright by New York Times.

Havana, Dec. 18.—Fear that animosity between Spanish republicans, comprising a majority of the refugees here, and the Spanish Falange organization in Cuba may result in flare-ups which will involve all Spanish residents if Spain enters the war is being felt here.

While the Falange is conceded to be powerful throughout the island, it is estimated to embrace only a small portion of the 200,000 Spaniards registered as residents.

Recent demands at public meetings for an immediate declaration of war against Spain and street demonstrations against the Falange and Spanish regional societies are viewed with much concern by Spaniards here. A group of Spanish commercial firms jointly asked the government for protection yesterday. Some Spaniards are quietly withdrawing funds from banks, apparently in anticipation of their funds being frozen.

Minister of the Treasury Garcia Montes this afternoon, however, denied reports the government will confiscate or assume control of the property of Spanish residents, and he assured them the fullest protection.

The government also has announced full protection for all foreigners. Minister of the Interior Victor Vega recently denied that the government contemplates confiscation of alien property, explaining that only the property of Germans, Italians and Japanese interned after proper investigation will be taken over by the government and placed in the hands of the custodian of alien enemy property. Orders have been issued to the armed forces throughout the island to protect aliens and their properties.

President Signs 10-Billion-Dollar Bill

The United States pumped ten billion dollars more into its war effort yesterday when President Roosevelt signed a supplemental appropriation bill for that amount.

The measure, third largest of its kind in the Nation's history, carries funds to buy equipment for a two-million-man army, critical supplies for a 3,200,000-man army and to produce vast quantities of tanks, guns, ships and planes for both the Army and the Navy.

Here Are Some Thrifty, Wholesome Meat Dishes

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor

IS YOUR budget getting warped completely out of shape because it is being hit high and low at this time of the year? Christmas shopping, increased living prices, and the buying of victory stamps and bonds make an inroad into the best-lined purses.

But as the old Roman said, "find a way or make it." Finding is easier than making for the cook.

Martha Ellyn

Revamping the food selection to retain the high standard of wholesomeness and healthfullness, yet spend less money, is a food equation that may be solved by putting memory into play.

Perhaps there are some thrifty meat dishes that you have forgotten entirely lately. Price doesn't indicate nutritive value, you know. Often the lower priced cut of meat may be as rich in flavor and equally as nutritious as the higher priced cut. Supply and demand determine meat prices. For this reason, the thrift-conscious shopper chooses the less demanded cuts and by skillful cooking makes something that is extra-special.

Tax-Payer Specials

Let's thumbs-down on high-cost cuts of meat and instead thumb through our cookbooks and recipe files and find some tax payers? They are the pivotal dishes that will be thrifty, nutritious and attractive.

The imperial turkey and the royal goose hold the spotlight on Christmas and New Year's, so this is a grand time for the thrifty porker to make his appearance and give their majesties some real competition.

A regal crown roast of pork is a meat that the knowing cook will not pass by. And not only because it gives good nutrition and can be bought at an interesting price, but because it makes an attractive dish and simplifies carving for the carver. What with more intricate carving o fthe turkey less than a week off, no one wants to risk disgruntling the man of the house with an overdose of carving.

But before you go to market to buy your fat pig, sit down and plan your menu. There's no accounting for family tastes, but here is a menu that should arouse even a lagging appetite.

Dinner Menu

Broiled Grapefruit
Crown Roast of Pork
Glazed Apples
Buttered Noodles with Almonds
Green Beans
Red Cabbage Salad
Whole Wheat Rolls Butter
Apricot Creme Cookies
Coffee Tea

The crown roast of pork is comprised of two pieces of loin. Your butcher will prepare it for you. Have him saw off the rib ends. Remember that the color of lean pork is a grayish pink, turning to a delicate rose in the older animal. It should be well marbled and covered with a firm white fat that is free from fibers. Then prepare the roast in this way:

Crown Roast of Pork—Wipe with clean cloth. Season with salt and pepper. Place the roast in a dripping pan with the rib ends down and the meaty part of roast uppermost, so fat from the roast bastes the rib ends. Do not add water. Roast uncovered i na moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 30 minutes per pound. If a meat thermometer is used, cook until the thermometer registers 185 degrees. To serve, fill center of crown with buttered noodles and a few shaved almonds. Or if the family prefers mashed or browned potatoes then fill the crown with the favored food.

Glazed Apples—Choose firm apples that will keep their shape. Peel but do not core. Make a sirup of sugar, red cinnamon candies and water. Cook the apples shlowly in the sirup until they are bright red and tender, but not soft. When ready to serve, bank the base of the crown roast with the apples and sprigs of parsley. If the apples are placed on the side of the roast toward the guests or family, it will facilitate the serving.

Veal Vegetable Bird—Buy two pounds of veal steak cut ¼-inch thick. Clean five small carroisk and slice one onion. Wrap the whole cleaned carrots and a slice of onion in a veal cutlet. Fasten with a pick. Season with salt and pepper. Dip in beaten egg to which has been added 2 tablespoons water. Brown in hot fat. Add one cup water. Cover and cook slowly until carrots are done. about one hour. Six servings.

Western Ranch Meat Loaf—Buy two pounds ground chuck. Brown one medium sized onion that has been diced and ¾ cup diced celery in ¼ cup fat. Combine with 1-3 cup diced green pepper, 1 tablespoon salt, 2 eggs, 3 cups soft bread crumbs and ½ cup water. Add half the dressing (1½ cups) to the meat, mixing well. Pat out half the meat mixture in a 2-quart loaf pan. Cover with remaining dressing, then top with remaining meat mixture. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 1¼ hours. Baste twice with ½ cup tomato juice and 2 tablespoons melted butter too keep loaf moist.

Lamb Shoulder Chops—Buy lamb shoulder chops cut ¾ to 1 inch thick. Use a heavy fry pan and pan-broil slowly until well browned. Turn and brown on other side. Serve medium or well done. Serve hot on hot plates, and a suggestion is to serve buttered peas and little pickled onions and minted apple sauce with the chops.

Scrambled Eggs in Bologna Cups—Combine in a double boiler 4 eggs, 4 tablespoons milk, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon butter. Heat and stir until set, but do not overcook. Pan fry bologna slices slowly in buttter until brown and cupped. Serve the creamy eggs in the bologna cups.

Cheery Hospitality With a Cup of Tea

The holiday season is the time when many an unexpected guest drops in. Then is the time to brew a cup of tea and offer some spontaneous hospitality. You can make tea sandwiches in a matter of minutes. Here are two unusual combinations which will give the tea hour the "something different" you like.

Cream Cheese and Mincemeat Sandwich—Soften by beating with a spoon, 1 package (3 oz.) cream cheese. Add, mixing well, 2 tablespoons prepared mincemeat. Spread on bread and cut in rounds and other attractive shapes with cooky cutters. Serve open-faced style with bits of candied cherry or angelica on top.

Cheese Peanut Butter Tea Crackers—Combine, mixing to paste, ¼ cup shredded sharp cheese, ¼ cup peanut butter and 2 tablespoons chopped parsley. Spread on crisp crackers. Serve with hot tea and lemon.

With the Greatest of Ease

The man of the house will register joy when a crown roast of pork is served because of the ease with which it can be carved. The roast shown above, is filled with noodles topped with slicet almonts. The glazed apples garnishing the platter are as delicious as they are attractive. This is an excellent meat buy just before the holidays for it gives the pocketbook a breathing spell and also provides excellent nourishment

New Breakfast Food Provides Vitamins, Minerals

Breakfast is the logical place to start with the intake of foods containing nutrients that are necessary in the diet. Vitamin B1 is necessary for general good health and active life. Certainly these are days that we are all going to be active in a number of ways for our country.

A new breakfast food has just taken a bow in the local stores that will exactly fill the bill. This ready-to-eat cereal is made of oats. We have all known that oatmeal is one of our best breakfast foods, but now has come one that is just as nutritious but in a new and novel form. It is of unique shape since it is blown from guns into little ringlets that resemble tiny doughnuts. These ringlets make a strong appeal to children.

This cereal has a special virtue in that it offers excellent nutritional value, plus the convenience of the ready-to-serve form, and a new taste-appeal. Ground oatmeal is its basis (containing 75 per cent), and extra crispness and flavor is given by its corn and tapioca content. This newcomer is nutritionally similar to oatmeal, since it provides Vitamin B1, Vitamin B2, phosphorous and iron.

If you like a breakfast food that will stay crisp in milk or cream this nutritious food will answer the call.

Recipe Contest

THEME—Thrift Dinner. Give menu, including items of low cost. Meal must be well-balanced and consideration given to contrast in flavor, color and texture. Fish baked in tomato sauce, potato croquettes and green peas make an interesting meal.

QUALIFICATION: Recipe must not be taken from service cookbooks. All recipes must be kitchen-tested, practical, carefully written, exact and level measurements and number of servings given. Only one entry may be submitted by a person. All entires must be signed in longhand. (They will be disqualified if name is typewritten.)

PRIZE—First, $10; second, $5; third, $3; ten $1 prizes.

Much Out of Little

A few chopped figs, some grated lemon rind (about ½ teaspoonful) and slivers of toasted almonds give extra fling to confectioner's or boiled white icing spread on white or yellow cake. In fact, it makes quite a dessert out of a plain cake.

Fruit Cake Spoilage Can Be Prevented By Mold Retardant

The loss of fruit cake due to mold can now be eliminated with a mold retardant. The effectiveness of the new substance, recently developed in DuPont laboratories, and the need for its use, were strikingly demonstrated by an incident last year when a large bakery, which ordinarily uses the retardant in its fruit cakes, omited it for one day's production. About 7000 cakes were returned because of mold.

As mold growth is not usually detected until the package is opened, the nuisance has fallen chiefly on the housewife.

A worthwhile amount of food conservaton can be accomplished if the consumer will demand from the grocer a brand of fruit cake, bread and other baked goods in which mold retardant is used.

In choosing fruit cakes for Christmas gifts, it will be reassuring, too, to know that the cake will surely keep for the period which they are widely expected to last.

The presence of mold spores is not due to lack of sanitation. They are commonly present in the air, and are found in the cleanest bakeries, food factories, and home kitchen, where they settle on the food.

Build Your Menu Around This New Cream of Shrimp Soup

HAVE you ever thought what a difficult time it would be in the kitchen if there were no canned soups? The soup manufacturers seem to think of everything, for now along comes an old English firm that has been processing foods for 200 years with a delicious Cream of Shrimp Soup.

This soup comes ready to serve and the busy homemaker will appreciate in these days of preparing for Christmas and doing her bit for defense, that there is a delicious food that has only to be heated to be ready for eating.

This is no ordinary soup for the shrimp are caught in the warm water off the Georgia coast, and speedily handled, being rushed to the cannery, where they are culled, trimmed and peeled under the supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture. Then when the shrimp arrives at the plant where they are made into soup they are again inspected, chopped and lightly simmered before going into the great soup kettles.

Here's an idea for a menu in which this soup will fit admirably:

Luncheon Menu

Cream of Shrimp Soup
French Bread with Garlic
Endive—Avocado Salad
Prune Souffle Coffee

There's a prune souffle that "won't fall." That is because it is not baked—although a properly baked souffle will not tumble either. For an easy dessert at a quick luncheon try the following recipe:

Unbaked Prune Souffle—Beat 2 egg-whites until stiff and they stand up in peaks but are not dry. fold in 2-3 cup prune pulp, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon lemon juice and a dash of salt. Pile the souffle lightly into sherbet glasses, serve topped with whipped cream or custard sauce. A few nut meats sprinkled over the surface give crunchiness and richness. Do not fold the prune pulp into the whites until serving time. Serves 4.

Turnip Scoop

Boil large-sized turnips, scoop out centers and fill with buttered, cooked Brussels sprouts, reheat in moderate oven for 5 minutes. Fill baked halves of small squash with creamed corn, lima beans, or cabbage and put diced cooked celery into escalloped corn mixture.

Sauces Indispensable At Christmastime

Sauces must be on tap at the holiday season for puddings and cakes. Both hard sauce and fluffy sauce have their merits. Here are the recipes for both:

Hard Sauce—Cream until very soft 1-3 cup butter. Add gradually creaming until smooth, 1 cup confectioners' sugar. Add 1½ teaspoons vanilla, rum, sherry or any other flavoring that you like. Keep in cool place until served.

Fluffy Sauce—Beat until quite stiff, 1 egg white. Add 6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar, a tablespoon at a time. Beat with rotary egg beater after each addition. Mix together, 1 beaten egg yolk, a pinch of salt and ¼ teaspoon vanilla, sherry, rum or other flavoring. Fold beaten egg yolk into the white, then fold in ¼ cup shipping cream, whipped after measuring. If not used at once, keep cool and mix well just before serving.

Senate Group Tightens House Price Curb Bill

A Senate Banking subcommittee yesterday tightened the House-approved price control bill "in substantial compliance with Administration views," restoring general licensing provisions and vesting price powers in a single Administrator.

The subcommittee all but completed action on the bill. The only price control provision undisposed of was the controversial House bill ceiling of 110 per cent of parity on farm prices.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of the subcommittee, predicted a full committee report will be ready for Senate consideration on the first day of the next session, now tentatively set for January 5.

The three-way House formula for controlling farm prices, meanwhile, was modified by elimination of the so-called Paul Brown amendment which forbade price fixing below the average level from 1919 to 1929. Instead, the subcommittee approved only the House provision forbidding fixing of farm prices below market quotations on last October 1. On the third prong to the House proposal, the 110 per cent of parity ceiling, the subcommittee could not agree and a decision was postponed.

Henderson's Order

Brown informed the Senate of the subcommittee's farm price action to head off a move by 28 Senators to adopt a Senate resolution calling on Price Administrator Henderson to suspend his December order placing a ceiling on edible oils and fats. Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, protesting the 12½ cents a pound top price set by Henderson for cotton seed oil, laid aside his motion after Brown promised relief through the price bill October 1 level.

Striken from the bill by the Senate subcommittee was the House provision for a board of review with authority to veto the price administrator's rulings. Licensing requirements were returned to the bill, but power to revoke licenses was denied the administrator and left to the courts. The House lead was followed in omitting wage ceilings, opposed by the Administration.

Subcommittee provisions require that licenses be issued to anyone who has a retail or wholesale outlet and these could not be revoked except by the courts on action initiated by the administrator against violators.

Rent Freezing Move

Other action taken by the subcommittee:

Approved power for the Government to buy and sell commodities to stabilize prices.

Provided that rents might be frozen as of a date not later than April 1, 1940, as had the House.

Exempted common carriers, insurance companies and utilities from price control action.

Removed the House exemption on fisheries.

Provided for termination of the act by June 30, 1943.

Validated maximum prices already fixed by the administrator, provided they conform with provisions of the bill.

Although no decision was reached between a 100 or 110 per cent of parity farm price ceiling, the definition of parity was amended to permit use of the season's average price for a commodity in determining its price level.

Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 18 (AP).—Mrs. Reginald Vanderbuilt said today that her 17-year-old daughter, Gloria, would be married to Pasquale (Pat) Di Cicco, 32, at noon Sunday, December 28, at the Santa Barbara Mission.

Actor Bruce Cabot will be best man. The ushers will be Actors Franchot Tone and Errol Flynn, Aviation Magnate Howard Hughes and Albert Broccoli, a cousin of Di Cicco.

'Merry Christmas' Isn't for Him

An unidentified thief made an unusual "haul" last night when he removed several packages from the parked car of Carl H. Allen, 609 South Lee Street, Alexandria. Allen told police that his car which was parked in the first block of Massachusetts Avenue Northwest was loaded with Christmas presents worth $42, including a roulette wheel, a toy demountable sailboat, an electric vibration machine, a volume on fish, and three sets of perfume and sachet powder.

Skilled Labor Needed for Hawaii Work

Uncle Sam wants a crew of skilled workers to go to Hawaii.

The appeal for assistance was made yesterday through the offices of the Virginia State Employment Service at Alexandria which asked laborers, helpers and mechanics willing to go to Hawaii to report to an office of the employment service in Virginia, to the District Employment Center at 928 Fifth Street Northwest, or to local Maryland offices of the U. S. Employment Service.

A trainload of workers will leave Washington soon for the Pacific. First-class transportation will be provided the whole way by the Government.

The announcement calls for 100 laborers to be paid 62 cents an hour, 100 helpers to receive 74 cents an hour, and a variety of journeymen mechanics to be paid from $1.02 to $1.90 an hour.

Single persons are preferred because families will not be allowed to accompany the workers, although married men may be permitted to go. Both white and Negro workers are desired, the announcement said.

Only persons 18 to 45 years old with a minimum of four years of grade school will be accepted. All men will be asked to pass a rigid physical examination and an FBI fingerprint examination indicating they have no criminal records or are suspected of subversive activity. Heavy drinkers will not be accepted, the announcement said.

Those desiring to go need take only $10 with them for meals.

Allied Conference On Supreme War Council Reported

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—Allied military and political experts were authoritatively reported tonight to be conferring on establishment of a supreme war council to direct strategy, pool resources, and checkerboard their man power around the globe in the fight against the Axis.

Some quarters here felt that Washington would be a logical site for headquarters of the organization embracing representatives of the United States, Britain, Russia, China, the Netherlands, and their Allies.

"Announcements of great importance are expected soon," one source said.

Clement R. Atlee, lord privy seal who spoke in the absence of Prime Minister Churchill, told the House of Commons that discussions were under way for "concerting Allied war plans," and that arrangements with the Chinese high command "are well advanced."

Aside from immediate strategic problems dictated by the great Russian offensive and the British sweep in North Africa—somewhat offset by initial Japanese gains in the Pacific—such a supreme council apparently would deal with the status of the nonbelligerent countries such as Spain, Portugal, Turkey and France.

Ordnance Plant Blast Injures Five in Ohio

Sandusky, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—An explosion was heard at the 40-million-dollar Plum Brook ordnance plant near here tonight and two injured men were brought to Providence Hospital.

State highway patrolmen reported one unit of a TNT production line was wrecked, and were told that five men were hurt.

At Providence Hospital one man was reported to have received a fractured leg and another was said to have been burned, not seriously. They were identified as Louis Harlan, of Sandusky, and Austin James, of Oberlin.

A motorist on his way to a church bordering the Plum Brook grounds said the explosion looked like a July 4 celebration.

When he reached the church he found the congregation huddled in the basement.

U. S. Staff in Tokyo Reported Well

American Embassy staff members in Tokyo are in good health and well supplied with food, the State Department announced last night. The report, dated December 11, came to the department through the foreign office of the Swiss government, which is representing American interests in Japan.

Negotiations for the exchange of diplomatic personnel are now in progress, through neutral intermediaries, between the United States and all the Axis powers.

Otis W. Rhoades, of Frederick, Md., vice consul at Kobe, also is in the embassy compound.

Syrian Club to Party

The Syrian-Washingtonian Club will hold a Christmas party and dance tonight at 8 o'clock at the Hayloft, 1326 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Men in uniform will be admitted free.

Women Ask Nonessential Expense Cut

District Federation Forms Committee For Conservation Of Vital Materials

The District Federation of Women's Clubs went on record yesterday to urge Congress to cut out nonessential nondefense expenditures.

A new committee on conservation, with Mrs. Newton C. Wing as chairman, was set up at the federation's monthly meeting at 2600 Sixteenth Street Northwest. The committee will promote clubs' cooperation in conservation of materials vital to defense.

The federation approved a 1-lution of the Takoma Park Women's Club that men brought to court for even minor sex crimes should have mental tests to determine their responsibility. The resolution further recommended that a committee of legal, medical and psychiatric experts be asked by the federation to aid in determining the proper court procedure for protecting the civil and legal rights of these individuals and protecting society from them.

The Federation approved a 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax, and at the same time opposed a 2-cent increase.

An award of $50 for the best religious essay by a student in any college or university in the District was offered by Mrs. Frank J. Mulkern, chairman of the federation's division of public instruction. The federation accepted the offer, with a rules committee and judges to be named later.

Members of the federation yesterday were asked to sign up for hospitality to service men for Christmas dinner.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, a former president of the federation, made a talk on the Bill of Rights in connection with its current anniversary.

Mrs. Sidney A. Anderson gave the opening devotional talk. Mrs. Arthur Charles Watkins, president of the federattion, presided.

Tea Will Honor Two N. Y. Women Today

Mrs. Oswald Lord, of New York, civilian defense leader, and Mrs. Paul Rittenhouse, also of New York, national director of Girl Scouts, will be honored at a tea this afternoon by Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, chairman of the National Advisory Committee, at her home, 2021 N Street Northwest.

Bill of Rights Program Planned

The Political Study Club will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights at its meeting tomorrow afternoon, in connection with its Christmas party at 2:30, at the Washington Club.

Mrs. Herbert Griffith, a member of the club and direct descendant of George Mason, author of the Bill of Rights, will be among the honor guests.

The Rev. Armand Eyler, rector of St. Margarets Episcopal Church, will speak on the Bill of Rights. A group from the Glee Club of George Washington University, directed by Dr. Robert Harmon, will sing. Mrs. Harmon also will be among the guests of honor.

Charles P. Taft Talks on Civil Liberty Today

"Civil Liberties in Wartime" will be discussed by Charles P. Taft, assistant director of defense, health and welfare services, at the monthly membership meeting of the Voteless District League of Women Voters at 12:30 today at the Y. W. C. A.

Before the United States became involved in the war, the discussion of civil liberties was scheduled, in line with this week's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

The discussion group of the Department of Government and its operation, headed by Mrs. Harold Stone, which has been studying the subject of civil liberties during the past month, has pointed out the danger that civil liberties will be imperilled by the kind of hysteria which gripped the Nation during the First World War. The group has emphasized that the league can well use its influence to make for a better understanding of the reasons why civil liberties should be preserved as much as possible in war time, even though in some respects they must be curtailed.

The conduct and objectives of the war will be discussed at the January meeting of the league. Mrs. Harvey E. Becknell, chairman of the Department of Foreign Policy, has been named head of a committee to formulate a program for the meeting.

The problem of conserving social gains in time of war will be discussed at the February meeting.

Committees are being appointed to conduct an intensive study of Federal and local taxation. Its findings will be presented at a public meeting early in March.

Other league projects are being reviewed, to determine how the league can be most effective in time of war, officers said yesterday.

World Y.W.C.A. Dinner Honors Miss Bondfield

Miss Margaret Bondfield, former Minister of Labor of Great Britain, pointed out that thought was being given in England to post-war reconstruction, in a talk last night at an informal dinner in her honor.

The World's Y. W. C. A., which has temporary headquarters in Washington during the war, gave the dinner at the Dodge Hotel.

The guest list included: Miss Marianne Mills, Miss Pearl Carruthers, Miss Marcia Dunham, Mrs. Donald Blaisdell, Mrs. Ruth M. Bronson, Miss Elsie Brown, Mrs. J. Birdsall Calkins, Mme. Dreyfus-Barney, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Miss Elizabeth Eastman, Mrs. Mark Eldredge, Mrs. Julia W. Hamilton, Mrs. C. L. Hsia, Mrs. James H. Keeley, Miss Minnie J. Lovell, Miss Mary Craig McGeachy, Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, Mrs. James K. McClintock, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Miss Elsa M. Peterson, Mrs. Fred Wright, Miss Mary Winslow, Miss Frances Williams.

Miss Bondfield has long been actively interested in Y. W. C. A. work and addressed the convention of the association in the United States three years ago in Columbus, Ohio.

Miss Bondfield will speak on "Training and Employment of Women In Defense Industries in Great Britain" at a dinner of the Washington branch, American Association of University Women, tonight at its clubhouse.

Chevy Chase Juniors Meet

Conservation of human and material resources is a paramount task before every American citizen, Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, chairman of the woman's division of the Montgomery County division of the Maryland Council of Defense, told the Junior Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., last night.

She spoke at its Christmas meeting at the clubhouse, where holiday festivities were combined with a consideration of the group's defense activities.

Mrs. Whalen pointed out the importance of keeping up mental health under the stress of war, because morale is a vital factor. Calling attention to the difficult situation in hospital facilities, she urged that individuals guard their health not only for their own sake but in order that hospitalization may be available to those who need it more.

A series of low-cost meals, which have the necessary food values, are being worked out for use in her division, she said, displaying a vitamin chart at the meeting. She stressed conservation of materials which are needed in the defense program.

The club last night, according to its custom, filled Christmas stockings, to be given to the Montgomery County Welfare Board for distribution.

"All's Fair," a one-act play by Angela McDermott, was presented by the drama section under the direction of Mrs. Robert Dunlop. The cast included Miss Violet Karchem, Miss Elizabeth Whiele, Miss Sally McCormick and Miss Ann Burke. A series of Christmas carols completed the program.

Party Canceled

On the list of fetes canceled because of the war is the dinner-dance that had been planned by the officers and ladies of the Judge Advocate General's office on January 4, at the Officers Club, Army War College.

D. A. R. Offers Its Services

Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, has sent a message to President Roosevelt that "from coast to coast" members of the D. A. R. "stand ready and eager to serve whenever needed," it was announced at headquarters here yesterday.

More than 50 members of the staff of the National Society will form first aid classes under Red Cross instruction. Robert W. Thrush, assistant national director, first aid and accident prevention, Red Cross, this week addressed a staff meeting at D. A. R. headquarters. The meeting was called for the group to organize for self-protection and service to others. Mrs. Paul Scharf was elected chairman.

At the meeting of the national board of management, with Mrs. Pouch presiding, a report of flourishing membership was made yesterday, with 1162 new members having been voted into the society.

New chapters were confirmed in Jackson Heights, Long Island; in Redford, Mich.; in Windsor Heights, Iowa, and in East Columbia, Tex., bringing the total number of chapters to 2560.

Among potential chapters are those which will be organized at Baton Rouge, La.; Indio, Calif.; Great Bend, Kans., and Las Vegas, Nev.; Jasper, Ala., and Ann Arbor, Mich.

Entertaining Here Goes Informal For the Duration

Lunching ladies in informal groups took over the spotlight yesterday with Capital society gearing itself to the informal entertaining of wartime.

Sitting in a group at LaSalle du Bois were the Second Secretary of the Polish Embassy and Countess Lasocka—she in a chic black chapeau, the pink trim of which perfectly matched the wall behind her—Mrs. Phillip Coffin, and her sister, Donna Julia Brambilla. At another table, Mrs. Engene Roberts chatted with Miss Sylvia Szchenyi, who was hatless and near them were Earl Smith and another hatless luncher, Mrs. George Mercer-Nairne.

Mrs. Arthur Krock, in a frock of pale coffee crepe, chatted with Dr. Engene de Savitsch and Mrs. Jaspar DuBose and Mrs. Edward Reed formed another luncheon twosome, as did Mrs. Ronald Lyman, jr., and Mrs. George Howe.

Singer Gives Girls a Cue On Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain

THE FRESH-scrubbed type of beauty appears to be the reward of the simple life. All the girls who have it turn out to be confirmed believers in such homey beauty agents as soap, sun, calisthenics and plenty of milk.

As an example, there is Trudy Irwin, the charming teen-age singer with Kay Kyser's band. Trudy is a hard-working girl who spends a good part of her spare time going places by train, plane or bus, and who had been forced to reduce her beauty routine to the fundamentals.

Scrub the Face

She says you can't dip into a jar for that well-scrubbed look and that, although it might not work out as well for your skin, she is sold forever on the magic of a complexion brush in conjunction with a good, bland soap. She scrubs her face twice a day until it glows, then uses lots of cold water as an astringent. Whenever she notices a tendency to dryness, she plies her skin with cream. Otherwise she skips it. The worst thing a girl can do, she declares, is to rub cream into her skin and leave it there to collect grime.

A brush is also credited with the sheen of her hair—although she thinks eating an egg every night might have something to do with it. She is right. Eggs are one of the best sources of protein and it is a protein component which makes both hair and nails.

Her hairbrushing is performed with a fresh, clean brush and that's the way, she has found, to keep her hair clean longer. Brushing for a few minutes a day also makes a hair-do last—especially when the brush is used to put the hair in place. Running a comb through one's locks separates the strands and leaves a confused-looking mop, whereas the brush holds the hair together and gives it that professional touch.

Daily Program

Trudy never misses a day with her 15-minute-exercise program. She prefers to do her stretching and twisting before an open window and to have plenty of room. But on long train trips she stands in the aisle of the band's private coach, hands on opposite seat backs, and does pedaling and knee-bending exercises. You can try this with two solid chairs. Turn the backs together, leaving yourself enough room in between to operate. Then, supporting yourself with hands on chairbacks, raise your feet clear of the floor and pedal. Work the legs as if you were really pedaling a bike and don't get off until you have to. When you have finished, rest for a couple of minutes, then turn chair seats together, rest hands on them, and try to go into a deep knee bend without letting heels rise off floor. As soon as you can do that, try it the hard way—hold one leg straight out in front and go into a single knee bend.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Because Wife Prefers Another Branch of Volunteer Work Than One Her Husband Joined and Favors, He Orders Her to Stay Home With Baby; Should She?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have always heard that married persons should have interests outside the home, in order to keep from getting bored and boring. In our marriage, my husband has such interests and I have none,—and I don't think the fault is mine. I shall explain. My husband belongs to a club, to which he devotes one or two nights a week,—and on other evenings, he does "book work" at home for the club. Also, he occasionally works overtime on his job,—which means more evenings away from home. And now, he has volunteered for civilian defense.

When he volunteered, he wanted me to volunteer for the same branch of service. He argued enthusiastically that our hours of work would coincide. However, I felt I should volunteer for another service,—one I would like better and for which I was better suited, as it would give me practical experience in a field for which I was specially trained in college. I applied to the Red Cross for information concerning the work I had in mind, and then broached the plan to my husband.

He turned "thumbs down" on the proposition and told me I should stay home with the baby. He said we could not afford to have both of us doing volunteer work. And yet, this was not his attitude when he was urging me to "join up" with him. Now, I am alone practically every night of the week; and when my husband is at home, he is frequently irritable, criticizing all I say and do, telling me to "get out," etc. Because I could not conceal my disappointment at being forbidden to follow my own choice of volunteer work, he says I "put a damper" on all he tries to do.

Please understand, I would not mind staying home all the time, if this were a jointly shared sacrifice. It is just that I feel so "out" of things. I belong to no club of any kind. I have but few friends, whom I see only occasionally.

A few months ago, my husband and I were reunited after a separation. He had sent me home to my people because we couldn't get along. At that time, I was nervous and morbid, utterly without self confidence. During the separation, I recovered self confidence, peace of mind and steady nerves. And I talked with a marriage consultant, who advised me to do everything for the family's happiness and forget myself. Since returning to my husband, I have followed this plan. I have let him do exactly as he pleases, and have done everything in my power to please him and make a happy home. I know that no man likes to come home to a mentally tired, devitalized, bored wife,—but all this time alone is making me that kind of person. Again, my confidence is waning. Self pity and a sense of defeatism are overtaking me.

I was so enthused about doing defense work. But all I feel now is, "What's the use?" I do feel that my husband's attitude is unfair. But perhaps I am wrong. I have taken advice before and will follow it again. The volunteer work I wanted to do would be of immense value to me, offering education and opportunity for advancement. It would help me meet people and restore my social perspective, which I seem to be losing. I don't want, ever, to go back to what we were before. But we seem to be drawing inevitably toward it again. I will do anything to prevent it, and to keep our home as happy as it was when we were first reunited. So please tell me what is best to do. Sincerely, F. W. G.

Wife Is a Partner, Not a Bondswoman

DEAR F. W. G.: My advice to you is to do what YOU want to do, that you know you CAN do,—without further reference to what might please your husband. Now that you know a branch of volunteer service wherein you might function usefully as well as happily, by all means "sign up" for the duration,—provided you can make advance arrangements, not necessarily with your husband's approval and cooperation, for seeing that the baby is "looked after" during your "on duty" hours.

It is possible that a neighbor, or perhaps some elderly or schoolage relative would consent to "mind" the baby,—as a contribution to "home defense,"—while you "turn to" at the professional service you are specially trained to render. Just by way of keeping yourself in circulation for the time being, go again to Red Cross headquarters,—where you obtained previous information,—and ask if any plans are being made, or suggestions issued, for looking after the small children of housewives who seek release from home ties, several hours a week, to work for their country.

If nothing is being done or "thought out" along that line, at least you would be calling attention to the need and potential value of it. And you might take the lead in organizing a neighborhood plan to meet the need in your own vicinity. Church auxiliaries in your community may be doing something about it;—so talk with the pastors of various denominations in the neighborhood, explaining what you would like to do, if free to do it. Doubtless there are scores and even hundreds of women in your neighborhood, who feel as you do. Thus, an active assertion of your desire to be "out and doing" in these challenging days might prove to be the spearhead of a local movement resulting in hundreds of hours of volunteer work done weekly, on behalf of your municipality and nation.

Apparently your husband's feelings were hurt because you did not immediately "ditto" his choice of volunteer work. Thus, he is taking petty revenge by saying, "Nothing doing," to your particular preference. But because this is childish behavior, you should "live above it." Don't react to it with submissive self-pitying martyrdom. Simply ignore it, and busy your mind with independently laying the groundwork of a course of action that you are convinced would be of "immense value" to you; and, indirectly, to the marriage.

Remember,—and, if need be, stoutly remind your husband,—that he lacks authority to dictate your every action. If he would influence your behavior, he must win your consideration. Your relation to him is not that of bondswoman, but of partner,—although he may have sight of the fact, due to your mistakenly excessive efforts to "please him." Inasmuch as he takes for granted that he may do "as he pleases," without consulting you; and inasmuch as you make no efforts to restrict his actions,—it should go without saying that your turn has come to "clip coupons" on that arrangement. And while neither you nor he may realize it at the moment, he will eventually like and respect and value you more, if you show spunk, intelligence and resourcefulness in investing your leisure hours to "please" yourself,—rather than with an eye to anticipating his practically nonexistent "approval," or to hanging on to his coat tails. Double Duty Trend in Hostess Gowns

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

VIRTUALLY every man, at some time or another, gives his wife a housecoat, whether it be a simple wrapper or an elegant trailing hostess gown. The housecoat has become more than a lingerie type garment, however. It is on its own as a complete costume. In its more dress-like form, it passes for entertaining at dinner and is even seen on the dance floor.

Instead of something loose and ill-fitting that wraps around one like swaddling clothes, the housecoat is now streamlined to the figure. It is a far cry from the old straight hanging kimonos that made their appearance back in 1905 after the Japanese had centered the attention of the world upon themselves as a result of their war with Russia. A safe prediction would be that we will not see such a recurrence soon.

Two Classes of Them

Most housecoats fall into two classes—those that are worn only in the presence of intimate household members and those that are worn for informal social dining or entertaining at home.

Among the intimate lounging types there are still the classic flannel and pale satin styles. Some are tailored, and some take to full, flowing lines. Newest among the tailored ones are those of striped rayon fabric and cut like the typical notch-collared man's robe. The only difference is in the skirt, which falls slim in front but full in back.

Hitting an all-high in popularity this year are the cotton quilted robes. They come in gay garden prints as well as small Paisley patterns. Skirts are voluminous and make a great swish when one moves about. The best liked feature, however, is their washability.

Some Buy Them For Frocks

Women often find impractical the housecoat than can be worn only a couple of times before it has to be sent to the cleaners. It has been found there will not be a shortage of cleaning fluid if dry cleaners have the facilities to make use of inflamable solutions. Still, dry cleaning is an item to be considered, if only from the expense angle.

Within the hostess gown bracket, there is scarcely a gown that does not look like a dress. In the better gowns, pulled-in midriffs, draped bodices and extra fullness in the skirt are features. Buyers admit that many gowns are bought by teen-agers with the intention of serving as an evening frock.

Very clever is the new hostess gown that is a cross between pajamas and an evening dress. The top is cut like the bodice of any informal dress might be—but, the skirt is so different! In front the bottom part is divided to form pajama legs, while the back takes away from all appearance of unbecoming curves by being cut like a regular long skirt!

Quilted Robe Santa's Standby

Tiny tots can have grown-up housecoats just like their mothers this Christmas. Quilted housecoats are back in favor. They are available in a size range from children to adults. Most of them are gay colored in washable cotton fabrics. Skirts are full and little girls like to snuggle up inside them. For dressier occasions other hostess gowns that look like pajamas are also shown.

Swiss Laces

Switzerland is most celebrated in the decorative arts for her laces, though in Zurich and Nyon there have been some interesting qualities of china made. Swiss furniture is distinguished by its wood carving which shows the influence of both Tyrolean German and Italian styles. It is ornately carved and often painted as well, making use of native woods and retaining still many of the more robust qualities of Renaissance fashions and often a Medieval quality.

Today's Social Notes

From The Truthtown Torch

Despite war conditions, the Emerald and Champagne Costume Ball will be held next month as scheduled, Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger, chairman of arrangements, has announced. "However, we have changed the name of the event to the Ball of Waterloo," Mrs. Bigwigger said.

Mrs. Radcliffe Uppercut was unfortunately not able to attend the large tea and cocktail party she gave yesterday at her town house, The Bastille. Finding that her committee duties and her Christmas shopping would prevent her being present, she asked Mrs. Montmarte Bougainvillia to serve as a substitute hostess.

Mrs. Uppercut also will be unable to attend the large dinner she is giving tonight for Don Pinochio Avocado de Salvo. The Viscountess Fez, who recently opened a dress shoppe here, will be substitute hostess.

"I simply had to get these parties over before the holidays," explained Mrs. Uppercut.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt has left for Palm Beach, but will fly back to observe Christmas in Truthtown. "I wanted to get South ahead of the rush," she said. 'Everybody is going after the holidays."

Suburban Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Halibut Finch have placed a "For Sale" sign on their home in the Geranium Grove section. The Finches have found it necessary to move so that Mrs. Finch may escape a "vicious circle" of entertaining into which she was drawn when she accepted a neighborhood luncheon invitation. Every woman present at the luncheon held a similar luncheon to repay the hostess, who in turn instituted a series of teas before the luncheon rounds had been made. Women attending the teas gave similar teas to repay the hostess, with the result that Mrs. Finch's calendar became so crowded with luncheons and teas she had to drop her music and her Red Cross work and send her children to boarding schools. The Finches, it is understood, are now looking for a well equipped cave in a distant suburban neighborhood.

Utopia

The place where there is no Mrs. Bludge to tell me my hat is unbecoming, or that I look tired, or that I do not run my house or office properly, or rear my children as I should; where there is no Mrs. Tatt to tell me the unpleasant things someone else said about me, or to pass on the indiscreet remarks I trustingly made to her; where there is no Mrs. Chipp to get hurt or to take offence at any thoughtless things I may say; where there is no Mrs. Brittle whom I must put on my fur-lined gloves to approach; where there is no Mrs. Glower to brood and pout and give me dark glances when I have unwittingly stepped on her toes; where there is no Mrs. Ember to burst into flame the moment her temper is touched off; where there is no Mrs. Hurl to start throwing rocks the minute I—or anyone else—get a new fur coat or a club office; where there is no Mrs. Rench to start stirring up trouble wherever two or more persons are assembled in harmony; where there is no Mrs. Magpie to talk constantly about herself and give me no chance to tell about myself; where there is no Mrs. Bragg to tell how good she is and give me a sense of inferiority; where there is no Mrs. Blunt to put me in my place by saying, "It's not that way at all"; where there is no Mrs. Chaff to triumph over me and all the other women who consider themselves the Mrs. Wheats of the world; where there are no feminine tattle-tales, or cry babies, or martyrs; no grownup primitives or adolescents; where there is nobody that is "difficult," or disagreeable, or unlovely, or unkind; and where—alas—I would myself be denied entrance—and where if I were to enter, I would find the rarefied atmosphere completely oppressive and boring.

Mary Jane Kirby Makes Bow At Tea Dance in F Street Club

Debutante's Mother, Mrs. Kindleberger Kirby, Is Hostess

At a preholiday party yesterday, Miss Mary Jane Kirby made her bow to society. The occasion was a tea dance at the 1925 F Street Club, and the hostess was the debutante's mother, Mrs. Kindleberger Kirby. Guests were mostly from the residential circles.

Varicolored chrysanthemums and roses decorated the rooms, where guests gathered between 4:30 and 7 o'clock to greet the debutante of the day. Sydney's Orchestra played during the party and the younger contingent in the crowd lingered on as long as possible to enjoy the pleasant event.

Deb Wears Frock of Tulle

Mrs. Kirby and her daughter received in the drawing room against a background of blossoms which had been sent to Miss Kirby by her many friends. The debutante, a lovely brunette, had chosen a bouffant frock, styled with a full skirt of layers of black tulle and a fitted bodice set off with puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Large, blue sequin butterflies were scattered here and there on the skirt, and a similar butterfly was perched on one shoulder. The satin streamers falling from her bouquet of gardenias carried out the blue accent, and she wore a diamond-set platinum wrist watch, a debut gift from her mother.

Mrs. Kirby appeared in a becoming gold frock, made with a crepe skirt and a gold lame bodice. In and out of the receiving line, but always close at hand to greet her many friends in the throng was Mrs. David Kindleberger, grandmother of the bud, whose black velvet dress was worn with an ermine-trimmed jacket.

Mrs. Hurley Among Assistants

MISS MARY JANE KIRBY

The bud's assistants included Miss Ruth Hurley, Miss Sara Booth Miller, Miss Barbara Vickery, Miss Kathleen Macneil, Miss Dorothy Chapline, and the debutante's young sister, Miss Margery Kirby, who wore a peasant blouse of white chiffon with her black taffeta skirt.

Mrs. Kirby, who was the former Miss Pauline Kindleberger of Washington made her debut at Rauschers' at a party given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Kindleberger. Reared in Washington, she was married to Maj. Maxwell Kirby and spent a number of years in Hawaii and California.

The god-daughter of Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, the debutante attended school in Honolulu and California and since making her home in Washington has taken a secretarial course, a job in the Department of Agriculture, and supporting roles in Civic Theater productions. A gifted pianist, horsewoman and dancer, she will have a number of parties given in her honor during the coming season.

Simplicity Is Theme Of Capital Yule Plans

Symbolizing the spirit of the Capital's Christmas this year is the answer of Mrs. Cordell Hull to a question about the Yuletide plans for her and the Secretary of State. "We have no plans but to be 'on watch,'" she said. "My husband wouldn't budge from Washington for the world."

And apparently few of the Nation's high officials are even thinking of spending the day out of easy reach of their busy desks. Mrs. Jesse Jones knew she would have a hard time getting her husband to take a few days off to spend the holiday in their home in Texas, but it was not until Pearl Harbor that she abandoned all hope of a Houston sojourn. "He'll probably work straight through the holidays as he always does," says Mrs. Jones resignedly. Plans now are for the Secretary of Commerce to spend a quiet day with his wife in their Shoreham apartment.

Mrs. Frank Knox will come in from New England tomorrow to join her husband, the Secretary of the Navy. Before the incident that sent the Secretary racing to Honolulu for a survey of the war situation, he and Mrs. Knox had been planning to spend the Yuletide season in their home in Manchester, N. H.

In some cases, where the parents can't join their children, the children will come to the Capital to join their parents. Jean Wallace is expected home from Connecticut College this weekend for the holidays and her parents, the Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, are hoping that their draftee-son, Bob, will be able to get leave from the Aberdeen Proving Grounds. They are planning a family day on Christmas at their Wardman Park apartment.

Ann Wickard is expected in from Purdue University this weekend by her parents, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claud Wickard. They are hoping that their career-daughter, Betty, will be able to take a few days off from her job in Indianapolis to be present at a real family Christmas.

The Postmaster General, Frank Walker, is hoping that he will be able to get up to New York for the day to join his wife and children there, but, on the other hand, they may come to the Capital to spend Christmas Day with him.

So plans are made, and changed, and made again, as Washington officialdom awaits international developments.

Harrison Girls Arrive Home

Arriving today from Foxcroft School are the Misses Anne and Helen Harrison, who will spend the holidays with their parents, the American Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison, at their home on S Street.

The Yeateses To Leave Today For Salt Lake

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W. Yeates, who have been house guests of the Adjutant General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams, and Mrs. Adams, expect to leave Washington today to return to their home in Salt Lake City, Utah. Mr. Yeates is a brother of Mrs. Adams.

Yesterday afternoon Gen. and Mrs. Adams entertained at cocktails for the Yeateses and some of their Salt Lake City friends who are now in Washington. Included among those dropping in during the twilight hours were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moyle, Col. and Mrs. Samuel Karrick and Maj. and Mrs. William Dean. Maj. and Mrs. Dean entertained the Yeateses at dinner on Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Yeates arrived in Washington on Monday, Mr. Yeates having been called here to meet with a defense board.

Although her debut last week was definitely on the informal side, Miss Patricia Baker, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, is taking an active part in the whirl of young set festivities during the holidays, that will climax the debutante season. Her debut last week was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis and guests included officials, members of the service and diplomatic set. The tea was followed by a small dinner at the Chevy Chase Club. She is now studying at Holton-Arms School. Her father, Capt. Baker, has been on duty with the Navy in London and will be unable to join the family here for Christmas

Mary Henry, Delbert Ruch Wed Tomorrow

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Henry announce the forthcoming wedding of their daughter, Miss Mary Caroline Henry, to Delbert DeVillo Ruch. Due to "Army orders" the couple were forced to make plans for a ceremony much sooner than they expected. They will be married tomorrow at a quiet wedding.

The bride-elect, who made her debut several seasons ago, attended Mlle. Bouligny's School in Warrenton and attended Mme. Toutain's French School in New York City. Mr. Ruch, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Carlton Ruch, of Beverly Hills, Calif., attended Georgetown Foreign Service School. He is with the 176th Infantry, Twenty-ninth Division, stationed at Fort Meade.

Vogels Purchase Warrenton Estate

Planning to move up to Warrenton, Va., in January Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., have purchased Waverly, the 225-acre estate on the Springs Road, from Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill.

Mr. and Mrs. Vogel have been staying with the latter's mother, Mrs. Martin Vogel, in her home on Woodland Drive since their marriage early in the spring. The estate includes a rambling house of native stone and a large stable and barn, which will give the Vogels room for their show horses.

Mr. and Mrs. Winmill, who spend much of their time at their home, Clovelly, near Warrenton, will go to New York for the mid-winter season.

Mrs. Nimitz, Wife of Admiral, Finds Life Replete With Interesting Things to Do

Few hostesses have a wider variety of interests than Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz, wife of the new commander of the Pacific Fleet . . . She's a landscape painter ("purely for my own amusement; nobody else cares anything about my pictures," she says with a chuckle) . . . She can play the piano and sing ("though I don't find much time for either these days," she adds) . . . She likes parties, no matter whether she happens to be hostess or guest . . . She reads more books a month than the average woman gets around to in a year . . . Yet she manages never to neglect her household, her family, nor her friends.

Casual acquaintances notice at once that she's no run-of-the-mill service wife. In the first place she has opinions of her own (and not always the orthodox type either) and she's not afraid to voice them. Her intimates say she's "quite a personality," and they proudly point out that her slant on life is both original and highly entertaining . . . She's a firm believer that every individual should keep busy; if possible, at a job that is a true expression of herself—but anyway, a job of some kind that will keep him occupied . . . So she, herself, never stops a minute inside her home or out; and manages to fill her life with an amazing number of activities, ranging all the way from putting pretty scenes on canvas—just to please herself—to running her household with a skill that makes every detail seem to move on smoothly greased wheels.

Elder Daughters Hold Library Jobs

Both her elder daughters, each of whom might be butterflying about from party to party season in and season out, hold down steady jobs at the public library. Catherine heads the music division. Nancy, who formerly studied at George Washington University, is in the circulation department. The youngest daughter in the Nimitz household, 10-year-old Mary, is already planning the kind of job she'll look for once her schooldays are over.

The first time I met Mrs. Nimitz was a couple of years ago at a luncheon given by Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the then Secretary of the Navy. My attention was drawn to her first because she had her hair tied with a ribbon and flowing down her back. This was in the period before every woman tried to outdo every onther in unusual coiffures and hats, and I must say Mrs. Nimitz looked—well, not exactly like most of the other guests present.

That was one reason I made it a point to edge close enough to talk with her . . . and then I discovered, for future reference, some of the interesting phases of her personality which I have barely had time to mention in this brief piece.

Married Before Finishing College

A native of Massachusetts, Mrs. Nimitz says she was married before she finished college; before she hardly had time to know her own mind, in fact. But she seems more than satisfied with the results, and she makes no bones about being proud of her husband and children.

In keeping with the shifting pattern of Navy households, hers has been moved at a moment's notice many times . . . now, however, while her husband takes over his new duties, she plans to stay on in Washington. Incidentally, the Nimitz family occupies three apartments at 2222 Q Street, Nancy and Catherine have one of their own, and there's another for Mrs. Chester W. Nimitz, jr., and her 18-months-old daughter, Frances Mary. The only son of the new commander of the Pacific Fleet is a submarine officer and is now on duty.

Although the Brazilian Embassy took pains to keep the wedding there on Wednesday completely off-the-record (why, nobody seems to know), here are a few facts picked up in passing: the bride, Aimee Lopes de Sotto-Maior, of New York and Rio de Janeiro, has been widely publicized (and sometimes in commercial advertisements at that) as one of Brazil's outstanding beauties . . . Her new husband, Rodman Arturo de Heeren, is a great-grandson of the late John Wanamaker, and is now on leave from the 104th Cavalry camp at Indiantown Gap, Pa.

At the 6 o'clock civil ceremony at which Judge Robert E. Mattingly officiated, the bride was given in marriage by the Brazilian Ambassador. Her only attendant was Mme. Martins, who filled in for Mme. Ernani do Amaral Peixoto, the former Alzira Vargas, when the latter could not be present . . . Among the guests was the Hon. Mrs. Randall Plunkett, sister of the bride, who came to this country especially to attend her sister's wedding . . . No formal announcement of the engagement had been made, but the couple had been feted by close friends at a party in New York on the evening before the wedding . . . The bride's parents are M. and Mme. Genesio de Sotto-Maior . . . Since the bridegroom must report back to duty within the next two weeks, the honeymoon trip will be very brief . . . Mrs. de Heeren will keep her apartment in New York through this season, but will spend much time near her husband's camp.

Plans Board Asks Speed On Play Sites

Moving to speed up development of land purchased for recreational purposes, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday directed Chairman Frederick A. Delan and Executive Officer A. E. Demaray to confer with District and National Capital Parks officials on the problem.

The decision to check on the disposition of land purchased with cimmission approval was a reversal of the previous policy of stating that the commission's responsibility ended once the land had been purchased. The action came in the wake of agitation on Capitol Hill to do something about playgrounds-to-be which are littered with rubbish and overgrown with weeds.

John Nolan, jr., director of planning, reported that $3,500,000 had been spent for sites during the last ten years, but only $500,000 on improvement and equipment.

Anacostia Park Approved

A $46,000 plan for the recreational development of Anacostia Park, Prince Georges County, was approved. Tennis courts, baseball diamonds and other play facilities will be provided.

Norman C. Brown, of the commission staff, reported that steps are under way to buy parts of two squares which are needed to complete approaches to the K Street elevated roadway. If private negotiation fails, the land will be acquired by condemnation.

Approval was given plans to enlarge Boundary Channel Bay, near the old Washington Airport, an improvement which will partially benefit pleasure watercraft, according to Thomas S. Settle, commission secretary.

The planners conferred with Arlington County (Va.) authorities on zoning and sewerage problems but "nothing definite came out of the meeting," said Settle. The commission reaffirmed its intention to press in Congress for Federal acquisition of the Nevius tract of 25 acres which adjoins Arlington Cemetery. Private interests are reported to be planning to construct an apartment hotel on the site. The planning body, along with the War Department, believes that the land is critically needed as an addition to the cemetery, said Settle.

As a preparedness precaution, the commission voted to have duplicates made of its important records for safekeeping in the Archives Building.

Commission Approves Temporary Building Plans

Meeting across the corridor in the South Interior Building the Commission of Fine Arts approved architectural plans for more temporary Federal buildings to be erected in Southwest Washington near the Army War College by the Public Buildings Administration.

Other matters approved by the arts group include: A design by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, for the proposed K Street elevated; a design by Municipal Architect Nathan C. Wyeth for the District Health Center to be built at Seventh and O Street Northwest; transfer of the White House greenhouse from the south Monument Grounds to Anacostia Park to make way for the proposed Independence Avenue extension to Arlington Memorial Bridge, and a portrait of Vice President Henry A. Wallace by Wayman Adams to be hung in the Agriculture Building in the gallery of former secretaries of the department.

Ball Given For 547 Midshipmen

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 18.—Naval Academy midshipmen had to outstep the busiest jitterbug to keep up with today's "June Week" activities, climaxed by a brilliant farewell ball in Dahlgren Hall.

Graduation week reaches its high point at 11 a. m., tomorrow with the graduation of 547 of the 563 seniors at commencement exercises in Dahlgren Hall. Secretary of Navy Knox is to deliver the graduation address.

After presentation of diplomas, 519 seniors are to receive commissions—495 as ensigns in the Navy and 24 as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps. Another senior, Thomas R. Pearson of Bluefield, W. Va., who has been a patient at the Naval Hospital, will receive his diploma but his commission is pending.

Roberto Lim of Manila, P. I., will receive a diploma, but won't be commissioned. Two other seniors, Jay W. Land of Burlington, Wis., and Charles H. Liebhauser of Port Monmouth, N. J., are expected to qualify for diplomas and commissions.

Seniors this afternoon rehearsed the graduation procedure and then joined underclassmen at the presentation of prizes and awards ceremony and the farewell ball. Freshmen witnessed the presentation ceremony but did not attend the ball tonight.

SON OF ADMIRAL KILLED IN HAWAII—Midshipman Isaac Campbell Kidd, whose father, Rear Admiral Kidd, lost his life in the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, was cited yesterday for special officer-like qualities in a ceremony at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md. Cogswell to Take Oath Today As D. C. Rent-Control Chief

Robert F. Cogswell, new rent administrator, will take his formal oath of office today and Louis Laudick, retired businessman, a runner-up for the job, will become his deputy, the Commissioners announced last night.

The President yesterday signed a special bill providing 10 billion dollars for defense purposes, which included an item of $22,750 for operation of the District Rent Control program for remaining months of the current fiscal year.

Approval of the measure paved the way for Cogswell to take over his duties on a salary basis, although the Rent Act does not become effective until January 2, 1942. No time was set for the oath to be administered today.

Laudick, however, will not take over officially until Congress authorizes a proposed supplemental fund providing $6500 for his annual salary.

The Commissioners reported they would press for the extra money, together with additional requests for employment of a general counsel at either $4600 or $5600; a public relations counsel at $3800 and a combined secretary-docket clerk at $3600.

Cogswell went to work yesterday in temporary quarters in the District Building, even before his salary was authorized by the President's signing of the defense measure. He said he was preparing "paper" plans for his entire setup and would be ready for action after the first of the year.

Laudick, who becomes deputy administrator, was a close second in selection of a man for the job. Laudick is a native of Lima, Ohio, but has lived in Washington more than 20 years. He formerly was in the brokerage business here and lives at the Broadmoor Apartments on Connecticut Avenue.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Buildings here occupied by private organizations and businesses may be requisitioned by the Government. This possibility has been discussed along with the construction of new Federal buildings and decentralization as the answer to the Government's quest for office space here to house expanding war agencies. The President's wartime powers give him full authority to requisition private buildings in the District—and President Wilson used this power during World War I. It's argued that Federal workers shouldn't make all the sacrifices, that some private organizations should be decentralized along with Federal agencies, if it comes to that.

Decentralization of agencies not directly connected with the war effort is under discussion. Reports have been circulating at half a dozen agencies on decentralization possibilities but they are rumors, as no definite decisions have been made. After all, the decentralization study has been going on for nine months and all agencies have been considered. The subject has been revived because officials believe it's obvious now that something drastic must be done quickly to get office space for new defense workers and homes for them to live in.

Railroad Retirement Board Chairman Murray Latimer yesterday opposed further decentralization of his agency. Seventy per cent of the work, he said, is now done in the field. The chairman explained that it was necessary to maintain contacts here with a number of public and private agencies. Employe morale, he said, would drop to a new low if the board were shifted. He estimated that 95 per cent of the employes wanted to stay here and that half would quit if the board were transferred. He guessed that 50 employes yesterday looked for jobs elsewhere as a result of his being called before the committee. Chairman Leland Olds likewise fought decentralization of the Federal Power Commission. He stressed the defense work of the commission and its work for War, Navy and OPM.

The committee today will meet on the new Ramspeck bill that would alter the Classification Act to raise the salaries of custodial and subprofessional employes. A favorable report is expected. The bill was indorsed yesterday by UFWA Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson. J. E. Clacken, of the National Association of Federal Mechanics, urged that building mechanics be given a $300 annual increase. The bill provides $180 which Clacken pointed out was already offset by increased living costs. He described the proposed raise as "disheartening" by explaining that mechanics doing similar work in other agencies receive up to $1000 more a year.

Students' Concert Program Announced

As a contribution to civilian morale, the National Symphony Orchestra has decided to extend its schedule of students' concerts in the Washington area, it was announced last night.

J. P. Hayes, manager of the orchestra, said the National Symphony this season will play 21 students' concerts in 15 schools. The price of admission will be 25 cents.

Two students' concerts, with Hans Kindler conducting, have already been played outside of Washington—for the pupils of Prince Georges County at the University of Maryland, and for the pupils of Montgomery County in Leland Junior High School, Bethesda.

The first series of concerts for Washington school children will open January 13, when the National Symphony will play at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School. On January 14, it will play at Western High School; January 15, Central High School; January 16, Eliot Junior High School; January 22, Alice Deal Junior High School.

Five concerts also will comprise the second Washington series which will be given at Eastern High School, February 10; McKinley High School, February 11; Woodrow Wilson High School, February 12; Calvin Coolidge High School, February 13; Roosevelt High School, February 20.

In addition, three concerts will be given for colored children at Armstrong High School during the season; a concert for students of Fairfax County in Fairfax High School January 28; a concert for the students of Arlington County in Washington and Lee High School March 2, and a second concert for the students of Montgomery County in Leland Junior High School, Bethesda, March 26.

The gala final students' concert for all school children in Washington and vicinity will be given in Constitution Hall March 28.

Cappel Concert Guild Presents Martha Graham Dance Group

Cappel Concert Guild presents the Martha Graham Dance Group on Thursday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Letter ot the World, El Penitente and Every Soul Is a Circus. Music by Hunter Johnson, Louis Horst and Paul Nordhoff.

Those who had not seen Martha Graham since her last appearance here must have been impressed last evening in Constitution Hall by the expansion of her inventive power and the increased subtlety of her dramatic sense in her two masterpieces, "Letter to the World" and "Every Soul Is A Circus." These choreographic interpretations of psychological conflicts are as different as any two danced poems can be, and each discloses Miss Graham's intuitive feeling for the precise gesture and the significant movement. The one is tender and sympathetic, while the other is broadly humorous and cruelly satiric.

"Letter to the World" is concerned with the American poet, Emily Dickinson, to whom legend attributes a hopeless love for a married minister. The simple stage set shows the garden door to a New England house and a garden bench. Into the garden comes the figure of the poet dancing with the impersonality of a leaf wafted by a breeze and twirling as to the music of rustling trees and birdsongs. She comes and goes without apparent motive at first until the drama fo her inner life begins to enact itself.

The clue to each phase of the drama is spoken by a dancer in lines from Emily's poems. Other figures come and disappear, symbols of youth, of convention, of ancestral inhibitions, of temptations and of violent emotions. The lovely speaking voice of Jean Erdman had just the quality of remoteness to suggest an oracular pronouncement. While the other characters have interesting passages, such as the death dance of Jane Dudley and the March leaping dance of David Campbell, it is Miss Graham who dominates, as she should, the motivation of the patterns.

Out of her former devotion to Wigmann angularity Miss Graham has developed a lyric flexibility unpredictable and devious in grace. She has acquired the ability to make a static pose eloquent with potential movement. Her present method of composing uses different sorts of projection, and as her mood changes she seems now to dance for the spectators and again to dance privately within her consciousness. This alternate communication and withdrawal into reticence make "Letter to the World" a beautiful and moving creation.

"El Penitente" also derives its strength from its restraints. The pains and the tortures which the sect of flaggellants inflict upon themselves is softened into stylized picture which reminds one of primitive paintings or the naivete of the ancient mystery plays. All the details of the action are child-like and charming, the symbolism of religion is made rhythmically plastic, and the dynamics are used obliquely to make the form both real and full of implications.

"Every Soul Is A Circus" is Miss Graham's latest contribution to social commentary. In it she displays the vanity, the caprice, the boredom and the silliness of a modern Emma Bovary.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents in Coolidge Auditorium on Thursday afternoon a concert commemorating the death of Antonio Stradivari. Artists: Josef Roismann, Alexander Schneider, Boris Kroyt and Mischa Schneider, constituting the Budapest String Quartet. Program: Quartet in G minor, Op. 74, No. 3 (Haydn), Quartet in F major (Ravel), Quartet in A minor, Op. 132 (Beethoven).

Following the annual custom, the Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress commemorated yesterday afternoon the death of Antonio Stradivari on December 18, 1737, and the Budapest String Quartet used the Stradivari instruments from the Whittall collection. An appreciative audience in Coolidge Auditorium enjoyed commendable performances of a relatively unworn quartet in G minor by Haydn, Ravel's only quartet and Beethoven's A minor quartet containing the song of thanksgiving. Haydn was the only composer who was alive at the time of the famous violin-maker's decease.

'The Corsican Brothers' Given World Premiere

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and a Prime Cast Bring Life and Vigor to Alexandre Dumas' Rousing Melodrama on the Palace Screen

ONE OF THE BEST of the cinema's romantic melodramas was publicly unwound for the first time yesterday, when Edward Small's picturization of Alexandre Dumas' "The Corsican Brothers" was accorded its "world premiere" in Loew's Palace Theater.

The screen, to be sure, has not of late disclosed too many exhibits that fall unequivocally into this classification—"The Son of Monte Cristo" somehow comes to mind—but even if they had been tumbling over each other in a steady stream, the present saga of swordplay and stiletto-throwing would have set itself down immediately among the better ones. United Artists describe it as a screen play by George Bruce and Howard Estabrook "from a free adaptation of the Alexandre Dumas story." No matter how loose a translation it may be of the literal, original work, it still manages to retain all of the action, romance, thrills and suspense that have made the Dumas works infallible sources of engrossing screen entertainment.

The dual biography of Mario and Lucien Franchi, the twins of the title, has been encompassed with some comprehensiveness. The action opens with the vendetta between the Colonna and Franchi families at its murderous height. The Colonnas, assembled in family reunion, plot the extermination of their traditional enemies on the day Count and Countess Franchi are expecting the birth of an heir. They arrive from their prandial plotting just a shade too late to make the annihilation complete. The strangely joined, newly born Siamese twins are spirited out of the castle and neatly severed by the desperate skill of Dr. Paoli, faithful family physician, who achieves a miracle of physical surgery but leaves the two babies bound by a telepathic bond that makes each constantly aware of the other's every thought and deed. To elude the doom planned for them by Colonna and his kinsmen, Mario is intrusted to the care of the Dupres, residing in Paris, and Lucien to Lorenzo, the old family retainer, who finds safety in the hills. Twenty years later, the brothers launch the hazardous retributions that bring havoc to the House of Colonna and form the blazing bulk of the play.

Here is the perfect framework upon which has been built an imposing structure of exciting drama, vivid characterization, throbbing love and fraternal conflict. The action sweeps along extravagantly and excitingly from one tumultuous climax to another and exerts a surprising capacity for making the incredible seem plausible. No psychological drama this, but a rip-snorting, swashbuckling carnival of hard-riding, vicious duelling, ardent wooing and happy-go-lucky heroics of the sort once indelibly associated with the late, elder Fairbanks and now just about as well done by his son.

Doug, Jr., Leads an Ace Cast

Producer Small could hardly have exercised better judgment in the selection of the cast intrusted with the robust interpretation of so rousing a subject. Douglas Fairbanks, jr., turns in an exceptionally deft performance in the dual role of Lucien and Mario. He is, as we have remarked before, immensely aided by the baffling legerdemain of modern photography, but the true worth of his duplex portrayal is not to be gauged by the camera's double exposures. The twins, one a gently bred Parisian dandy and the other a grade-A mountain brigand, are adroitly differentiated both when individually occupied and when one is carrying the other in his arms. Something of a tour de force would be the usual description. As the object of the brothers' rivalry, Ruth Warrick, the wife in "Citizen Kane," presents a sufficiently alluring figure to be worth fighting for. As the villainous Baron Colonna, Akim Tamiroff most of the time seriously crowds the resourceful Mr. Fairbanks for stellar honors. Without him, the play would lose at least 49 per cent of its terrific impact. J. Carroll Naish, in a sympathetic role, for once, and H. B. Warner are exceedingly helpful in the vital roles of Lorenzo and Dr. Paoli. John Emery, Henry Wilcoxon, Walter Kingsford and Nana Bryant, as the Dupres; Pedro de Cordoba, Gloria Holden and all the others in the cast, including the veteran William Farnum, maintain the high voltage generated by those in the more conspicuous parts.

The two-hour-plus running time of the feature—and it seems much shorter—precludes any great number of supplementary attractions on the new Palace bill. At last evening's official premiere performance, with its lobby ceremonies and distinguished audience, and Tony Martin presiding over the mountain of books accumulated for the boys in the training camps, even Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Clouds Over the Pacific," Pete Smith's sprightly "Fancy Answers" and the newsreel seemed a bit superfluous.

One of Them Won the Charmer

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., AND RUTH WARRICK the romantic interest in Edward Small's picturization for United Artists of Alexandre Dumas' swashbuckling adventure story of "The Corsican Brothers," yesterday accorded its world premiere at Loew's Palace Theater. In this exciting subject, the junior Fairbanks portrays both of the twins comprising the dual title role—but splendidly

Belied by Name, 'Swamp Water' Slakes Thirst for Fine Drama

By Richard L. Coe

Concluded to a burst of spontaneous applause, a strange and fascinating new film arrived yesterday at the Capitol. "Swamp Water" is its title, a compelling story adapted by skilled Dudley Nichols from the Saturday Evening Post feature of Vereen Bell and beautifully directed by Jean Renoir.

One always hesitates to damn a film by calling it beautiful, but there aren't any other adjectives for this thoroughly simple story of a man, his dog and a stranger. "Swamp Water" has for its setting the huge Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia; its people live nearby the swamp, fear it and pass their days ignoring it. Some years before quiet, likable Ben goes to search in the forbidding swamp for his dog, Lonesome, one of the countrymen had escaped a death penalty for a murder he did not commit. He had gone to live in the swamp. The fugitive and the young man meet; what follows details the innocent man's ultimate vindication.

Just as such a tale would have in reality, there are many events and persons linking the beginning and ending of this adventure, all so neatly constructed by Scenarist Nichols and Director Renoir that "Swamp Water" is a true "motion picture," in itself no small achievement, for many a "motion picture" could get across to a blind man. In both atmosphere and happening, the soundtrack is completely subordinated to the camera. Consequently, its story in pictures has a universal appeal despite a definitely unique setting.

It is no mere chance that "Swamp Water's" appeal is universal, that its story is told so thoroughly by pictures. It is the first American assignment for Jean Renoir, whose "Grand Illusion" had so much of the same quality. While at first one has great trepidation that what seemed to be a thoroughly American story should be handled by a Gallic director, this gives way to unstinted admiration for a work that will be as well liked in Iceland as in Panama. Simplicity, motion and the ability to get the finest out of his players make the Renoir debut a promising event.

Much is asked of Walter Brennan, playing the lonely fugitive, but that admirable actor doesn't disappoint. His Tom Keefer is a notable addition to an enviable gallery of portrayals. As the young man whose solicitude for his dog uncovers the strange story, Dana Andrews, a screen newcomer, lays a sturdy foundation for what should be a fine career. Walter Huston, too, is remarkably convincing as his father and Anne Baxter is excellent as the fugitive's daughter. Mary Howard, John Carradine, Ward Bond and Guinn Williams are thoroughly equal to their difficult supporting assignments.

Aside from an evident spirit of cooperation, much of the success of "Swamp Water" lies in Nichols' thoughtfully devised screenplay, surely a model of its kind. And the shimmering reality of the setting, filmed in sepia-tint on the Georgia spot by Lucian Ballard, puts the finishing touch to a distinguished achievement.

The Capitol's stage revue is opened by a quintet of English girls, the Herzogs, whose trapeze stunts are helped no end by a whackiness that is typically English music hall. Unfamiliar to these eyes, it is a pleasingly daft offering. New to F Street is Bob Evans, a ventriloquist whose style of banter seems equally fresh for what might otherwise be just another "dummy" act. His little man is impertinent without being too reminiscent of Mrs. McCarthy's little chip, and stops the show accordingly. Ted Lester, the fellow with a way on musical instruments; Helen Denizon, dancing as a "Fire Bird"—with Chaikovski pinch-hitting for Stravinski—and the Rockets tapping to M. Gounod's "Faust" Waltz complete the stage bill.

Some Plane Speaking

New York, Dec. 18.

The airplane companies now are developing postwar plans for the purpose of utilizing the plane factories which otherwise might become idle. They've retained Russell Forbes, New York City's commissioner of purchase—who has obtained a leave—to make a survey of all plane routes regarding the possibilities of air freight. The plane companies expect this to be an important postwar industry . . . The missing Jakie Webb of the Vanderbilt family wrote his wife that he's found a way of thwarting her efforts to serve him with legal papers. Webb found immunity by joining the Antitank Corps.

EDMUND GWENN

Commander Pacciardi, who led the Garibaldi division which defeated Franco at Guadalajara during the Spanish war, is in Bermuda now. Pacciardi was wanted by Mussolini—but he and his wife escaped from France, aided by an American foreign correspondent. They'll join Count Sforza, the anti-Fascist leader here . . . Anne Lindbergh visited the Free French exhibit at the Duveen Gallery . . . Dixie Dunbar, the dancer, is at St. Luke's Hospital. She has a broken toe. . . . Warner Brothers, preparing for any emergencies in Hollywood, have restored their Vitaphone studios in Brooklyn. The reservicing was celebrated by a party for over 2000 employes on the premises.

Last wee. George Sylvester Viereck, the indicted Nazi agent, lost his wallet in a New York taxicab. The hackie delivered the wallet to the Police Department, and it was returned to Viereck . . . William P. Maloney of the Department of Justicee, who obtained the Viereck indictment, phoned the Police Department, and asked whether they had taken the precaution of examining the contents of the wallet. "We always do that," was the assurance . . . "Then what was in it?" asked the eager Maloney . . . "309 in currency," was the answer, "and some miscellaneous documents."

Edmund Gwenn, the British star, has been designated as air raid warden for the Plymouth Theater—where, as "The Wookey," he portrays a character who refuses to cooperate with London's air raid wardens . . . Maj. Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., en route to the Pacific, phoned the editor of Click, to which he has been a staff contributor. "The one thing I want to know," asked Vanderbilt, "is—do I get my job back when the war's over?" . . . Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, whose friends call her "Sister," is air raid warden at 130 East End Avenue. At the first drill meeting there Mrs. Tibbett met the building superintendent, who offered her a chair and suggested: "Put it here, sister."

Because of bickering among the various motion picture defense organizations the producers will appeal to the President for the appointment of a coordinator . . . The Chicago Sun has offered the job of foreign editor to John C. Wiley, former American Minister to Latvia . . . Carl Randau and his wife, Leane Zugsmith, who recently returned from Japan, are racing to finish their book, "The Setting Sun of Japan." They're working in shifts like six-day bike riders—one writes while the other sleeps . . . The Picadilly Hotel now has a typewriter in its lobby, usable at 10 cents for 30 minutes. A juke box contraption opens the keys only when a dime is inserted.

Sutherland Denlinger, the newspaperman, will become Milo Perkins' aide at OEM . . . FBI men, who are assigned to investigate applicants for defense jobs, now make inquiry as to whether the applicant is an atheist

'Pinafore'-'Jury' Repeated Tonight

It was a good-natured evening the Shubert's newly organized Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company offered last night at the National—the double bill of "Trial by Jury" and "H.M.S. Pinafore." The "Cav" and "Pag" of the Savoyards will be repeated tonight.

High point of this conviviality was Florenz Ames' wry Sir Joseph Porter, who, calling himself 'the tar who rules the water," took a friendly houseful into his hands in the following chorus by regaining his proper rank of "lord" in so certain a fashion that he could be doing it yet. Ames' Sir Joseph is worthy to rank with his French ambassador of "Of Thee I Sing" and no little compliment is that.

Aside from the vigor of the chorus and its zeal in tossing the unbeatable Gilbert lyrics across the footlights, one of the most stimulating qualities of this still rehearsing group is the foursome of youthful leads it is developing. The Roche Sisters—Mary and Kathleen—are charming to look at and knowing mimes. Mary was the plaintiff of "Trial by Jury" and managed the operatic spoofing merrily. Kathleen's Josephine was pleasingly coy to the eye and usually beguiling to the ear.

Morton Bowe, the brave Ralph Rackstraw, has a fine tenor with none of your operatic fol-de-rol and looks like a manly sailor to boot. "Trial by Jury's" defendant was a promising chap, one Philip Tully, making his single appearance of the week indication that he'll be heard from once he widens his repertoire.

As in all worthwhile performances of the ever lively satires, much depends on the spirit in which they're done and last night's friendly audience was a generous collaborator in this matter. Many uniforms dotted the house and roared approbation at Sir Joseph's revelations on just how he became "Ruler of the Queen's Navee."

Following this week's custom, "The Star-Spangled Banner" was sung at the conclusion of the performance, and sung spiritedly, too, a vast improvement over some of the desultory run-throughs the National Anthem too often gets.—R. L. C.

A Picture Trains Some Experts

Hollywood, Dec. 18.

Paramount's picture, "Pacific Blackout," starring Bob Preston and Martha O'Driscoll, is all ready for release. And now that we're having blackouts, if the city cares to make use of them, it can round up the thousand extras who worked in that picture as air raid wardens, under officials who served in London during their emergency.

ELLEN DREW

In the picture, Martha O'Driscoll always keeps a bit of food in her car; but she forgot about that the other night when she started for a dinner party during our blackout, and was pulled up at the curb where she sat for three hours. Says Martha, "I'll never travel again without at least a bar of chocolate in the car."

Kay Kyser's two leading ladies will be Ellen Drew and Claire Trevor . . . Desi Arnaz and Lucille Ball had to cancel their South American tour . . . You'd be surprised and a little less critical perhaps if you knew the real reason why our private planes are grounded.

Garbo's been ill in a sanitarium for two weeks . . . Y can be certain our Hollywood actors are united when you watch the Lead End Kids knitting . . . Next thing you know we'll have the Marx Brothers and the Ritzes doing it.

When a waiter at a night club said blacking out was such fun, you would have been proud of the way Dorothy Parker told him off . . . Liz Whitney's groom, who's been caring for her ranch here, has joined the Marines, and is trying to sell all her real estate holdings here in ten days before he leaves.

Two hundred famous cameramen, electricians and sound men from our studios will be wearing the Navy blue within a few days. Details are not disclosed, but 40 of our camera aces are training for aerial photography, and already we have 106 photographers on active duty ashore and afloat, with three camera units from Hollywood at present in the fleet.

Paramount's short, "Rhythm in the Ranks," is so different and funny it's among the short subjects up for an award.

One of the first blackout casualties was Oliver Hardy's priceless antique umbrella. It was presented to Hardy in Scotland, in 1932, by Alex King, head of the Frazier clan, and had belonged to the clan chief preceding King. It was over 70 years old—handle was an ancient war club, and cover was of Frazier tartan. Hardy, who's never without it, was dining at a local restaurant when the blackout was announced, and in his haste to get home rushed out, leaving it behind.

Labor Parley Is Deadlocked By Closed Shop

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's labor-industry conference to end strikes for the duration of the war snagged temporarily last night on the basic issue of the closed shop, with C. I. O. and A. F. of L. presenting a united front against the 12 representatives of management.

Under what was described as "terrific pressure" from the President and the American public to reach agreement, the conference will resume its sessions today. It was believed that before nightfall, a final decision will be made—either an agreement on the form and policies of a tribunal to handle all disputes in war factories or a collapse of the negotiations.

President Roosevelt had unofficially set "at the latest Friday night" for a "unanimous agreement."

Labor Factions Agree

Although conferees—six from the C. I. O., six from the A. F. of L., 12 from defense industries, and Moderator William H. Davis and Associate Moderator Senator Elbert D. Thomas—bound themselves to secrecy, it was learned that the two hitherto warring factions of labor had agreed substantially on a program for the handling of workers' disputes during the emergency.

Basically, it was said to include a no-strike pledge, plus a recommendation for mediation and conciliation machinery. It insisted, however, that there be no impairment of labor's right to continue to seek the closed or union shop, and that, in effect, this ambition be subject to mediation by whatever deciding body it agreed upon.

The industry group, it was asserted, has held that for the duration of the war, mediation award of additional closed shops be foreclosed.

Conference Reconvenes Today

Despite the deadlock, which resulted in adjournment of the meeting at 7:15 p. m., informed sources indicated confidence that the gathering would not fail.

The conference, which is to reconvene at 10 a. m. today, met shortly yesterday morning and then broke up into three constituent groups, of industry, A. F. of L. and C. I. O. representatives. Assembled together after luncheon, it recessed, with the significant development of C. I. O. President Philip Murray and C. I. O. Founder John L. Lewis closeting themselves with A. F. of L. President William Green and Secretary-Treasurer George Meany. This was the first official meeting of the rival groups since the ill-fated "peace" gathering between the two organizations in 1939.

Moderators Davis and Thomas twiddled thumbs for more than two hours, until Meany appeared late in the afternoon, called Davis, and said:

"We've got something."

Adjourns Deadlocked

The full conference reconvened, to consider the "something." It adjourned, deadlocked.

Although the closed shop issue appeared to loom as the largest point of disagreement, the major problem was said to be the form and pattern of action of the ultimate mediation tribunal whose decisions both sides will promise to accept. The closed shop question was reported by some observers to have been "overemphasized."

Rail 'Dick' Balks Interned Nazi's Second Break

Montreal, Dec. 18 (AP).—Lieut. Ulrich Steinhilper, 22-year-old German airman, was thrown for a loss again tonight by the railroad, which thwarted his second clean break from a Canadian prison camp in less than a month.

Steinhilper, a good man at burrowing under fences, escaped from the Bowmanville, Ont., camp in that fashion November 24, and got on a Canadian National train bound for the United States. He actually got to Niagara Falls, N. Y., but did not know it until the train returned to Niagara Falls, Ont. There the train crew, on a routine check, found him on a tender.

Tonight a railroad detective, on another routine check, found him securely tied to the battery box under a New York Central day coach about to leave for New York from Windsor.

He readily admitted he had gone under Bowmanville's 9-foot fence again and had tied himself under the coach so he wouldn't fall.

Air Officer Held Pending Check On His Speeches

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis today ordered Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg, retiring Fifth Corps Area air officer, "confined to his quarters" pending an investigation of recent speeches, area headquarters at Fort Hayes announced.

Col. Muhlenberg, on terminal leave pending retirement, told the Curtiss Flying Club, Inc., dinner meeting last night that America nearly lost the Hawaiian Islands to Japan because military planes had been given to other countries, authorities said.

Former Commander of Hickam Field in Hawaii, Col. Muhlenberg declared that the American people should not hunt "goats" for the surprise Japanese attack because they themselves were the "goats" for adopting a program which disbursed airplanes "all over the world."

A Fort Hayes spokesman explained that Col. Muhlenberg, although nearing retirement, was subject to the War Department's policy concerning public utterances of Army officers.

Eden at Kremlin

New York, Dec. 18 (INS).—Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, has been spending the last few days incognito in the Kremlin at Moscow, according to "extremely reliable quarters," William L. Shirer, C. B. S. news analyst, said tonight.

(Usually informed London quarters said tonight they had no information on the report that Eden is visiting Moscow.)

CHINESE DIPLOMATS—Dr. Hu Shih (right), Chinese Ambassador to the United States, yesterday pinned a button with crossed Chinese and American flags on Dr. Chen Chieh, when the latter arrived in Washington after leaving his post as Chinese Ambassador to Germany. The buttons, being issued by the embassy here to all Chinese in the United States, are to prevent their being mistaken for Japanese.

'So Solly!' Clerk In Philippines Really Maj. Hara

Manila, Dec. 18 (AP).—An "excuse, please" murmuring little Japanese shopkeeper named Hara, who for the past few years sold loaves of bread and soda pop to residents of Vigan, was unmasked today as Maj. Hara of the imperial Japanese army.

A Filipino physician arriving from a town near Japanese-occupied Vigan, 200 miles northwest of Manila, told the story. He said Hara was arrested at the outbreak of hostilities, but when the first Japanese troops landed on December 10 they proceeded directly to the jail and released him.

He then donned his major's uniform. Hara is also Japanese "military governor of the province of Ilocos Sur."

Guild Strike Settled At Birmingham Paper

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—A contract settling the American Newspaper Guild strike at the Birmingham Post was signed today and James E. Mills, editor, announced publication will be resumed on Monday.

The contract provides for wage increases and improvements in working conditions. It does not call for the guild shop, which was one of the principal points of contention during the contract negotiations.

Warm Weather Polio Epidemic Linked to Flies

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Evidence that flies are the probable reason why infantile paralysis epidemics occur in warm weather was reported in Science, official journal of American scientists.

One of the greatest puzzles about infantile paralysis has been its late summer peaks and the fact that the frost or cold weather brings a sharp drop in cases. There is infantile paralysis the year round, but never much in cold weather.

The report was made by Dr. Albert B. Sabin and Dr. Robert Ward, University of Cincinnati College of Medicine and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Their report showed flies infected with the disease in widely scattered areas of the United States, and that these flies were in neighborhoods where children had infantile paralysis. The places are Connecticut, Alabama, Atlanta and Cleveland.

Post Leaflet Gives Words Of 11 Carols

Words of 11 of the better known Christmas carols are contained in the Yuletide song leaflet which went on free distribution yesterday at The Post.

Published primarily for convenience of the thousands who will attend the National Community Christmas Tree lighting exercises in the White House grounds next Wednesday eve, the carol folder also is available to individuals and organizations sponsoring their own "songfests."

"Joy to the World," "O Come, All Ye Faithful," "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," and "Silent Night" —the four numbers which will be sung by the massed assembly at the White House are included in the leaflet.

Other titles are "The First Noel," "Away In a Manger," "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day," "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen," "Hark! The Herald Angels Sing" and "We Three Kings of Orient Are."

Upward of 10,000 persons are expected to crowd the south grounds of the Executive Mansion, Christmas Eve, to see President Roosevelt press a button, illuminating the red, white and blue-decorated tree and deliver his holiday message to the Nation.

For the first time, the audience will be invited to join in the carol singing, which will be led by a mixed choir.

Coroner's Jury Today Will Probe Slaying of Karn

A coroner's jury this morning will probe the fatal shooting May 24 of Lewis T. Karn, 29-year-old railroad brakeman, of 1205 Gallatin Street Northwest.

Scheduled to appear before the jury is Jasper Reed Martin, Negro, 43, of 1815 S Street Northwest, a former Baptist minister who is charged with murder in connection with the case.

Martin was arrested Monday and was charged with robbery in connection with a filling station holdup. Investigation uncovered a .45-caliber automatic, the same type weapon which was used by Karn's assailant.

Ballistics examination by Capt. John H. Fowler resulted in his declaring that the bullet taken from Karn's body was fired from the gun.

Karn was shot and killed in a rooming house at 1527 Columbia Street Northwest. His body was found sprawled in a hallway by a resident at 3 a. m.

Mme. Litvinoff Gains Against Infection

Huge Munitions Station Planned At Chambersburg

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, said he was informed yesterday that the War Department had abandoned plans for a 17-million-dollar defense establishment on a 17,000-acre site near Charles Town, W. Va.

He said he was told that a site at Chambersburg, Pa., had been chosen instead.

Randolph announced on November 5 that the War Department had informed him that the Charles Town site had been decided upon, and that protests from farmers in the district resulted in the selection of the alternate site.

Duchess of Gloucester Becomes Mother of Son

London, Dec. 18 (AP).—A son was born today to the duchess of Gloucester, consort of King George's younger brother.

This was the Gloucester's first child.

Before her marriage in 1935 the duchess was Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

OUR CHRISTMAS PRESENT TO YOU ALL. During Christmas Week the Ringside Table columns will be written by three of the most popular figures in Washington's life-after-sundown. They are Paul Young, the hail fellow well met who owns Paul Young's Romany Room; Jimmy Byrd, the chipper and acute young promotion manager of Mayfair; Bert Bernath, the brilliant musician who leads the Pall Mall Room Orchestra. We've read their columns in advance, found them thrilling, and so will you. By the time this column is in print, your columnist will be "On the Chattanooga Choo Choo." Literally! . . . A merry, merry Christmas to each and every one of you!

Helen Myers, who last appeared her at the Carlton, has taken over the novachord and piano in Burt's Trans-Lux. She's as pretty as she is highly talented, specializes in light operatic music.

PROMINENT FACES IN PROMINENT PLACES. Capt. and Mrs. Jimmy Roosevelt in to watch the dancing of their friends, Consolo and Melba. Also in the party were Miss Malvina Thompson, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary, and Col. Henry Osthagen . . . Troika. Mrs. Evalyn McLean entering in a wonderful aura of platina fox, diamonds and Shalimar perfume and apparently very happy about the dinner especially selected for her by Greeter Mischa . . . "MR. MOON," a tune with glowing glamor, was introduced to radio listeners last night by those three bright young air-wave personalities, Todd, Terry and Towne, in collaboration with Carmen Cavallaro's broadcast from the Cosmos Room. Carmen is enthused both over "Mr. Moon" and Todd, Terry and Towne—which makes them all definitely top bracket.

WSHINGTON'S SOPHIE TUCKER, meaning red-head Nora Wells, took top honors at the Neptune Room's "Talent Tryout" this week to an accompainment of applause, whistles and shouts of "More!" Runners-up were the Melody Maids, pretty Irene Dawn and Louise France, who did "Elmer's Tune" zestfully . . . Twin emcees, Dick Leslie and Bill Jenkins, officiated with much eclat . . . Next Tuesday's "Talent Tryout" will be the last prelim event. On January 30 fall the fateful finals when the judges will have to decide which of the previous try-out winners will get that coveted triple engagement in the Earle Theater, the Neptune Room and over WINX.

The Casino Royal is already planning its New Year's jubilee. Maestro "Jivin' Jack" Schafer will fly up to New York over Christmas to get special New Year's Eve music.

A MAN WITHOUT A COUNTRY, at least temporarily, is Saxist Ray Richardson, of the Rainbow Room. Ray's aviation license has been taken away from him until he can prove his citizenship. As he was born in Richmond where they didn't bother with birth certificates prior to 1912, the situation is a bit awkward. It'll probably be fixed up when Ray produces affidavits from his parents testifying that he is really their chee-ild.

NIGHT SPOT AIR RAID WARDENS. Maestro Pete Macias and Manager Don Stone, of the Lounge Riviera are the first night spot air raid wardens in the District. In cast of raids, Pete and Don will shepherd the Riviera patrons over to the "2400" ballroom, right in the middle of the building and plenty safe. And the music will go on . . . Riviera's Ida Clarke will be the busiest gal in town on Christmas Day. She has organing engagements that will keep her going from 10 a. m. until 1 a. m., will play for Pepco, the Officers' Club and the Weaver Brothers' party as well as at Riviera.

The Brown Derby's Variety Boys are now in their last night spot engagement for the duration. One of them is due for the Army soon and the other two are going to join the Navy.

THINGS YOU OUGHTA KNOW. That's not really Santa Claus and an eagle in the Balalaika mural. It's a Russ boyar and a falcon . . . El Patio's new stylists have a silky but daring musical manner . . . The Plymouth is getting a new grand piano for their grand pianist, Carlson . . . More than half of the musicians in town will be heading out to the new Crossroads tomorrow night as soon as they finish their last number at midnight . . . Singer Mary Byrne, of Mayfair, was named Texas' "Miss Television." The Copocabana's Don Armandos says that Crepes Suzette positively cannot be made properly on an electric grill . . . The Lotus revue, "Blossoms From Broadway," runs for a full hour, is fun every minute . . . They're so generous with hors d'ouevre in the Mayflower Lounge that your girl friend may not want dinner later. (This is what we call important information) . . . Sashe Bartnowsky, of the Madrillon, was audition pianist at the Metropolitan Opera during the fabulous days of Otto Kahn . . . Jean Janis, lovely songbird with Layton Bailey's Band in the Metronome Room, is married to Herbie Eastman of the same orchestra. (We weren't supposed to tell that one.) . . . When Vince Terri, guitarist of the Cafe Caprice, thinks some one looks "beat out," he says, "That fellow's got a date with an iron lung."

The enterprising Viking management is planning nothing less than comic opera presentations for about the middle of January. Considering that Viking already presents Stan Hall and his Philadelphia Serenaders, Songstress "Ginger" James and Accordionist Frank Govan, this is a tremendous diversion program.

FABLE OF THE CAR PASS. A gentleman who recently climbed on a street car inadvertently presented the card of Oscar of the Hi Hat instead of his street car pass. The motorman said interestedly, "Yes, I know Oscar, too, but where's your pass?"

SUBURBAN REVELRY. Nightingale. The dance floor is big enough for a motorcycle race and there are 14 top swingsters in Jack Maggio's Band. And the weekend crowds are correspondingly big.

Boulevard Farms. Dance rhythms by the crack Boulevardiers. Just a short drive down beautiful and romantic Mount Vernon Boulevard.

Log Tavern. Dancing here every night in the week, and Sunday afternoons, too, to the clever harmonies of Garry Black's Band, a New York unit.

Kavakos Grill weekend floor shows are consistently getting bigger and snappier. The revue starting this evening is said to be a string of firecrackers.

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR!

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The transplanted Rose Bowl game finds Duke in the strange position of guest in its own stadium. It will be as the host team that Oregon State will make the 3000-mile trip to Durham, N. C. Pasadena's big stadium was blacked out at the Army's command, but there was no blackout of authority over the Rose Bowl game. The Pasadena folks, even at Durham, will still be running the show, and Duke, tecnnically, is still the invited guest.

POVICH

Blackouts can do funny things. Oregon State, despite the fact that the Duke Stadium seats only 55,000 compared to Pasadena's 99,000 seats, will derive more money from the Durham game than it would from the Coast game. That happens because Oregon State, under the present circumstances, does not have to cut each of the other nine Coast Conference Schools in for a $7500 share of its guarantee. That has been one of the conditions under which the Conference permits its champion to play in the Bowl game. It has been waived because the game is not being played on the Coast.

The Durham game won't suffer, financially, despite the fact that it will draw only a $225,000 gate compared to the annual $350,000 gate at Pasadena. The Rose Bowl Committee has relinquished its share of the gate, which used to run pretty high. The committee traditionally has taken down 35 per cent of its first $100,000 to come in the gate, 20 per cent of the next $50,000 and 10 per cent of all receipts thereafter. It adds up to more than $50,000 which the committee won't take. Duke, relieved of $20,000 worth of expenses which its coast trip would have necessitated, will probably net more than the $99,000 it was to receive if the game were played at Pasadena.

Manner of Command Irksome

The story from Pasadena is that the Rose Bowl people didn't mind so much the command by the Army to cancel the game as they did the manner in which it was given. One high Army officer was very officious about the whole thing, declaring "the blackout isn't the only reason the game must be called off. Why should people in this country be enjoying themselves while our men at Honolulu and Midway are under attack?"

That last crack stirred the ire of Robert McCurdy, president of the Tournament of Roses Committee, who told the officer it was a narrow-minded viewpoint. Snapped the officer: "Were you ever overseas?"

"Yes, I was overseas," said McCurdy, displaying a series of wounds, "were you." The officer's answer was a reluctant, but truthful "no."

The battle at Durham has all the elements of a pretty good football game, incidentally. Oregon State, if it is famous for nothing else, was the first team to stop Stanford's dreaded T attack, handing an unbeaten Stanford team a 10-0 defeat after it had won 12 in a row. Oregon State denies that the game was played on a muddy field, as reported. "It didn't start to rain until late in the second quarter, and by that time we had out 10-0 lead,' they point out. "We stopped Stanford on a dry field as well as a muddy one and that second half mud didn't do our attack any good either."

Oregon State is coached by Lon Stiner, the old Nebraska all-American lineman, who devised the sliding defense to stop Stanford's T attack. Stiner deduced that Frank Albert's quarterbacking was the important item in the T formation and that any set defense gave Albert considerable leeway in calling his plays. Quentin Greenough, Oregon State center, was virtually a quarterback on defense and the Oregonians rarely lined up twice in the same position.

Oregon State in Tough League

Oregon State was licked twice last season, but so was every other team in the Coast Conference, which may indicate that they were in a tough league. Their first defeat was a brutal one. In that 13-7 licking by U. S. C., Oregon State was leading, 7-6, with 13 seconds to play when Bill Essick, 6-foot-4 end, caught a 50-yard pass inches from the end of the field to beat the Webfeet. In its only other defeat, the 7-0 beating by Washington State, the Oregonians were scored on by an 80-yard march from the opening kickoff. On the next kickoff Oregon State marched 77 yards and was stopped on the 2-yard line.

The fellow who makes the Oregon State attack move is Don Durdan, a left-handed right halfback, who takes the ball on reverses and because of his southpaw passing ability is dynamite. If the secondary defense closes in too quickly on Durdan he passes. If it lays back he tucks the ball under his arm and runs. He's the best athlete in Oregon State history, according to an alumni vote.

Like every other Coast team Oregon State specializes in reverses, deep ones, short ones and fakes. That will make it very interesting on January 1, because Wallace Wade's Duke club itself is very reverse conscious. The Duke teams in the past have been famed chiefly as defensive outfits, but Wade apparently has come up with the sort of material that has made him change his tactics.

Duke's Steve Lach, an Altoona, Pa., lad, has averaged 8 yards on every ball carrying attempt of the year, and Wade has a pair of wingbacks in Moffat Storer and Bill Wartman who race the 100 yards in 9.3 in track shoes. Small wonder then that he features the reverse plays by the wingback which demand super speed. Duke also has a potent end in Jim Smith, who carries the ball on end-around plays and in ten attempts during the season has averaged 14.3 yards per gallop. It should be fun in Durham's Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 18.—For this bloke's dough, such as it isn't, the most notable improvement in boxing this year has been the successful efforts of Mike Jacobs, Abe Greene and a few other boxing figures to end the conflict over boxing titles.

CONSIDINE

Jacobs was supposed to be opposed to every fighter who had an N. B. A. stamp on his rind. Yet Gus Lesnevich, primarily plugged by the N. B. A., was given the match that enabled him to become the undisputed light heavyweight champion, and Tony Zale was given the match with Georgie Abrams that made him the world's middleweight champion of New York as well as the N. B. A. titleholder.

Tomorrow night Lew Jenkins, fostered as champion by Jacobs and the New York Boxing Commission, is required to put his title claims on the line against Sammy Angott, a rough, tough citizen from Louisville, who has the blessing of the N. B. A.

By about 10:30 tomorrow night the last snarl in the last important division will have been cleared up and the boxing public will be confronted with the curious situation of having only one world's champion to a division.

It isn't precisely Jenkins' fault—for a change—that he isn't considered the undisputed lightweight champ. Lou Ambers, his predecessor, got in some sort of scrape with the N. B. A. and that body, which is considerably more important in this country than the New York end of the business, except in New York, decided that the title was vacant.

Angott Beat Day for Title

The N. B. A. decreed that the winner of a fight between Angott and Davey Day in Louisville on the night before the 1940 Derby was to be the winner. Angott won a 15-round decision and six days later Jenkins, mean and lean, belted out Ambers in three hot heats.

Since that time both boys have had their troubles. Jenkins fought in some overnight matches and had his ears pinned back, especially by Bob Montgomery and Henry Armstrong. Angott beat Montgomery, but lost an overweight match to Ray Robinson. Angott has never been knocked out, and seldom has been floored. Montgomery had Jenkins in serious trouble and Armstrong made Lew faint, or something, on his stool, after Lew looked as if he were going to flatten the game little poet-lariat.

Angott fights something like Armstrong did. That is, he bores in, hammering away at the bacons of his opponent. Jenkins' bacons are tender, and there isn't much meat on them.

Great Fighters Held Crown

The crown the boys are fighting for is full of the jewels of tradition. It was worn by the likes of Jack McAuliffe and Jack Dempsey the Nonpareil, Frank Erne, Joe Gans, Jimmy Britt, Bat Nelson, Ad Wolgast, Willie Ritchie, Freddie Welsh, Benny Leonard, Rocky Kansas, Sammy Mandell, Tony Canzoneri, Barney Ross and Armstrong. Some pretty good fightin' men. As a matter of fact, McAuliffe, Gans, Nelson, Leonard, Canzoneri and Armstrong will be remembered long after many heavyweight champions will be forgotten.

Maybe Jenkins and Angott don't deserve to carry the water bucket of some of their predecessors. But here they are, the conflicting world champs. After they fight there will only be one rightful heir to that crown, which is what the Old Masters would have wanted.

Me I dunno. I haven't been right in the lightweight division since I picked Nelson over Britt on September 9, 1905. So give me Jenkins, the underdog, for he's fighting for his right to stay up where the dough is.

All 55,000 Seats Filled At Durham

No More Orders Are Accepted, Officials Say; Duke Team in Pre-Holiday Practice

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., Dec. 18.—Duke University officials said tonight that the transplanted Rose Bowl football game here January 1 between Duke and Oregon State was a sellout. The Duke Stadium, with temporary stands installed, will seat about 55,000.

Officials said that sufficient ticket orders "already have been received to fill all seats available for the game. No more orders will be received."

Holidays Coming Up

Durham, N. C., Dec. 18 (AP).—With just two more days of practice before they will leave for their homes for Christmas holidays, the Duke University Blue Devils this afternoon put in a strenuous drill for their Rose Bowl game here January 1 with the Oregon State Beavers.

Head Coach Wallace Wade and his aides gave the squad a thorough session in fundamentals. Wade had the guards and tackles working in one group, the backs and ends in another, and then consolidated the entire squad for a drill on offense and defense.

Steve Lach, back, was impressive in the drill, particularly on offense. He shared honors with Tom Davis, sophomore tailback. The defensive play of the Blue Devils was termed "fair" by the coaches.

The session closed with a drill in running back the kick-off. A post practice session in punting and place-kicking was held.

Pro Bowl Game Is Shifted to N. Y., Jan. 4

Navy Relief To Benefit From Clash

Originally Listed For West Coast, Game to Be Played At Polo Grounds

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 18.—The Pro Bowl game between the winner of Sunday's title battle between the New York Giants and Chicago's Bears, and a squad selected from the nine other National Football League teams, will be played at New York January 4, instead of at Los Angeles, Commissioner Elmer Layden announced today.

The game, previously an annual event at Los Angeles, but driven away from the West Coast by the war, will be played for the benefit of the Naval Relief Society of the Third Naval District, Layden said. It will be played at the Polo Grounds, the Giants' home park. The All-star squad will assemble in New York Tuesday to begin drills under the coach whose team loses Sunday's game here.

Brooklyn Six Snaps 10-Game Losing Streak

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—The Brooklyn Americans tonight ended a disastrous 10-game losing streak, defeating the Detroit Red Wings 4-3 in overtime to climb into a tie with the Montreal Canadiens for sixth place, in the National Hockey League standing.

It took a lucky goal, giving a break to a team that has lacked the breaks for a month, to assure the Americans of the victory that they clearly earned on the night's play.

After 39 seconds of the overtime, Center Fred Thurier passed out from behind the Detroit net. The puck struck Bill Jennings' skate, wobbled crazily, and bobbed over the goal line, barely eluding the grasp of Goalie Johnny Mowers.

Detroit had come from behind with two goals in the third period—one of them in the last minute of regular time—to force the game into overtime. The tying goal, like the goal that won for Brooklyn, was luck-tinged. It was fired by Don Grosso and bounded into the Americans' cage off Pat Egan's skate.

So ended the longest losing streak in N. H. L. history in ten years.

Black Hawks Beat New York Rangers

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks returned to third place in the National Hockey League standings tonight by defeating the New York Rangers, 5 to 1, before 7402 spectators in the Chicago Stadium. The New Yorkers dropped from third to fourth as a result of the defeat.

Rodak Outpoints Hogan in 10 Rounds

Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—Leo Rodak, 135, Chicago, outpointed Tommy Hogan, 135, New York, in ten rounds here tonight.

Johnny Comma, 155, Oil ity, Pa., outpointed Art Tate, 153, Cleveland, in four rounds.

Soose Beats Reeves by Wide Margin

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Dec. 18.—Billy Soose of Farrell, Pa., tonight won his first fight as a light heavyweight by outpointing Jimmy Reeves of Cleveland by a wide margin over a ten-round route. Tipping the scales at 174, the former middleweight champion was far superior to Reeves, who weighed 168.

Billy landed jabs at will throughout the fight, attended by 7778 satisfied fans.

Reeves took the first round by coming out fast and landing several hard rights. Soose found the range in the second, which was even.

Wilson Stops Kaplan

Jackie Wilson, 142, of Los Angeles, scored a technical knockout over Boston's Mike Kaplan, 145, after 52 seconds of the third round of their battle, scheduled for 10.

Wilson slammed home a flurry of hard jabs and uppercuts in the first round, topping them off with a hard right cross which sent Kaplan down for a count of eight.

A terrific right that landed flush on the jaw sent Kaplan down in the third and one of his handlers rushed into the ring. Referee Tony Labranch immediately awarded the fight to Wilson, but said he was "about to call it off, regardless."

Golf, Tennis Balls Take Beating Here

Priorities Announcement in re Rubber Bring Run on Shops

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Metropolitan Washington's outdoor sportsmen met with action the threatened rubber shortage and yesterday besieged golf shops at the country clubs, department stores and wholesale sporting goods houses with December requests for golf balls in dozen lots. Tennis balls were also included in the unprecedented buying spree.

Golf professionals and their assistants at a majority of the District clubs were amazed at the succession of telephone calls ordering golf balls by the dozen, plus unexpected winter visits of the occasional players who stopped by to lay in a supply for next year.

Golf and tennis balls are on the list of products which face elimination from the manufacturer's list in line with the new rubber conservation plan, announced Wednesday by OPM Civilian Supply Director Leon Henderson. They are classed as luxury articles.

Of the two major sporting goods representatives here, one reported calls from golf shops and department stores throughout the day on reorders and at closing time they were sold out of their most popular make of golf ball. The other did not receive an unusual run on golf balls but reported an unprecedented tennis ball business.

No lines were in evidence at any of the department stores but the major firms reported consistent sales of golf balls, mostly in dozen lots.

Zuppke Seeks Coaching Post At Miami U.

BOB ZUPPKE

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 18.—Robert Zuppke, who resigned as football coach at the University of Illinois November 17, has applied for the head coaching job at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, it was reported in well-informed quarters tonight.

Frank Wilton resigned as coach at Miami today, terminating a ten-year reign there.

Zuppke said upon his retirement—which ended a career started at Illinois in 1913—that he did not intend to seek another coaching job, and that he probably would devote his full time to painting and farming.

Since then, however, Zupp was reported to have told intimates that he was "too young to be inactive" and began looking around.

Wilson Five Scores Over Baltimore City

A smart, lightning-fast Woodrow Wilson High five wound up its preholiday schedule yesterday, impressively routing Baltimore City College, 40-30, on the local court. It was a contest for only one period.

Don Hillock, lanky scoring star of last season, rang up the bulk of the winners' points—16—but his efforts couldn't overshadow those of his mates, who displayed an air-tight defense and highly convincing offense throughout.

Using perfect teamwork, the Tigers increased their 7-5 margin midway of the first period to 15-10 at the end, and by halftime it had zoomed to 28-17. Approximately the same lead was retained the rest of the way, though City College cut its deficit to eight points late in the final quarter.

Though he amassed three personal fouls early in hostilities, Freddy Vinson, slender forward of the Tigers, managed to stay in the game until the end and score nine points. Billy Jawish, his mate, and Baltimore's Ted Friedman weren't so lucky, both being waved out late in the rough-and-tumble affair.

The visitors were led by Bill Schmitt, an elongated forward who is the only first-string holdover from last season. He registered 13 points and at the same time paced the losers' floor game.

Johns Hopkins Beats Gallaudet

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Dec. 18.—Johns Hopkins downed Gallaudet College, 53-37 tonight for its third straight victory in the Mason-Dixon Conference basketball race.

The unbeaten Blue Jays racked up 8 points before Gallaudet tallied, and rolled up a 14-6 score before the second team took over in the last half of the second period. Gallaudet recovered ground then, and at half-time trailed, 23-19.

The visitors matched Hopkins point for point until the final ten minutes when, with the score 36-32, the Blue Jays spurted ahead to roll up a heavy margin.

Edgar Lucas Is Nominated Md. State Golf President

The Maryland State Golf Association's unwritten rule of elevating the first vice president to the presidency was discarded in yesterday's surprising report of the nominating committee.

Dr. Robert A. Keilty, Washington's hard-working vice president from Congressional Country Club who had been announced as the incoming president at last year's winter meeting, will again serve as first vice president and Edgar Lucas, treasurer, tournament chairman and one of the five vice presidents, will be elevated to the presidency.

It has been the custom of the Old Line State body through the 21 years to move the officers up each year and heretofore it has been possible to tell the incoming president for seven years, through the line of vice presidents.

Dr. Keilty has been the most active Washingtonian connected with the golf organization in its history and plans were formulated at last year's annual meeting to hold the 1942 meeting in Washington for the first time in honor of elevating a District golfer to the presidency.

The meeting date is January 16 at the Roland Park Course of the Baltimore Country Club. A recommendation to the by-laws is in order to have the date changed to the third Friday in March instead of April.

In addition to Lucas and Keilty the incoming slate includes as vice presidents: Nathan Smith, of Elkridge; Harry Pitt, of Manor; Charles Catherman, of Cumberland, and A. Herman Stump, Green Spring. John D. Hospelhorn, vice president and treasurer; Albert Steinem, Woodmont, general counsel, and Emmet Gary, secretary.

John R. Daily, former president of Manor County Club; John G. Thomas, president of the Green Spring Valley Club, and George R. Morris, president of the Bonnie View, submitted the slate as members of the nominating committee.

DuVall Out for Season, Gordy Lost to Terps for Week

Columbus U. Meets Rider At Tech Gym

Maryland Visits Cumberland Tonight For West Virginia Game; Frosh Play

Coach Burt Shipley lost Mearle DuVall for the season, and Hank Gordy for a week, yesterday as he prepared the University of Maryland courtmen for a continutaion of their road schedule. The Terps meet West Virginia tonight at Cumberland.

In the only local attraction tonight Columbus will be host to Rider College, which was unbeaten previous to its game with Duke last night in Durham. Game time is 8:45 at Tech High. The Trenton, N. J., visitors are annually among the best small-college clubs in the East.

Maryland's Southern Conference tournament hopes were dashed when DuVall underwent an operation at the University Hospital in Baltimore for a cartilage on his knee. The 1939-40 letterman who stayed out with the injured knee last year, was counted on for a starring role this season, but his knee went back on him in one of the early practices.

Gordy, a first-stringer last year who was outstanding in the William and Mary game Monday night, cut his hand on a broken dish in the dining room yesterday and the cut required four stitches. He will be out at least a week or possibly 10 days.

Shipley will start his all-sophomore aggregation against the Mountaineers tonight on the Fort Hill High School court. The Terp frosh will meet the scholastics in a preliminary.

Travis at Center

Bob James and Tommy Mont will be at forward, Ernie Travis, the former Roosevelt star and high-scorer against Richmond and the Indians, at center and Heckert Horn and Don Schuerholtz at guard.

Shipley was pleased and surprised at the Terps' victory over Richmond and he chalked the William and Mary loss up to lack of experience. The Mountaineers present somewhat of an unknown quantity but in preseason stories were reported to be better than usual.

Despite its 14-point margin over Potomac State in the season's opener Columbus will be the underdog against Rider tonight, which has already beaten Kings College, Hudson College, Princeton Seminary and the United States Coast Guard, the latter in an overtime tilt.

H. Rex Ellis, Notre Dame '40, is coaching the Rider club for the second year. The Rough Riders won 11 and lost 7 last year and will be back with a veteran squad. Fourteen of the squad members are better than 6 feet tall.

Columbus Coach Ben Kail will start his all-local lineup of Burns, Fillah, Viana, Stanton and Berry. Burns was a 19-point man against Potomac State in the season's opener Wednesday night.

Columbus will be host to Pennsylvania State Teachers College of Lockhaven tomorrow night. Preliminaries involving local independent teams are scheduled at 7:15 each night.

Hoyas Play Temple

Georgetown will complete the week's action tomorrow night, taking to the road for the first time to meet Temple in Philadelphia. The Owls have lost only to Oregon in a heavy preholiday schedule.

The Hoyas' opposition, Western Maryland and American U., has not been the best but their respective totals of 66 and 77 points against the Mason Dixon Conference foes was impressive. Bill Bornheimer will carry a 20-point game average against the Owls, perennially one of the strongest college court clubs in the East.

To partially make up for a lack of top-flight opposition before meeting Temple, G. U. Coach Elmer Ripley has used his five starting players through 72 of a possible 80 minutes in the opening games.

George Washington University's squad will remain intact over the holidays as the Colonials have two big assignments for next week, the University of Oklahoma Monday night at Riverside and Indiana Saturday night. Both mid-Western invaders are touted as powerful figures in their respective conferences, the Big Six and Western, respectively. M. W. W.

Golf Champ Tops Women Athletes

Betty Hicks Newell Given First Place Over Mrs. Cooke

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—A slim, trim 20-year-old golfer has emerged to check the threatened monopoly of tennis players on the title of outstanding woman athlete of the year.

She is Betty Hicks Newell, Long Beach, Calif., housewife whose triumph in the national tournament was enough to convince the sports editors participating in the Associated Press poll that she ranked No. 1 on the list of star feminine performers.

Mrs. Newell was placed first by 24 of the 66 scribes, and her 101 points, based on three for first, two for second and one for third, gave her a substantial margin over Mrs. Elwood Cooke, the former Sarah Palfrey Fabyan. Mrs. Cooke pulled 69 points for her tennis feats, including winning the national championship.

Succeeds Alice Marble

Mrs. Newell succeeds Alice Marble, net great, as queen of women athletes, Miss Marble, now a professional, was leader in both 1939 and 1940. She has been inactive from a competitive standpoint much of this year, and was dropped to fifth place.

Nancy Merki and Gloria Callen, youthful swimmers, ranked third and fourth, respectively, with 46 and 48 points. Patty Berg, golfer; Helen Crlenkovich, swimmer; Mrs. Babe Didrikson-Zaharias, golfer and all-around athlete, and Betty Jameson, golfer, make up the remainder of the top nine.

Mrs. Sonje Henie Topping, who brought ice skating into the big business field, for the first time in several years was ignored by the experts.

Others to receive votes were:

Four points: Pauline Betz, tennis.

Three points: Helen Jacobs, tennis.

Two points: Dorothy Kirby, golf; Dorothy May Bundy, tennis; Gretchen Fraser, skiing; Marjorie Gestring, swimming; Prince Neufer, swimming; Jean Lane, sprinting.

One point: Hellen Davis, trotting horse driver; Phyllis Otto, golf; Evelyn Chandler, skating; the late Marion Miley, golf.

Hockey Eagles Host Tonight To Johnstown

One of the largest crowds of the season is expected at Riverside Stadium tonight when Bill (Pick) Hines' veteran Johnstown Blue Birds put in their bid for undisputed possession of the Eastern League's lead in their outstanding game with the Washington Eagles at 8:30 o'clock. Ten per cent of the gross receipts will be donated to the Christmas Basket Fund.

The Blue Birds will go into tonight's game deadlocked with the New York Rovers for the league's lead, each having 27 points. The result appears no better than a toss-up inasmuch as both teams have been playing their finest hockey of the season this past week.

The defending champions tonight will be bolstered by the return to action of defenseman Len Burrage and veteran center and winger Ernie Mundey. Burrage, key man of the Eagles, served a one match suspension against Atlantic City last Tuesday, while Mundey has been inactive in the Eagles' last two games with an injured right shoulder.

The Eagles tonight will be out to extend their undefeated streak to five consecutive games, a streak that had its inception last Friday night when they upset Johnstown, 5-4. They repeated by a similar score over the Boston Olympics in the Boston Garden the following night; played Boston to a 2-2 overtime tie last Sunday afternoon and avenged two previous defeats by turning the tables on Atlantic City this past Tuesday night, 5-3.

Tonight's game might easily resolve itself into a picturesque duel involving the Eagles' newly acquired goalie, Craig McClelland, and brilliant Frank Ceryance, Johnstown's great net minder.

Ceryance, invariably at his best against the Eagles, has permitted exactly one goal in Johnstown's last two starts, turning back the Rovers last Tuesday night, 4 to 1, and following up with a shutout of the Jersey Skeeters in River Vale, N. J., the following night, 3-0.

Little Generals Score Over Stanley, 40-19

Washington-Lee High basketers rang up their initial victory of the season last night, downing a stubborn but unpolished Stanley (Va.) High five, 40-19, before 200 fans on the Arlingtonians' court. The Little Generals dropped their opener Tuesday to a surprisingly strong Tech High five.

Capt. Medford Painter, of the visiting valley crew, performed brilliantly for the losing cause and had amassed 12 points to capture high-scoring honors before leaving the game in the fourth period on four personal fouls. His team led only once during the fray and that at the outset of the contest, when he sank a foul for the initial score.

Bobby Phillips, a new addition to the Generals squad, led his team from a forward berth with 10 tallies for the runnerup position in the scoring race. Teammates Tiahat and Owens, holdovers from last year's team, followed close behind with eight and six tallies, respectively.

Sugar Bowl Activities To Draw 200 Athletes

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Dec. 18.—Before teaming together to help defeat the Axis—which will mean actual service for most of them—about 200 of Uncle Sam's finest athletes will do battle royal here among themselves within two weeks in one of the greatest carnivals of sports this country has ever seen.

It will be a real all-American show, with the best available teams and athletes from every part of the country, and featuring the American game of football. A total of nearly 200,000 spectators—about 50,000 of them visitors from far and near—will see the various events.

War itself has augmented the program by adding the East-West All-Star football game, transferred from San Francisco for military reasons, to the regular midwinter sports carnival culminating in the Sugar Bowl game between Fordham and Missouri on New Year's Day.

In addition, some excellent horses from California's blacked-out Santa Anita race track will be here to hike interest in the Fair Grounds meet which opens Christmas Day.

Since all the participating athletes are or will be subject to military service, the job for scores of them will be preliminary to active duty. Twelve of Fordham's football players already have been accepted for naval service, although most of those are still awaiting call. Many of the Missouri players, students of an R. O. T. C. school, will be in uniform before it's over over there.

The Sugar Bowl events begin Saturday, December 27. The Nation's outstanding male amateur tennis players begin a three-day tournament, the Rutgers oarsmen meet the Orleans Rowing Club, and there will be a sailing regatta on Lake Pontchartrain.

The next day the track and field meet gets under way, with several world record-holders defending their laurels. Monday, December 29, boxing teams of the University of Florida and Southwestern Louisiana Institute trade blows. The following night Long Island University's great basketball team meets Tennessee's Southeastern Conference champions.

Fordham and Missouri clash on the gridiron on New Year's Day and on January 3 the Eastern and Western All-Star teams, with All-America players from all sections, wind up the program.

Charlotte Hall Five Defeats Hyattsville

Charlotte Hall's fast-breaking basketball quintet marked up its fifth straight victory yesterday by defeating Hyattsville High School, 32 to 28, on the Charlotte Hall floor.

The winning five's point-making again was capably handled by Frank Cady, of Washington, who tallied five field goals and four foul shots for 14 points.

Charlotte Hall held a 14-12 advantage at intermission. In the late stages the winners successfully staved off a Hyattsville rally by freezing the ball. The losing teams' scoring was led by Center Sideroff, who managed for 11 points.

Lewis Victor in Post's Benefit Wrestle Match

Needy Family Fund Nets $150 From Joe Turner's Show; Henry Is Beaten

The Washington Post Needy Families Fund was swelled by another $150 last night through the generosity of Promoter Joe Turner and some 2000 wrestling fans who trekked to Turner's Arena to see Ed (Strangler) Lewis dispose of Jim Henry in the main bout of a six-event card.

Big Ed and his famous throttle hold, which were renown when Jim Henry was in short pants, proved too much for Henry and he capitulated in 14 minutes after Lewis had employed a series of strangle holds.

Jim's original plan of attack was to fight fire with fire, and as the match started he clamped onto the spacious Lewis skull with a pair of strangle holds. This strategy was as futile as a man running uphill in a hurricane, however, and Big Ed tossed Jim down as dexterously as he'd handle a short beer. Then Henry switched his offensive to the ample Lewis tummy and beat tattoo that visibly upset the Strangler.

He rallied and when Referee Casey Berger warned Henry, Big Ed grunted to "leave him alone—he'd fix him." And that's just what he did.

Lewis clamped on with a crushing headlock which Henry broke loose from and scurried to safety outside the ring. When he clambered back in, Lewis bounced him around with a series of headlocks which ended the match.

After hostilities were over, Mr. Lewis ponderously eased his 285 pounds out of the ring, beaming all over the premises, and well pleased with himself.

Lewis, who confesses to 50 years of age admitted that he was a bit breathless as a result of a lay-off of more than two years.

In the semiwindup, Pat Fraley made handsome Paul Boesch give up on a leglock. This bout was clean all the way and the science both lads displayed was pleasing to the fans. Once they dropkicked simultaneously, and the ring shook with the impact as they both hit the deck.

Rugged Babe Caddock put Stanley Pinto away in 14 minutes with a leglock. Pinto, who according to rumor, models for comic strip artists in his spare time, was villainous as usual.

Lou Plummer and Len Macaluso battled to a draw. Lou, who's theatrical poise improves constantly, was billed as the evil one, and his misdeeds had Lenny battling for his very life upon more than one occasion.

In the only match to produce any gore, something called Tiger Joe Morris took Jim Austeri over the hurdles with a body press in 19 minutes. Austeri forgot himself and popped the Tiger in the puss too hard, and there was real blood all over the place.

In the opener came the biggest rassle upset in years Portly Eddie Newman finally won a match, putting a body press to Fred Carone after 16 minutes.

Brewers Host To Sphas' Five At Turner's

Four stars who won their spurs as All-American basketball players in college will make up the personnel of the Champion Philadelphia Sphas in their American Professional League benefit game with the Washington Brewers tonight at Turner's Arena.

Five-time champions of the league, the Sphas will invade the Fourteenth and W Street court with Ossie Schectman, captain of last season's Long Island University team; Irv Torgoff, former Long Island captain; Moe Goldman, erstwhile City College of New York captain and Red Rosan, former Temple captain are the All-American boys in the lineup.

The game, scheduled to start at 9 p. m., will be preceded by a preliminary between two Heurich Amateur League teams, the Jewish Community Center and the Bureau of Investigation, who clash at 7:30.

Coach Mack Posnak, with his team entrenched in third place, just behind Wilmington, which trails Trenton, announced that two Defense Bonds, purchased by the Washington players, will be given away at tonight's game during intermission. Posnak also stated that service men in uniform would be admitted for a reduced rate.

The race for first half honors in the American League is no runaway for any one club, and before the week-end the picture may change completely.

Washington is out to duplicate its 46-39 victory scored over the Sphas in Philly a few weeks ago. It took three record-breaking 5-minute extra periods to turn the trick. Since that defeat—the champs' first in seven home games this year—Eddie Gottlieb's club has been gunning for revenge.

Giants' Defense to Test Bears' Great Attack in Title Game

Two Leading Clubs Match Skill Sunday

Bears Hold League Record in Offense Department; Giants Best on Defense

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 18.—The National Football League's championship game between the Chicago Bears and the New York Giants will match the circuit's best ground-gaining club against its top defensive unit.

The Bears simply outpointed all opponents this season when it came to advancing the ball by running or passing. They set a new league record of 4285 yards gained, leading their nearest rival by nearly 1000 yards.

The Giants, on the other hand, yielded only 2378 yards to their foes' onslaughts, for the finest defensive total in the loop.

The Bears also were the highest scoring team with 396 points, while the Giants held their foes to 114 points for the best mark.

Although the clubs met in a preseason exhibition game, this will be the Giants' first official chance to tackle the problem of halting the Bears. They won't be able to set the trap for just one or two Bears either, because no less than eight Chicagoans compiled more than 100 yards rushing apiece.

Leading Coach George Halas' hit-and-run brigade were George McAfee, 474 yards, and Norman Standlee, 414 yards. Skipping along for a mere 361 yards was Bill Osmanski and for 304 yards, Hugh Gallarneau. Ray Nolting, Bob Swisher, Harry Clark and Gary Famiglietti were the other 100-plus men.

Chief ball-lugger for Coach Steve Owens' Eastern champions was Tuffy Leemans, who chugged for 332 yards. Len Eshmont, Ward Cuff, Andy Marefos, Frank Reagan and George Franck all ran up totals of between 100 and 200 yards.

An item of concern to Halas is the recollection of his team's difficulties in defeating the Giants in that preseason exhibition game. The score was 14-8, and the Bears did not move into the lead until the final 3 minutes. At that time the Giants were crippled, Leemans being among the invalids. Now the New Yorkers are at peak strength, Franck's ailing back appearing to be fully recovered.

Out Hunting With Jack Bell:

Rare Bufflehead Ducks Now in This Area

Bag Limit Set At 3 Per Day For Wily Fowl

Several large flocks of bufflehead ducks have invaded the upper Potomac River between Swains Locks and Seneca during the past week. They must have come in with the rough weather of last Sunday for we hunted in company with Jack Nelson in the same vicinity during Saturday's downpour and not a duck did we see.

However, Monday morning we were back there again, and it was then that we saw three large flocks of bufflehead, probably a hundred in each flock.

One thing certain is that these ducks are not as wily and intelligent as most of the river ducks that stop in that area; as a result we got our limit of three bufflehead in very short order. We found that they do not decoy readily, and shot most of ours jump shooting.

We wish to caution hunters shooting in that area that Federal regulations allow only three bufflehead ducks in any one day. This species of duck is not any too plentiful, and the concentration of them in such large flocks is very unusual. Hunters should be careful and not make the mistake of shooting too many of them.

It is an easy duck to identify, being very small with a large, loosely feathered head. The head is black, with a hood or white cap or triangular band covering the crown and extending down to the sides about on a line with the eyes. The dark section of the head is over shot with a metallic glint of green and purple. The back is black mottled with white fading out toward the tail, the undersides are white and legs and feet lavender lead.

The female as usual differs substantially from the male. She has no white cap but merely a small white patch behind and just below the eyes. Her back throat and crown are a dull brown, with breast and underparts white, when she is viewed from a distance she appears to be a sooty slaty shade. Legs and feet are exactly as in the male.

This specie is very swift on the wing; frequently they will dive beneath the surface rather than take to wing. We hope that hunters will not kill by mistake more than the three of these beautiful ducks permitted by Federal regulations.

These Are Bufflehead Ducks, Male and Female

With the greatest concentration of waterfowl in years at the head of the Chesapeake on the famous Susquehanna Flats, comparatively few birds have been killed, according to Chief Deputy Game Warden Richard F. Norris.

Federal officers last week revisited some blinds in the section and finding conditions which caused them to be closed for baiting, obliberated, and now have removed the ban on shooting from them.

Maryland's deer kill during the open season which ended last Saturday, was very small compared to the kill of the 1940 season. The deer kill by counties for both 1940 and 1941 is as follows:

Cecil	8	17
Washington	23	16
Alleghany	48	47
Worcester	*	53
Garrett	289	138
Anne Arundel	1	*
Frederick	5	*
Dorchester	1
Total	375	271

*Closed season.

Worcester County produced the biggest surprise with the bagging of 53 deer. Garrett County, which has always produced many deer, was far below last season's kill.

Game officials point out that weather conditions in western Maryland had a great deal to do with the poor kill. It was so foggy on three mornings that many hunters gave up in disgust. On other days the woods were so dry, that deer were warned long before a hunter had a chance. This all of course had much to do with the small kill.

With the deer season hardly closed, Virginia already has started to mend the supply by restocking, through the purchase of more than 200 deer, which will be brought into the State early in the coming year and released in areas where additional brood stock is needed.

The deer released this winter will be shipped to Virginia from Northern States where they can be trapped when the snow is deep. They will be paid for in part, by money received from the sale of National Forest Stamps. Many of these deer will be released in National Forest areas in the western part of the State, which are managed as public hunting grounds by the United States Forest Service and the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

2 Fordham Grid Stars Pass Naval Air Reserve Tests

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—Alex Santilli, left tackle, and Jim Blumenstock, left halfback, returned to Fordham football practice today and announced they had passed their tests for the Naval Air Reserve.

The two, together with six other Rams who will meet Missouri in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day, expect to be called into service about the middle of January. Today's workout was confined to a short signal drill with Sammy Ososki, who spelled Blumenstock, excelling in running, and Benny Babula, reserve fullback, doing much of the passing.

S. American Natators Here Monday Night

An all-star squad of 16 swimmers, tops in their respective events in the South Atlantic area, will oppose the South American team in an exhibition at the Shoreham pool Mondy night.

Four of the group named by A. Earle Weeks after a careful survey of the list by club coaches are from Baltimore. Two are District champions and one, Irving Einbinder, of Baltimore, was national junior backstroke titleholder last year.

A well-rounded program has been arranged by the committee with diving, comic diving and formation swimming by the Washington Golf and Country Club's crack team. June Booth Stan, coach of the latter group, has prepared a couple of novelties that should spice the card.

To Stage Exhibition

Patsy Plamer, comely queen of the city's mermids, and Nick Sheridan, District champion, will stage the diving exhibition. Only other girls on the program are Lucille Kirsch and Betty Roland, who will swim the backstroke.

Howard McAdoo, District 220-yard free style king, is entered in his specialty along with Joe LaSalle, who, like McAdoo, represents the Ambassador team; Harry Palmer, Y. M. C. A., and Henry Steingass and Charley Barker, both of Baltimore.

Joe Redmond, of the Boys Club of Washington and breaststroke champ, heads the field in this event. William Bruce, Y. M. C. A., and Einbinder will compete with him. The backstroke field is comprised of John Fielder and Chic Webb, Y. M. C. A.; Don Anderson, Shoreham, and Ed Bloome, Baltimore.

Georgetown Boys Club Boxers Beat Alexandria

The Georgetown branch of the Washington Boys Club, opened its boxing season last night at Georgetown by defeating the Alexandria Boys Club, 4-0.

The victory marked Humphrey DeCola's debut as coach of the winners. DeCola, a former amateur boxer, is well known in professional ring circles in his association with Matt Twomey, manager of Steve Mamakos, a leading middleweight contender.

Three exhibition matches were also staged with no decisions being rendered.

94-pound class—Johnny Binns (G) won over Eddie Monerief.

Exhibition Bouts

87-pound class—Vic Mazzi (G) vs. Kenny Smallwood (G).

Hunter Saves His Shirttail But Loses $25

By the Associated Press

Warm Springs, Va., Dec. 18.—M. M. Deffinbaugh saved his shirttail when he went on a hunting trip, but it cost him more than $25.

Deffinbaugh's account of the fine buck deer he brought down was duly recorded in the public prints. The deer was so large, he recounted, he went for help to aid him in dragging it out of the woods. In his absence someone stole the deer.

The following day Deffinbaugh returned to the hunt and killed another buck.

The Game Warden read of the the huntsman's prowess and noting that he had violated the law of one deer per person hailed him into trial justice court.

Deffinbaugh protested that the story about the big one that got away was in reality a fish story—he just made it up to save his shirttail—a penalty prescribed by deerhunters for a member of the party who misses a shot.

But the court decided it believed what it saw by the papers and assessed Deffinbaugh $25 and costs.

Vulcan Bowl Game May Draw 15,000

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 18 (AP).—Vulcan Bowl officials today forecast a crowd of about 15,000 for the New Year's Day battle between Morris Brown and Langston University.

Out at Langston, Okla., Coach Zip Gayles had had the Lions hard at work since the first of the week. Gayles scouted the Morris Brown-N. C. College peach blossom game December 6 and has mapped defensive strategy calculated to check the mighty John (Big Train) Moody and his mates.

Morris Brown, Atlanta's Southern Intercollegiate Conference champions, has held a strong claim to the Negro national title for the past two seasons.

A Memory of Christmas, Long, Long Ago

I can see him now a-sitting in the chair he loved so well,
As he opened up his presents, he would grin, for he could tell
By the gurgling in the package that our gift was no surprise
And he showed his hearty pleasure by the twinkle in his eyes.

He would fumble with the wrapper
as he pulled the ribbon off
And he'd give a little chuckle and a funny little cough,
"Well, for goodness sakes, it's Seagram's!"
and he'd hold the bottle up
As we gathered around the table for a friendly wassail cup.

And even though that Yuletide scene
goes back so long ago,
It seems like only yesterday—and

Apprehend Captures Blue Ridge Purse at Charles Town

Bletzacker Gives Victor Good Ride

Winner's Payoff Is $9.80; High Bud Finishes Second With McHenry in Third

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 18.—H. G. Bedwell's Apprehend, a 9-year-old son of Apprehension, found heavy going to his liking and won today's Blue Ridge purse, best offering on the Thursday card. The massive gelding, well handled by Jockey Martin Bletzacker, came through on the inside entering the stretch and won by a length and a half over High Bud, owned by John Bosley, jr. Third money went to Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's McHenry, installed the favorite in the last minute betting.

In winning his second straight race over this track, Apprehend returned $9.80 for each $2 investment in his chances and was clocked for the six and a half furlongs in 1:24 2-5. The track was deep and heavy but the weather was ideal for the usual crowd of 5000.

An upset marked the first race The crowd dumped the chief money into the mutuel machines in anticipation of an Easter Rabbit victory, but the 3-year-old, owned by Mrs. J. B. Bond, finished a length behind Mrs. W. B. Casilear's Alseleda in the sprint of four and a half furlongs. Three parts of a length farther back came L. H. Nimkoff's Vivacious to be third in the field of eight of assorted ages.

Jockey Martin Bletzacker rode Alseleda to the front early. He was challenged by Vivacious, shook off that filly and went on to hold Easter Rabbit safe in the final drive. Easter Rabbit was off poorly and had some trouble improving his position along the rail.

Alseleda paid $15.40 and was clocked in 52 seconds.

S. J. Flammia's Queen Meadow, strongly handled by Jockey Buddy Root, escaped crowding that marked the early stages of the second race and drove to a two-length victory in a field of eight going about 4½ furlongs. Carrying an $8.60 price tag, the 4-year-old filly led J. E. Irvine's Jean Lee to the line. The latter was a length and a half in advance of Mrs. E. I. Miller's Webb Foot. Queen Meadow was clocked in 0:53 2-5.

F. W. Wilson's My Baby won the third race, paying $6.60 and completing a $36.40 daily double.

MY BABY, sent to contention boldly on the inside, drew abreast of DONABOY and outstamed the latter while under good handling. Jockey Vessell's foul claim against the winner was not allowed. DONABOY disposed of TOWN CAR to take command, drew out and barely failed to stay with the winner. SUNNY ROSE was allowed to settle into her best stride, came out to improve her position and then faltered. SLUGGER was a forward factor early and weakened.

Daily Double—QUEEN MEADOW and MY BABY Paid $36.40.

MATHORA, a keen forward factor from the beginning, wore down ROLLS ROUGH to take command and held SAMPLER safe in the closing test. SAMPLER was forced to be taken up sharply when in close quarters going to the first turn, came out for racing room on the backstretch and hung right at the close. ROLLS ROUGH set a good early pace and weakened after being displaced. DARTING STAR closed some ground.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:33½. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's ch. g. HIGH BUD set the early pace, was rated when McHENRY took command and closed with good energy. McHENRY displaced HIGH BUD on the backstretch, opened a good lead, but faltered in the closing stages. ROYAL ECHO was hard ridden and had no excuses.

TWO PLY, closest to the pace from the start, responded when placed to pressure and wore down BOB JUNIOR to win going away. BOB JUNIOR came through on the inside at the far turn to take command, but could not stay with the winner. FITZ EDWARD closed some ground. BRAXTON BELL set a good early pace and stopped suddenly. ROYAL WANTON was not a serious factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:33½. Winner, John Bopst's br. m. STUMPTOWN lacked speed for the half, came through on the inside to better his position and closed fastest of all. OVANDO was well placed from the start, took a brief lead and weakened in the final test. REPELLER was in the thick of forward contention early and weakened in the closing test.

Horse Owners Eye Dog Track Returns on Eve of Turf Season

Exceptional Business of Greyhound Races Buoy Hopes; Florida Card Opens Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 18.—Thoroughbred owners usually look down their aristocratic noses at the lowly greyhound race tracks, but this year they scan with mounting optimism the nightly returns from the Broward County Kennel Club.

The horses run Saturday at Tropical Park, and the track owners have been apprehensive about their business, what with the war, much higher State taxes and a new, ironclad no-pass rule.

Now they are drawing at least a moderately deep breath, as the State's first dog track of the season, in suburban Hollywood, sets new records for parimutuel betting.

Whether or not it is a criterion, the track in 14 nights of operation has handled $700,575 in bets, a neat gain over the $615,856 of wagering in the same period of 1940-41.

The higher volume of betting was passed through the machines by smaller crowds—45,803 this year against 52,001 last year. Track operators say this means the non-betting gentry is staying away this year because the club is no longer permitted to broadcast passes to anybody and everybody.

In former years, dog track passes were handed out in corner drug stores and drive-in stands, and if you went to the track an attendant probably would stick a handful of tickets under your windshield wiper. The horse tracks, Tropical and Hialeah Park, weren't quite so liberal, but most anybody could get their passes without much trouble.

The no-pass rule applies at all dog and horse tracks alike. The war has been the cause of the same worry to them all.

But, in one respect, the situations are not parallel. The horse tracks must give up 15 per cent—instead of 10 per cent—of their bets this year to meet an increased State tax, while the take at the dog tracks remains unchanged.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Well Walter Haight, the colt, goes for all the tea in China today. I could have picked a much softer spot, they tell me Quiz Kid is a Kentucky Derby prospect and that College Widow and Market Place are shifty youngsters. I went down to Walter's stall yesterday and he said, "I'm feeling great. That Quiz Kid might outrun me early but I'll pick up that bum in the stretch." He talks just like his namesake. However, he hasn't been able to win when I didn't pick him so today I'm going to put him right on the top of the heap. There's good eating around Charles Town and there's good eating around Shepherdstown. If Mrs. Bill (Shepherdstown Register) Snyder stuffs me with turkey again the track is going to have to install an escalator to get me up to the press box. Jockey Martin Bletzacker had planned to take a job in a defense plant along with Jockeys Chester Walters and Jimmy Ray after the meeting here. However, Victor Noyes has called for him to ride at New Orleans and the popular little fellow is going to be Louisiana-bound on Sunday. Jockey Agent Chick Barton has signed to work in a Hagerstown plant. A local horseman sent a money order for $5 to "Uncle Sam, United States Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.," with this message attached: "Keep smiling, Uncle." Jockey Andy LoTurco, who stands twenty-second on the list of leading riders in this country for 1941, left for his Chicago home before going to New Orleans. LoTurco was slightly injured in a spill here. Racing Secretary Fred Burton and his wife will vacation in Florida after the meeting. Happy Gordon, outrider at the Maryland tracks, was a visitor. After 15 days of racing here, the favorites are batting 33 1-3 per cent. Jockey Jack Collins, hurt here, left for his native McCombs, Miss. Old Gus says, "I'm fixing" to go to Kaintucky." See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—TRY FLYING has done about everything asked and I'm going to give this one an edge in a wide open race. NEVER HOME won here this week and is dangerous. LAST BET was a winner over this track.

Second race—QUESTRE was a surprise winner earlier in the meeting and meets the right kind in this. I see no reason for mistakes. CATHODE is good now and gets in with a feather assignment. SUN SALVADOR will be close if taken off the reserve list.

Third race—ASTERISK will like the off going and promises to make amends for a poor effort last out. SEPLIN and PETIT FOURS are good now and will battle it out if I have overestimated the ability of the top one.

Fourth race—PEP TALK gets the call in this field. Glidewell will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. ROUGH GOING and PITTSBURGH to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—I've guessed WALTER HAIGHT fairly well since he came to the races last spring. It is for reasons stronger than sentimental that I'm picking him. The distance suits and he may be along in time. QUIZ KID is the one to beat. TOP TRANSIT to take care of the others.

Sixth race—TINY TRICK galloped in that last. Moves up to meet these but is fit and honest. BRAZEN HUSSY was outclassed in that last. MY ONE to account for the show award.

Seventh race—BLENETHEL jogged over a somewhat similar track last out and may register here at a good price. YANKEE LAD and BULL TERRIER to take the place and show position.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take LEGAL LIGHT, MINSTREL WIT and GLENBROOM.

Angott Choice In Title Fight With Jenkins

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—The finger is on a couple of guys in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night.

For Lew Jenkins, especially, it's "miss-and-out" as he and Sammy Angott collide over the 15-round route to decide the first undisputed lightweight boxing champion since Lou Ambers was boss.

If the skinny swatter from Sweetwater, Tex., blows this one after his recent sad showings against Bob Montgomery and Red Cochrane, he might as well head back to Texas and apply for his old Army job of shoeing mules.

Angott never has been so disappointing in his few trips to the post in New York. But since all beak-busters know that Pa Knickerbocker's village is the place the sugar grows heaviest, Sammy's the first to admit this is the chance he's been waiting for.

Because they're not sure Jenkins isn't kidding again about serious training stuff, the gambling boys have tabbed Angott a 1 to 2 favorite to take over the top spot, probably by a decision. This corner goes with the underdog in the belief that Jenkins has worked himself into what is very good shape—for him.

Expects $25,000 Gate

Promoter Mike Jacobs expects some 10,000 of the faithful to kick in to a $25,000 pot. Jenkins has the championship blessing of the New York State Athletic Commission for belting Ambers into retirement. Angott, who came up from Washington, Pa., by the way of Louisville, got the title pat on the back from the National Boxing Association after the N. B. A. took its sanction from Ambers for refusing to meet either Sammy or Davey Day while he was the No. 1 boy.

Tomorrow night's festivities are strictly a collision between a concrete chin and a cast-iron fist. Angott boasts the "button" that can take all kinds of explosives. He never has been flattened. He has a rough, tough mauling style of mixing it in close that may give Jenkins as much worry as his income tax.

Lew, definitely, is the greatest lightweight larruper since Benny Leonard, but he needs punching room to let those things go.

Two Rings to Be Used Tonight In Golden Gloves Tournament

Coach Lou Bass, of the Apollo A. C., checks on Bill Barber's weight as he weighs in for the Golden Gloves 38-bout card tonight at Uline's. Barber will meet Arthur Gore

Quarterfinal Round at Uline Arena Expected to Draw Record Attendance

A two-ring setup will be introduced for the first time locally tonight when the ninth annual Golden Gloves Boxing Tournament enters its quarter-final round at Uline's Arena with 38 bouts, 26 novice and 12 senior, at 8:15 o'clock.

History will be made at Uline's when bouts are featured simultaneously in No. 1 and No. 2 rings. Ring No. 1 will be the regular Uline setup, while No. 2 is being installed by the Capital Traction Co.

In the event of a knockout in No. 1 ring the setup will be cleared and the ring vacated until such time as action in No. 2 ring is terminated. This positively will be the final presentation of the two-ring setup here this season, the single ring plan being brought back into use when the Golden Gloves are continued with the semifinals on January 2 and concluded with the finals on January 9.

The largest crowd ever to attend Golden Gloves quarter-finals is expected tonight when big name seniors and popular novices alike square off. The entire four-man staff of District Boxing Commission referees will alternate in handling the bouts, namely: Charley Reynolds, Eddie LaFond, Ray Bowen and Marty Gallagher.

136 Named For '42 Derby At Santa Anita

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 18.—Maintaining high hope that its 1942 meeting would not be called off entirely because of the war, the Los Angeles Turf Club reported today that 136 candidates had been nominated for the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, with Alsab topping the roll of coming 3-year-olds.

A record 141 candidates were nominated for the event last year. The 1942 Derby, at a mile and one eighth, is scheduled February 23.

Winners of three ranking futurities were included in the roll. They were Some Chance, the Belmont winner; Sun Again, Arlington victor, and Alsab of the Washington Park classic.

Five outstanding fillies—Petrify, Ficklebush, Chiquita Mia, Romping Home and Mar-Kell—were among the 27 named.

Movie Magnate Louis B. Mayer listed 12 candidates, while the strong Calumet Farm and William E. Boeing each nominated 8. Milky Way Farm named 5, including Dogpatch and Black Raider.

C. S. Howard's Porter's Cap won the 1941 Derby and finished fourth in the Kentucky Derby. Weights for the event are set at 120 pounds, with a 5-pound allowance for fillies.

Arrangements went ahead at the plant today for a possible opening in mid-January, provided, of course, war conditions permit and Army officials give the necessary go-ahead signal.

Western Meets Gonzaga High

Bethesda Host Today To Eastern

Public School Fives Face Strong Foes; Both Games Set For 3:30 o'Clock

Western and Eastern High quintets, preparing for the opening of the public school title race on January 6, engage powerful foes today in the feature games of scholastic play.

The Red Raiders of Western move in on Gonzaga's hopefuls at 3:30, and Eastern goes up against Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the suburban floor at the same time.

To date Western has turned in the best effort of any team in town. Against George Washington University's potent frosh, they lost by a single point. Western also swamped George Washington High, of Alexandria, while its foe today was bouncing over Greenbelt and bowing to Roosevelt and Coolidge.

Eastern's two games have resulted in easy victories over Friends' School and Greenbelt. The rival Barons lost to Coolidge earlier in the week after winning three straight.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Western at Gonzaga, 3:30.
Eastern at Bethesda-Chevy Chase, 3:30.
Tech at Montgomery Blair, 8 p. m.
Triplett (Va.) at Washington-Lee, 8 p. m.
C. H. M. A. at Woodward, 3:30.

Golf-Ball Sales Hit the Ceiling

GOLF, from Page 29.

All made it plain that the present supply was plentiful, however, and the rush was unwarranted. Many of the requests were for Christmas packages.

The Columbia Club golf shop reported a sale of more than 30 dozen golf balls while Billy Hardy, at Chevy Chase, said he had been "cleaned out of two brands." Wiffy Cox called the downtown sporting goods stores for more after repeated calls from Congressional Club members to lay aside dozen lots at a time.

Harry Graham, manager of the Rock Creek course, sold more than 15 dozen while at the other municipal courses the sale reached like proportions. Allan Burton reported an unusual number of requests at Army and Navy.

Members of other clubs took the news more calmly. Gene Larkin at Woodmont and Tony Sylvester at Bannockburn sold only to the day's golfers and then for immediate use. George Diffenbaugh received the first unusual order just before closing, a request for five dozen from a Kenwood Club member.

Only a few of the golf shops and department stores reported an unusual supply on hand. Most of them have just the usual light winter stock, as golf balls keep at best only at certain temperatures. The wholesalers also reported just usual stocks, as they have received no word from their companies to start rationing the supply, or that normal shipments are not in order.

New York Reports

In New York, the Associated Press reported one of the larger sporting goods houses was completely sold out of golf and tennis balls by noon. Fifteen minutes after the doors opened 300 dozen golf balls had been sold, many in gross lots. The rush started in many department stores before noon following the printed reports that the manufacture of nonessential rubber items might be eliminated.

The United Press reported New York merchants likened the rush on golf balls to the recent run on silk stockings. It was estimated that the number of balls on hand, before the rush, would represent about 15 per cent of a year's consumption. This was speculative, however, as golf balls are manufactured at certain periods.

Army Gets 'Em Tall Nowadays

When Richard Simmons, 18, of Seminole, Okla., tried to enlist, recruiters found he was 6 feet and 7 inches tall, an inch more than regulations permit. They recommended that the Army shouldn't lose the high school football player's 240 pounds of manhood, so the War Department replied "Okay."

Leahy and Gophers Tops in Grid Memoirs

Dooley Recalls Post Mortems of Season; Names Outstanding Sophs of Year

By Eddie Dooley

Famous Football Expert, International News Service

With the football season virtually laid to rest save for the coming bowl games on New Year's Day, a few gridiron postmortems are appropriately in order. What coaches can properly be regarded as having done the best jobs? What teams look most promising for 1942? And who are the sophomores of this season who excelled, and gave promise of being the outstanding players of next fall's campaign? These are the questions which come to mind.

Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame, has been voted the coach who turned in the best job of the year. Football mentors in all parts of the country nominated him almost unanimously for that distinction, and it is obvious that he merited the honor. In the span of a few fleeting months, he brought Notre Dame's battered football fortunes back to the high plane where Knute Rockne had placed them.

He gave the South Bend Institution an unbeaten team, just as he had done for Boston College. And he did this with material that was anything but impressive. But right up with Frank, in my book, must be rated Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, and Homer Norton, of Texas A & M. Bierman's team is the target at which the guns of every western conference eleven are constantly pointed. And Norton started his campaign with a group of players who could hardly tell a football from a pumpkin.

Gophers Play Bad

Bierman turned back Michigan, Northwestern, and all the other teams he faced. Admittedly he gets some pretty fair sized lads to coach, but any football teacher who can hang on to the lead as long as he has, is a brilliant, ingenious and unusual coach.

Norton's Aggies finally took a licking from Texas, but not until the boys from college station had swept through their campaign without a single previous setback.

There were other fine coaches too, but the reason I have not ranked them among the first three is because, in most cases, the cards were stacked in their favor. Dana Bible did a fine piece of work at Texas; Don Faurot, a skillful coach, worked wonders at Missouri; Wallace Wade at Duke and Wally Butts at Georgia did all right too. And no one can kick about Jim Crowley's performance at Fordham, despite the defeat by Pitt. But Leahy, Bierman and Norton led the way.

Let the scribes say what they will about Minnesota winning its championships in pairs, and next year being a poor one for the Gophers, I'll still tag along with them as being one of the best bets for 1942. And I'll ride with Norton's Texas Aggies again too, as the most promising team in the Southwest. On the Coast, California and Oregon State are being counted on for a big season next year.

Fordham Will Be Back

In the East, Fordham will be the dominating power once more, as its crop of understudies to the men who will be graduated is excellent and full of dynamite. Cornell will be better in the Ivy League. Harvard will not be as good as it was this year, theoretically, although Dick Harlow may again work wonders. William and Mary, one of the powerful small teams, will again be dangerous as there are some splendid replacements on the way up.

In the South, Duke, Georgia, Mississippi, and Tulane will pack plenty of power, and will make the headlines. In the West, Michigan stands the best chance of being the top ranking eleven, provided Minnesota falters. Michigan had everything this fall, and needed only a few points in the course of its campaign to make it a wonder team.

When the current season started, about 150 sophomore prospects shown forth brilliantly in the reflected light of their frosh achievements. Of that number comparatively few lived up to expectations. They are the men who, hardened in the crucible of varsity competition, will scintillate next fall.

Indiana Defeats Uclans, 47 to 33

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 18 (AP).—Indiana University handed the University of California at Los Angeles tonight its second straight basketball beating on Hoosier soil. The score was 47 to 33.

Coaching Body To Honor Yost And Zuppke

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 18.—The American Football Coaches Association, which convenes here December 29, will pay tribute to a couple gridiron pioneers, Fielding Yost and Robert C. Zuppke.

Herbert O. (Fritz) Crisler, association president and University of Michigan athletic director, said the National Collegiate Athletic Association, which will meet in Detroit at the same time, would join in a luncheon honoring the veteran coaches on December 31, the final day of the convention.

Yost became director-emeritus of Michigan athletics after serving as University Football Coach and later as Athletic director for 40 years. Zuppke, after a 29-year coaching career at Illinois, resigned at the end of the 1941 season.

Recommendations on rule changes will be considered December 29 when the coaches' rules committee meets. Coach Lou Little of Columbia University is chairman. One of the topics, Crisler said, would be the unlimited substitution rule which was tried for the first time last season.

Crisler declared that coaches seemed to be pleased with the way the rule worked.

Matty Bell, of Southern Methodist University, is slated to succeed Crisler as association president. He is now second vice president. Elmer Layden was named first vice president a year ago but gave up coaching at Notre Dame to become commissioner of the National Professional League.

Viehmeyer's Set of 417 Tops Temple

Rolling a terrific 166 game, Danny Viehmeyer, Style Motors, topped the Temple Minor League at Northeast Temple and, with his high set of 417, helped his quintet to two games from Blue Ribbon Cigars and team highs of 648 and 1745. Bill Heskitt, Camden Tavern, had near highs of 161-415 and his nice rolling was what his mates needed to win three from the Ice Club. Both Wolfe Market and Boveglio Club copped three each from opponents.

Gustafson Has 147

Gus Gustafson, of the American team in the Takoma Duckpin League at Takoma Recreation, and "Bump" Stewart, Takoma Ambulance, had things their own way last night when the former had high game of 147 and the latter top set of 399. Gustafson's scores helped his quintet to team highs with a 613 game and 1733 set.

High Score at Brookland

It was a night of high scores at Brookland Recreation when the Merchants League took to the drives with big Bill Schotter the leading pin punisher with his season record single of 172, which he followed with a 410 set, for DePerini Delicatessen, who lost the odd tilt to Diamond Cab. Rudy Goddard, Rudy's Tavern, posted a 169 game and went on to gain high set honors with his 413 to lead his quint to a sweep over The Tavern and team highs of 647 and 1854, the latter also a season high. The Friars Club and Yuengling's Beer won three games respectfully from Shadid's and Rice's Unity Craftsmen with Wes Miltner's 390 sparking the Yuengling win. Near highs were posted by Eddie Hutchinson with 401 and young Hap Burtner with 393.

6000 to See Britton Fight Red Cochrane

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 18.—Welterweight Champion Freddie Cochrane and Young Bobby Britton, son of a former champion, wound up their training here today and were declared ready to go for their ten-round nontitle battle for charity tomorrow night.

More than 6000 fans were expected to attend the Miami Herald empty stocking fund show to see whether Britton, a home-town boy, has what it takes to put him where his father, Jack Britton, stood in the welterweight division 20 years ago.

Britton is a year younger than the sailor who lifted the crown from Fritzie Zivic last summer, but he will outweigh him about five pounds. He has been fighting since he was 15 years old under the guidance of his father, and never has been knocked out.

His most important victory was a knockout of Lew Jenkins two years ago.

The bout will be Cochrane's first since he joined the Navy soon after he won the title.

Carnegie, Veteran Minor Leaguer, Does Patrol Duty

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 18.—Hard-hitting Ollie Carnegie, outfielder for the Buffalo Bisons of the International League, is still doing patrol duty, but now he's protecting an oil-pump station for Republic Steel Company.

Instead of a fielder's glove and a bat, the slugger is equipped with a .45 Colt revolver as he keeps an eye on one of Buffalo's vital defense plants.

In his late thirties, Carnegie is planning to return to baseball next season and considers his present job an excellent conditioner for the sport.

"This is just the kind of a job a player should have in the off-season—lots of walking. My legs are in shape and when your legs are in shape all it takes is ten days of batting and fielding practice and you're ready to go."

In 11 seasons with the Herd, Carnegie has made approximately 1335 hits and driven in more than 1000 runs, the latter an all-time league record. He received the most valuable player of the league award for 1938.

Contract Bridge

You hold the East cards of today's Olympic deal at an ambitious four-heart contract, and South opens the queen of diamonds. Plan your play so as to take ten tricks; then check with the official solution given below:

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ A J 6 2 ♡ 7 6 2 ◇ 8 7 2 ♣ K 10 9
WEST: ♠ K 7 ♡ 9 8 5 3 ◇ 9 6 4 ♣ A J 4 7
EAST: ♠ Q 10 4 ♡ K Q J 10 ◇ A K 3 ♣ Q 8 3
SOUTH: ♠ 9 8 5 3 ♡ A 4 ◇ Q J 10 5 ♣ 7 6 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 NT.	Pass	3 ♡
Pass	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: ♣ Q ◇

The Solution

East makes four hearts by developing the spade suit to provide a diamond discard in dummy. Declarer is faced with the possibility of losing one trick in each suit. The adverse aces must surely make. The club loser can be avoided if the king lies only once guarded in the South hand. But the chief hope must rest in avoiding the diamond loss.

Owing to the attack by the opening lead, there is not time to force out the ace of trumps and develop the clubs with the idea of discarding the three of diamonds on a possible thirteenth club.

The plans must be, then, to develop the spades in the hope of establishing a third-round winner in the East hand. East, therefore, wins the opening lead and returns a small spade.

North wins the king of spades with the ace and leads another diamond. East wins with the king and is now at the Rubicon. If he hopes to find South with just king, small in clubs, he can lead trumps. If he hopes that North has the spade jack, he should lead a low club to the ace, not risking the club finesse, and lead dummy's spade for the finesse. If this finesse wins, he can cash his last spade and discard dummy's last diamond.

Despite the risk of a third-round club ruff involved in this line of play, it should be selected as the better chance. Played in this fashion, declarer gives up only a spade, a heart and a club for his contract.

Meredith Here To See What Else He Can Do

Burgess Meredith, stage and movie star, who recently made a national tour with the "Fun to Be Free" patriotic pageant, was in Washington last night to see what else he could do to help the country at war.

On tour, he watched the audiences as closely as they had watched him and he said that he saw in St. Louis, the night after war was declared, a change in the people, probably apparent in every section of the United States.

From the build-up for war, within themselves, which Burgess had noticed in the preceding weeks he saw the audience in St. Louis as "grim and determined, completely accepting the situation." On the sponsoring committee were men who had backed Lindbergh in his Atlantic flight.

Prominent in Actors' Equity, Meredith said the profession is lined up in the war effort and can play a vital role. The actor always has been able to say good and bad lines, according to his cue, and "now it is his great privilege to repeat things of value."

He is stopping at the Shoreham Hotel.

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 18.—Speaking to the women of Italy on the occasion of the sixth anniversary of the "Day of Faith," when gold wedding rings were surrendered for the conquest of Ethiopia, Premier Benito Mussolini today warned that "this war will be a long and a hard one" because "it is a war that is changing the destinies of mankind" and "directly or indirectly more than two billion human beings are involved."

He praised the discipline of the Italian women who had accepted with such resignation the tremendous sacrifices imposed on them in their daily life, and he promised his hearers that these sacrifices would not be in vain. Also, he said, they were not as heavy as those imposed on the "brave soldiers of Italy fighting on the steppes of Russia or the dunes of North Africa."

Neutral circles in Rome interpreted the speech as another attempt by Mussolini to eliminate general discontent with conditions by personal intervention. Comments of the general public, however, are far from "satisfactory."

D. C. Property Tax Is Lowest Of Large Cities

The real property tax rate in Washington of $15.75 a thousand remains the lowest in the United States for cities with more than 500,000 population.

Reporting this fact yesterday, the National Municipal League added that real property tax rates and assessed values of American cities remained virtually unchanged this year—a year in which the country's taxpayers saw tremendous rate increases in almost all other forms of taxation.

The average assessed tax rate in 283 cities surveyed increased only 2 cents a $1000 over 1940.

The average assessed value in these cities increased only one-tenth of 1 per cent, larger cities showing a decrease of six-tenths of 1 per cent and smaller cities an average increase of about 1 per cent.

The survey disclosed also that Atlantic City, N. J., for the third consecutive year, had the highest adjusted property tax rate in the land—$59.80 a thousand. This was 66 cents under Atlantic City's 1940 rate.

Montgomery, Ala., with an adjusted rate of $8.13, had the country's lowest rate.

The survey showed that each of these cities had the highest adjusted tax rate in its population group: Five hundred thousand or over, Boston, $39.60; 300,000 to 500,000, Newark, N. J., $57.50; 100,000 to 300,000, New Bedford, Mass., $46.80; 50,000 to 100,000, Atlantic City, N. J., $59.80; 30,000 to 50,000, Chelsea, Mass., $49.80.

The lowest rates were: Five hundred thousand or over, Washington, D. C., $15.75; 300,000 to 500,000 Cincinnati, $17.17; 100,000 to 300,000, Birmingham, Ala., $10.80; 50,000 to 100,000, Montgomery, Ala., $8.13; 30,000 to 50,000, Danville, Va., $11.10.

Retail Sales Continue Rise

Washington department store sales in the week ended December 13 continued at a record pace, rising 11 per cent above the volume for the same week last year. The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond added that cumulative sales here in the four-week period ended December 13 were 13 per cent heavier than in the same period last year.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole showed a gain of 7 per cent in retail sales during the latest week and a 12 per cent increase for the four-week period.

W. R. & E. Votes $5 Extra

Directors of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. have declared an extra dividend of $5 a share on common stock, bringing total payments for the year to $45. Previously, four quarterly dividends of $10 a share had been declared this year on the securities, most of which are owned by North American Co., giant utility holding company. The regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on W. R. & E. preferred stock also was declared. The extra and regular disbursements are payable December 29, to holders of record December 23.

Potomac Electric Power Co. has declared regular quarterly dividends on preferred stock as follows: $1.50 a share on the 6 per cent and $1.37 a share on the 5½ per cent. Both are payable March 2 to holders of record February 16.

Directors of the Liberty National Bank have voted a special dividend of $1 a share in addition to the regular $3.50 on capital stock both payable December 31 to holders of record December 24.

Directors of the Bank of Bethesda have voted an extra dividend of 1 per cent in addition to the regular semiannual dividend of 1½ per cent on capital stock, payable December 27 to holders of record December 17.

Thornton W. Owen was elected president of Washington Chapter, Society of Residential Appraisers, at the annual meeting in the Raleigh Hotel. Mr. Owen, a partner of Thomas J. Owen & Son and a director of the Perpetual Building Association succeeds Clarence E. Kefauver.

F. Willson Camp will serve as vice president during the coming year while R. Lee Baxter was re-elected secretary-treasurer. New directors named were Edwin L. McAleer, Charles E. Phillips, J. A. Weinberg, jr., and F. George Clendaniel. Past Presidents Wilfred H. Blanz and C. E. Kefauver will serve ex-officio on the board.

The report of the secretary revealed that the chapter, now entering its fourth year, has a membership of 81. Principal speaker at Tuesday night's meeting was Dr. Charles Hardy of the Brookings Institute who gave an outline of inflationary effects on real estate values.

D. C. Business Briefs

Appointment of Jay Jefferson Miller, vice president and director of The Hecht Co. in Baltimore, as a technical expert in the OPA textile, leather and apparel section was announced yesterday. Miller will devote full time to the post, it was announced, and severed his connections with The Hecht Co. for the duration of his Government employment.

The North America Companies' insurance group will say "Merry Christmas" to its employes now serving in the armed forces of the United States, Great Britain and Canada, with a special holiday bonus check for $50. This action was announced yesterday by Charles F. Holden, general manager of the Washington office.

New York Cotton

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—Trading on cotton futures was brisk in restraint today by price ceiling complexities, the market closing 40 cents a bale higher to 10 cents lower.

Light hedging and professional selling was absorbed by trade and mill demands. Interests who ordinarily take an active interest in the market withdrew pending some clarification of the proposed price-fixing operations in the textile field.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. How does the Government feel about people who redeem their Defense Savings Bonds?

A. If the circumstances make it necessary for people to draw on the savings represented by the money they have loaned to the Government for national defense, that is their privilege in the purely voluntary defense savings effort, but of course you can't spend your bond and have it, too.

Q. May the owner of a Defense Savings Bond sell it or give it away?

A. No. Defense Savings Bonds are not transferable. Owners are permitted to redeem them prior to maturity in case they want or need to do so.

Note—To buy Defense Bonds and Stamps, go to the nearest post office, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also stamps are now on sale at retail stores.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP).—With trade volume sharply reduced, grain prices fluctuated irregularly and nervously today in a market which dealers said was in a virtual stalemate as a result of indirect governmental control of prices.

While the Government has placed no limits on wheat and corn prices other than the usual restrictions prohibiting daily fluctuations of more than 5 cents, traders said wartime controls now in effect in connection with the loan program amount to a virtual floor and ceiling on the market, at least for the time being.

Wheat closed ⅛ off to ⅛ up compared with yesterday, December, $1.23⅛; May, $1.26⅛@$1.26; corn unchanged to ⅛ lower, December, 78⅛; May, 83⅜@83½; oats unchanged to ⅛ up; rye, ⅜@⅝ down; soybeans, ¼ off to ⅝ higher; lard unchanged at ceiling levels.

Stocks Rally In Late Trade After Plunge

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18.—Signs the stock market might be getting its back against the wall appeared today, but they were not sufficient to prevent an assortment of leaders from dipping to new lows for more than three years.

Losses ranged from fractions to better than 4 points at the worst. Late comeback tendencies were shown in coppers, rails, a few rubbers and steels and extreme declines were reduced in many cases at the close without altering the general downtrend.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .4 of a point at 36, another new bottom since April, 1938. Frequent bursts of tax selling put the day's turnover at 1,313,400 shares, largest in a week. It compared with 1,223,500 Wednesday.

War Reports Mixed

Wall Street still found nothing particularly bullish in either the war news or the business outlook at home. Reports from the battle fronts of Libya, Russia and the Philippines were hopeful, but offset to a degree by fears of Japanese successes in Hongkong and the Malayan Peninsula with Singapore as the ultimate objective.

Heartening in the midst of other cloudy happenings was the sale of a Stock Exchange seat at $25,000, up $6,000 from a 43-year low.

Among the day's principal share losers were American Telephone, off 3⅜; J. I. Case 3, Johns-Manville 2, Sears Roebuck 1¾ and Allied Chemical 2.

Conceding as much as 1 or so were General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Goodyear, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, American Can, Western Union, du Pont, Texas Co., Standard Oil (N. J.) and Eastman Kodak.

Small advances were retained by Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, Bethlehem Steel Youngstown Sheet, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Phelps Dodge, Montgomery Ward, Goodrich, Goodyear and U. S. Rubber. Some of these revived after stepping into the "new low" division.

Rails Hold Firm

Rails managed to hold their own despite a more than seasonal drop in last week's freight loadings.

Bonds and commodities were mixed. At Chicago wheat was off ⅛ of a cent a bushel to up ⅜, corn unchanged to down ¾ and hogs as much as 25 cents lower. Cotton ended up 40 cents a bale to down 10 cents.

Moderately in arrears in the curb were Gulf Oil, Humble Oil, American Cyanamid "B," Bell Aircraft and Creole Petroleum. Brewster Aero, Sherwin Williams and Aluminum of America were a trifle higher. Volume here was around 292,000 shares versus 264,000 yesterday.

Federal Reserve Buys 43 Million in U. S. Bonds

The Federal Reserve Board disclosed yesterday that the Federal reserve system bought 43 million dollars worth of Government and Government-guaranteed securities during the week ended December 17 in order to minimize fluctuations in their market prices.

Although the purchases were given for a week's time, it was understood that all the purchases were made early in the week, and buying by either the Federal reserve system or the Treasury was reduced or stopped later in the week. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau explained recently that some buying was necessary after the outbreak of war in order to maintain "an orderly market," but he said that generally the values of Government securities had held up extremely well.

The board also said that lendable excess reserves of banks declined $750,000,000 to a total of $3,090,000,000, the lowest total in recent years. The reduction was caused by the withdrawal of money from the banks to buy a recent issue of $1,500,000,000 of new Treasury bonds.

Crop Output Reported Near Record in U. S.

In its final report of the season, the Agriculture Department said yesterday that aggregate production of all crops this year was of a near-record volume, although the harvested acreage was 7 per cent smaller than the 1932 peak acreage.

Acre yields, the department reported, were the highest on record, averaging 2 per cent above 1940 and 21 per cent above the 1923-32 or pre-drought average. Losses from crop failures were said to have been the lowest in more than ten years.

This year's total production of all crops was said to be 11 per cent in excess of the 1923-32 average. In comparison, aggregate production last year was 8 per cent above the pre-drought level, while the highest output—in 1937—was 12.6 per cent above that level.

The 1941 harvest included reduced crop of cotton and tobacco and slightly below average crops of potatoes and sweet potatoes, but large production of nearly all other groups of crops. Only five cotton crops in 30 years have been smaller, but tobacco was only moderately below average.

Total grain production was larger than in other seasons since 1920. New production records were established for hay and forage crops as a group, for fruits and for vegetables other than potatoes and sweet potatoes.

The list of individual crops which exceeded previous production records included barley, grain sorghums, sweet sorghum for forage, beans, soybeans, oranges, the principal vegetables grown for canning, carrots, celery and a few other vegetables for the fresh market.

The corn crop totaling 2,672,541,000 bushels compared with 2,460,624,000 last year, was the largest since 1932. The wheat crop of 945,937,000 bushels was the largest since 1919. Production last year totaled 812,374,000. Rice production was within 1 or 2 per cent of the record crop, while the flaxseed crop was the largest since 1902 and the second largest on record. The peanut crop was smaller than that of last year, but larger than the crops of other years.

Emergency Price Ceiling Fixed on Wool

The Office of Price Administration yesterday issued an emergency price ceiling on raw wool, wool tops and wool yarn, prohibiting sale of such material at prices higher than levels prevailing between October 1 and December 6.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson said he considered the ceiling necessary to protect civilians against increases in the cost of clothing, blankets and other essential articles.

About 60 per cent of wool consumed in the United States this year is being imported, principally from South America, Australia and South Africa. The war in the Pacific is threatening curtailment of these imports, Henderson said, and, in addition, increasing demands on the available supply will be made by the armed forces.

The emergency schedule applies to all forms of selling except retail sale of wool yarns.

Senate Extends Soil Conservation, Loan Acts

The Senate completed legislative action yesterday on a bill extending for five years the operation of the soil conservation and commodity loan acts.

Edible peanuts were added to commodities on which 85 per cent parity loans could be made.

The legislation would continue 500 million dollars yearly in soil conservation payments to farmers and would keep in effect the Commodity Loan Act, which puts a floor under agricultural prices.

'Blocked' Income Not Taxable, Treasury Rules

The Treasury ruled yesterday that Americans don't have to pay United States income tax on British income which can't be spent.

Certain types of income to foreigners in England is held in "blocked accounts" in banks and cannot be spent. The Treasury said that this type of income does not constitute taxable income.

However, in certain cases when money may be taken out of a "blocked account" the income is taxable in this country whether it has actually been withdrawn or not. In these cases the money usually can be spent only in the purchase of British government bonds, in which instance only the interest from the bonds is taxable in this country.

The Treasury also said that the valuation of this type of British income should be at "official exchange rate," which is a little more than four United States dollars to a British pound.

Net of 49 Insurance Firms Tops 5 Billion

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 18 (AP).—The 49 insurance companies with home offices in Connecticut had an income of $5,046,535,758 during 1940, an increase of $164,472,008 over 1939, State Insurance Commissioner John C. Blackall reported today.

The amount paid to policyholders was $2,401,805,521, a gain of $32,005,532, while premiums collected totaled $3,346,165,383, a jump of $80,549,888.

Higher Prices Blamed as Fur Sales Slump

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 18 (AP).—The New York fur industry has struck a temporary stalemate, informed sources said today, with hundreds of thousands of pelts piling up without buyers at the prices asked.

Through July, August and September, the finished fur business underwent a tremendous boom, with everybody from trapper and fur farmer to manufacturer and retailer of the finished garment optimistic as the the future, these sources said.

Then, suddenly and unexpectedly, on October 1, when the new Federal tax on fur garments went into effect, buying ceased abruptly. Warm weather through the first half of December added a complication, with the war declarations further muddling the situation.

"There are hundreds of thousands of furs available in the market here and elsewhere," said the editor of a fur trade journal, "but the asking prices must be adjusted in line with those prevailing a year ago before the pelts can be moved to the trade. Based on the enthusiastic orders of the three-month splurge prior to October 1, the producers are holding the pelts at prices the manufacturers just can't see and are going to have to sell at prices existing a year ago before the accumulation can begin to move. November and December have seen some garments moved at reduced prices, but there still is a lot to sell and liquidate before the trade will be in a position to go back into the skin market.

"Imposition of the 10 per cent tax and huge advance buying left manufacturers with large inventories of skins, and the retailers with coats when the buying stopped October 1."

Bond's Will Pay Yuletide Bonus

Bond Stores, Inc., retailers of men's wear, will distribute approximately $600,000 in Christmas bonuses to 9131 employes, including those in Washington. Vice President Barney Rubens stated that the bonuses, based on merit and length of service, will range from 2 to 4 per cent of annual salaries and will be paid in Defense Savings Bonds. Store employes' bonuses will be based on weekly salaries.

In addition, directors voted the equivalent of two weeks' salaries to employes who are in the armed services.

Listen! with Glynn

Granted that—in view of recent events—the spirit of peace on earth and good will toward men may be a little hard to come by this year, there still seems little reason why Americans, with all their remaining blessings, should lose perspective and forget the beautiful traditions which annually are observed during the Christmas season.

And so, this is just a small reminder that despite all the troublous reports which you hear on your radio these days, there is still much time reserved for some of the pleasanter things having to do with the Christmas tradition.

Tonight, for instance, on WJSV, Kate Smith's Hour is to present a play, "The Small One," based on the first Christmas. It's a repeat performance of the play originally presented last Christmas season on the same program, and it's a story about a boy and his donkey, about to be sold to the tanners when it was bought by a couple named Mary and Joseph, who are setting out for a town called Bethlehem. The program is also to feature the singing of Christmas carols, with Kate doing "Silent Night."

Another veteran performer, name of Shirley Temple, assisted by a likely actor known as Lionel Barrymore, is to do her bit for the Christmas spirit by appearing at 10:30 p. m. in a specially written play called "Christmas for Two."

And, speaking of Christmas, have you remembered the WJSV "They Need Shoes" fund?

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

Small Business' Survival Held Vital to U. S.

By the Associated Press

Small business, striving to survive transition from peacetime to a war economy, was described by two Government officials yesterday as vital to military operations and to the future welfare of the Nation.

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and C. C. Fichtner, chief of regional economy of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, told a Senate committee studying small business problems that they favored emergency action to assist such businesses.

Discussing the human aspects of the problem, McNutt said that "the well being of the industrial worker in small enterprise is dependent upon our ingenuity in maintaining full employment during the war period."

He added that if the country followed this year a "path which we now seem to be treading and the course which was followed by England, we enter a period of priorities and bottlenecks, of tremendous shifts from civilian to military employment. The readjustment will be drastic and many people will suffer in the process."

Policy Indorsed

Fichtner testified that small business accounted for a large proportion of the number of establishments in the country, and added:

"The policy of extending defense production to small manufacturers is indorsed by the Department of Commerce on more grounds than the mere keeping of these businesses alive. The more manufacturers who can be brought into defense production, the more effective will be the war effort."

Frederick A. Virkus, president of the Illinois Division of the National Small Business Men's Association, recommended establishment of a new Federal agency to handle distribution of materials on the basis of needs of different industries.

Seedman Asks Legislation

He declared that survival of industries which could not fit into the armament program was "perhaps only second in importance to the armament program itself."

George Seedman, president of the American business Congress, New York City, advocated legislation to protect the capital investment of small industries unable to obtain war contracts. He asserted that Army and Navy procurement officials did not favor subcontracts to little plants and were "fighting it." A new department of procurement, he said, would help solve the problem.

Saying he represented an industry with 60,000 employes, J. W. Mollica, director of the National Sign Association, told the committee that most contracts for lighting equipment were going to big industries. He added that small plants would be closed soon unless they were helped.

'Zoo's Who' Delights Both Young and Old

"Gee! I like this picture of the seal. See, mother, he's winking at me."

This remark, from 9-year-old Maida Yates, of 6208 Thirty-first Street Northwest, was typical of the friendly greeting Washington readers had for "Zoo's Who in the Nation's Capital," new picture-poetry guide to the National Zoo published by The Post.

Maida's mother, Mrs. J. R. Yates, agreed that the seal was indeed winking. "Children should be able to use the book with their school work," she commented. Little Maida laughed and read a verse under the picture:

And daily growing bigger;
Too much fish (his favorite dish)
Has sabotaged his figger."

And so it went yesterday with people young and old expressing their interest in the 32-page book published at the request of readers who enjoyed the series of animal photographs and poems carried in The Post earlier this year.

Mrs. Jeanne Jones, of Arlington, Va., took a fancy to the sea lion, calling him "a sweetie-pie," while Miss Kathryn Leannarda, a stenographer, of 124 Tenth Street Northeast, said, "this is the cutest thing! The pictures really are unusual."

Mrs. Clara Wright Smith, supervisor of the District Council of Defense information booths, thought the cheeta was "most attractive."

"The book will make a marvelous Christmas present," she said. "I should think any child would love to have one."

The verses are by Post Staff Writer Gerald Gross, who terms himself "a composer of dubious doggerel," and the photographs are by members of The Post photographic staff. The book is on sale at The Post counter, the Zoo, Hecht's, Woodward & Lothrop's, Lansburgh's, Kann's, Brentano's Sears Roebuck and other stores and book shops throughout the city.

Syria Lines Up With U.S., Allies

Copyright by New York Times

Damascus, Dec. 18.—"Syria stands unreservedly alongside America and her allies in the conflict which has broken out in the Far East," the president of the Syrian republic, Sheikh Taj Ed Din Hassani, said today. Arabs generally, and Syrians particularly, he said, would never forget the generous hospitality and kindness accorded them by America.

"We associate ourselves heart, soul and to the full of our resources with the efforts of the United States to liberate humanity from the forces of evil and restore their liberties to the countries robbed of them."
